ROSING SELECTED

As the Democratic Candidate For Governor.

Ringing Declaration of Principles Adopted.

DEMOCRATIC STATE TICKET.

For Governor—L. A. Rosing, Cannon Falls.
For Lieutenant Governor—Robert. A. Smith, St. Paul.
For Secretary of State—Spurgeon Odell, Marshall, Lyon County.
State Auditor—A. G. Leick, Owatonna.
Attorney General—Frank D. Larrabee, Minneapolis.
State Treasurer—Joseph D. Meyers, Little Falls.
Clerk of Supreme Court—George P. Jones, Rock County.
Railroad Commissioner—Maj. J. M. Bowler, Hennepin County.

Minneapolis, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The mantle of John Lind has fallen on the shoulders of his lieutenant, Leonard A. Rosing, of Cannon Falls, who was yesterday afternoon nominated for governor by the Democratic state convention held at the exposition building in this city.

The broad shoulders of Rosing caught and held the threatened Lind landslide, turning it into a Rosing avalanche, and the standard-bearer of the party during three state elections, over whom an unasked and undesired nomination has been hanging for some time, can now rest in peace again.

The convention lacked practically all of the elements of interest that had been anticipated. No other candidate aside from Rosing made any great showing. Next to him the name of Charles O. Baldwin, of Duluth, aroused greatest enthusiasm and had more effect, but it was withdrawn, and finally the nomination went to Rosing without a ballot and without a dissenting voice. The man that has labored in behalf of others will now have a chance for himself.

St. Louis county and several neighboring counties stood for Senator Baldwin until it was clear that a landslide to Rosing was in progress, when, in the interests of harmony, the name of the Duluth man, as well as the names of the other men mentioned, was withdrawn.

Frank D. Larrabee, of Minneapolis, and John Lind, of the same city, were the only other men nominated. The name of Lind was not brought before the convention as a nominee until late in the call of counties, when most of them had declared for Rosing. It was then too late for the landslide to take place. Had it been brought forth early in the list, the avalanche of Lind sentiment might have carried away the plans of those who had sought to prevent placing the party in the ridiculous position of nominating him under the circumstances.

A feature of the convention was the eloquent speech of Thomas J. McKeen, of Duluth, in which he placed the name of Senator Baldwin before the convention. He made an excellent impression on the delegates, and after he had spoken, many inquiries were heard about the hall regarding him.

As stated in The Herald yesterday, the preliminary meeting of the conven-

MOST ENCOURAGING

Is the News From the Palace Concerning Condition of King Edward.

Improvement Is Most Marked and Physicians' Bulletins Are Cheerful.

London, June 26.—The following bulletin of the king's physicians was posted at Buckingham palace at 6:15 p. m.:

"His majesty passed a good day and has taken nourishment well. He is less weak and his temperature is now normal."

London, June 26.—10:06 a. m.—The Duke of Connaught called at Buckingham palace this morning at 9:30 o'clock. Later he said: "The news concerning the king this morning is most encouraging. The king's pulse and temperature are normal, and his condition on the whole is most satisfactory."

London, June 26.—The official bulletin issued by the physicians on the condition of King Edward, issued at 10:15 o'clock this morning, is as follows:

"His majesty had a better night and has had some refreshing sleep. He has improved in all respects. His constitutional condition is quite favorable and the state of his wound also is satisfactory."

London, June 26—2:16 p. m.—The following bulletin was issued from Buckingham palace at 2 o'clock this afternoon: "The king's condition still remains satisfactory."

London, June 26.—4:43 p. m.—At 4:30 p. m. it was said at the palace that King Edward continued to make favorable progress.

London, June 26.—11:38 a. m.—King Edward's progress in convalescence occasions the greatest satisfaction in all official circles.

His majesty is already displaying the greatest interest in all public questions and is expressing his gratitude over the evidences of the world's solicitude by opening a number of telegrams with his own hands, as reported in these dispatches last night.

This action excited him slightly, caused some restlessness during the night, and aroused some trifling solicitude on the part of attendant doctors.

All this was really unimportant, as his majesty soon quieted down and, on the whole, rested satisfactorily.

Improvement in the king's condition this morning is the most marked point, and the absolute sincerity of every bulletin issued should prevent the public from heeding these wild rumors. His majesty is suffering from perityphilitis and nothing else. Unfortunately, the symptoms of perityphilitis may be entirely masked, and it was that that absolutely prevented the necessity of an operation from being apparent until yesterday."

The Lancet declares there was no symptom of malignancy in the king's case.

New York, June 26.—Many people are busily spreading abroad a statement that King Edward is suffering from cancer, says a Herald dispatch from London. The reason, no doubt, is found in the fact that the late Empress Frederick of Germany, elder sister of his majesty and of the duke of Saxe-Coburg, his young brother, fell victims to this disease. The doctors in attendance upon his majesty state absolutely and emphatically that there is not the slightest trace of cancer or of any other form of malignant growth.

THE KING'S CHANCES

Of Life as Figured By Dr. John Murphy.

New York, June 26.—Dr. John B. Murphy, of Chicago, dean of the faculty of Rush medical college, has telegraphed to the New York Medical Journal the following statement regarding King Edward:

The official bulletins are very vague and indefinite as the doctors do not state whether the perityphiltic abscess was due to appendicitis, but the clinical course for five days preceding the operation does not correspond with that inference. If it be an appendical perityphilitis opened and drained with no attempt at removal of the appendix, his chances of recovery, allowing for his age and mode of living should be 97 per cent. Should it be a gangrene of a small area of the caecum from a periaphendical abscess his chances of recovery should be good unless the infection be very virulent; one would infer from the mild symptoms the day previous to the operation that it was not violent. If the perityphilitic abscess be from a perforating ulcer of the caecum, the prognosis is more grave for these perforating ulcers are grave in themselves, particularly the tubercular. If the perforation occurred through a malignant ulcer his chances of recovery would be very meagre, as a desection of the caecum would be demanded; this is such a long and grave operation that he could scarcely withstand it as it would involve an immediate risk of 40 to 45 per cent. The assumption that the abscess is of appendicteal origin is the most logical from his symptoms of pain and syncope on the fifth or sixth day preceding the operation. There was every reason for his physicians withholding from the public as long as possible. If the diagnosis of appendicitis had been made early it is probable the operation would have been performed immediately as the concensus opinion of American medical and surgical profession is that the immediate operation i. e., the operation within the first twenty-four hours after the inset of symptoms gives the best results, and subjects the patients to the least risk. There is a unanimity of opinion in the profession that no one, no matter how familiar with the disease is able to predict from the early symptoms what will be the subsequent course of the disease. It is therefore incumbent upon the profession to operate early to avoid the probability of later and most dangerouh patheologic conditions. Medical treatment is uncertain, inefficient and hazardous and thousands of lives have been sacrificed by this method of treatment. In Chicago alone in the last three years there have been 32 deaths from appendicitis. What a collossal crime. What an indulgent and forbearing public to tolerate such results from the medical profession. On this basis there should be no perityphitis of appenditicul origin as all would be operated on before that stage.

COMPLETE RECOVERY

Of the King Predicted By Medical Journal.

London, June 26.—The British Medical Journal says: "Should the king's symptoms pursue the course they have hitherto followed, there is good reason to hope for his majesty's restoration to health. Owing to the nature of the affection and the character of the dressings used, it is inevitable that his convalescence should be somewhat prolonged, but we believe if no complications arise that there is no reason to fear his recovery will not be complete.

"The condition of the parts made clear at the operation was such as to assure the surgeons that the abscess was due to one of those unexplained inflammations which occur with remarkable frequency in the neighborhood of the vermiform appendix, and that it was not due to any organic disease of a more serious nature or to any malignant growth, as rumor has suggested.

"Up to the present there is no indication of the occurrence of any complication, and should none arise his majesty may live for many years."

SITUATION IS CRITICAL

Government Forces of Venezuela Have Again Been Defeated, Which Greatly Complicates the Position of President Castro.

Port of Spain, Island of Trinidad, June 26.—The Venezuelan government forces have been defeated again near Urica, in the state of Cuman, by the rearguard of Gen. Matos Rivy's army. Deserters and fugitives are entering Cumana and Barcelona by the hundreds. Among them is Garido, son of the war minister. The new disaster complicates Gen. Castro's position in Barcelona, the headquarters of President Castro's largest army. Gen. Velutini, the chief commander, quarrels daily with Gen. Castro (who is a brother of the president), and he will abandon the command today. The situation is more than critical.

The United States vice consul, Juan A. Orsini, has left Carupano for Trinidad. His life was daily menaced by soldiers for having tried to protect the interests of French citizens, he being also consul for France.

OHIO LAWS ARE INVALID

It Is Thought Likely a Special Session of the Legislature Will Have to Be Called Very Soon.

Columbus, Ohio, June 26.—An extra session of the Ohio legislature now seems certain, according to the opinion of certain state officials. The supreme court during the present week has held a number of important laws to be invalid.

Decisions handed down today held the Cleveland city government to be unconstitutional, and also a special law enacted for the city of Toledo, taking the control of the police out of Mayor Jones' hands. The court in the Trauger case directs Governor Nash to appoint a lieutenant governor. Lieutenant Governor Nippert was appointed probate judge of Hamilton county, and President pro tem. Archer of the senate was supposed to succeed the lieutenant governor. The contention of Trauger that there was a vacancy in the office is sustained.

The court sustained the validity of the Royer act, which limits the jurisdiction of the supreme court to a certain class of cases and takes away 95 per cent of its jurisdiction in appeal cases.

On Tuesday the court held the special salary laws for county officers to be unconstitutional, so that now things in the cities named, as well as in 42 of the 88 counties, are left in a chaotic state.

THREE HUNDRED HOMELESS

Mercur, Utah, June 26.—Three hundred persons are homeless as the result of the fire that yesterday destroyed the entire business portion of Mercur, the great cyanide gold camp, together with fifty cottages. The fire was caused by an explosion of gasoline in the Oquirrh hotel. The Union Mercantile company whose loss is placed at $60,000, was the heaviest loser. The losses on other business houses range from $500 to $15,000.

PRAYERS FOR KING

At Hour When Coronation Was to Have Occurred---Services at St. Paul's.

London, June 26.—At the hour when the king should have been crowned a great and distinguished gathering, almost identical with that which would have sat in Westminster abbey, gathered in St. Paul's cathedral. The approaches to the cathedral were lined by silent throngs, through which drove peers and peeresses, colonial premiers, foreign envoys, ambassadors and members of the house of commons, all in somber clothes. In the chancel were Joseph H. Choate, the United States ambassador, and Mrs. Choate, Henry White, secretary of the embassy, and Mrs. White; John R. Carter, second secretary of the embassy, and Mrs. Carter; Whitelaw Reid, the special ambassador of the United States to the coronation, and Mrs. Reid; Mr. and Mrs. J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., and the leading members of the nobility. In the nave about 1000 of the Westminster abbey ticket-holders, mainly women, were seated.

Shortly before noon the big western doors were swung open, sunlight streamed in, and the duke of Cambridge, leaning heavily on the arm of an equerry, walked to the chancel.

As 12 o'clock struck there arose from the far end of the nave the clear notes of the opening sentences of the litany, chanted by four of the cathedral clergy. Their tones were in such unison that they seemed to emanate from one powerful voice. The choir took up the responses. At each supplication the procession, with the choir at its head, advanced a few steps and then stood still until the response was completed. Through the kneeling congregation the choir advanced to the chancel steps. A score of the clergy followed, and behind them were ten bishops in gorgeous robes. Then came the Most Rev. William Dalrymple MacLagan, the archbishop of York; the Most Rev. Frederick Temple, the archbishop of Canterbury, and the lord mayor, Sir Joseph C. Dymsdale, the corporation, in full state, bringing up the rear. With evident feeling the choir sang the three psalms of intercession, after which the Rt. Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, bishop of Stepney, read the lesson, Isaiah 38:10: "I said in the cutting off of my days, I shall go to the gates of the grave: I am deprived of the residue of my years."

The Rt. Rev. Arthur F. W. Ingram, bishop of London, from the altar steps, read the prayers: "O, Lord, save the king." His voice rang out to the furthermost recess of the dome and brought a whole-souled response from the choir and the congregation.

The anthem and the singing of the hymn, "Thine arm, O Lord, in days of old was strong to heal and save," and Psalm 51, concluded the short service, whereupon the bishop of London, surrounded by the archbishops and bishops, from the altar steps impressively pronounced the benediction.

For a few moments complete silence reigned and all heads were bowed in prayer, after which the almost blind archbishop of Canterbury was carefully led down the steps, the procession reformed and the congregation went out into the sunlight, gladly discussing the wording of the latest bulletin from Buckingham palace.

Simultaneously a similar service was conducted at St. Margaret's church, Westminster. It was largely attended by cabinet ministers, peers and members of the house of commons and was concluded with singing "God Save the King."

From India, Australia and Africa, everywhere where Britons congregated telegrams announce the holding of impressive, supplicatory services.

MAY NEVER BE CROWNED.

Some Talk of Foregoing the Unnecessary Ceremony.

New York, June 26.—People are asking, says the London correspondent of the Herald, whether when his majesty recovers sufficiently to bear the fatigues of the coronation ceremony, preparations for it will be made on so elaborate a scale as has just been the case.

It has been pointed out that owners of stands and tradesmen of all descriptions have been so severely hit by the postponement of the coronation ceremonies that they will be likely to evince some hesitation in making preparations on a large scale again.

There really is not the slightest necessity for the king to be crowned at all. It is quite conceivable that his majesty will decide to forego the ceremony. No definite information can be given at the moment, but such an abandonment has received some consideration.

Inside Westminster Abbey everything remains for the present in the condition in which it was prepared. The abbey has been locked up and it will be kept closed in its present condition. No one beyond those immediately concerned will be admitted.

The Grand Duke Michael of Russia and some foreign princes who are related to the royal family were to have left for the continent yesterday, but received messages from the Prince of Wales asking them to defer their departure for a few days. It is possible to place two constructions upon this request, one of which is that the king's recovery is expected imediately.

The gala performance at the opera set for next Monday night has been given up. The command comes from the lord chamberlain, said Neil Forsyth, the manager of the Royal opera house.

"Every seat and box were engaged at special prices and you can imagine what would be the work of returning the money. The checks for the bookings for Monday night alone amounted to well over $100,000. The cheapest seats in the house were guinea seats in the gallery, all of which were taken weeks ago."

King Edward saw several members of his family during the morning. The queen remained at the palace, but the Princess Victoria drove out this morning.

In most of the churches throughout the land today the services which were to commemorate the coronation of King Edward are taking place in the changed form of intercessory services.

Premiums demanded at Lloyds for insuring King Edward's life are very high. The figure quoted for insurance to the end of the current month is about $160 for $500, while for policies covering a risk until the end of July about $265 per $500 is asked.

YALE VS. HARVARD

Thousands Gather to See the Annual Regatta.

Harvard Wins Four-Oared Race With Ease.

New London, Conn., June 26.—The Harvard crew won the four-oared race. It was rowed over a 2-mile course, Yale having the west course and Harvard the east. The start was made at 2.44 4-5.

Harvard appeared to take the lead immediately by half a length, rowing a swift stroke and splashing considerably at first. Yale was also rowing speedily, probably 36. Half way to the mile flag Harvard had increased her lead until it became a length. Both crews were rowing collectively, although Yale splashed on recovery.

At the half-mile flag Harvard led the blue by two good lengths, although Yale seemed pulling up a bit just as they passed the half mile. The crews had reduced their stroke. Harvard rowing 32, while Yale, still splashing, was rowing about 34.

Approaching the mile post Harvard still maintained her lead, but had to fight for every inch of it. At the mile flag Harvard had gained, however, and was fully three lengths ahead of Yale. The time for the mile was 5:46.

At the mile and half Harvard was leading about three lengths, Yale splashing considerably.

A quarter mile from the finish Harvard led by three lengths, Yale quickening her stroke to 38. An eighth of a mile from the finish Harvard was three and a half lengths ahead, rowing easily. Harvard wins. Official time: Harvard, 11:19½; Yale, 11:25½.

New London, Conn., June 26.—The thousands of boating enthusiasts who spent the night in this old whaling town, awakened to find the weather conditions decidedly unpromising for the Yale-Harvard regatta. Daybreak brought a sky overcast and a drizzling rain. The outlook was most discouraging. The early morning also developed a high wind from the southwest which fretted the waters of the Thames near its mouth in unpropitious style.

At 9 a. m., however, conditions looked up a bit. The sun broke through the clouds and finally dispelled most of them, although the wind was altogether too high to please those who wished the races rowed today.

As the forenoon wore on the conditions at the finish line near the drawbridge improved slightly. The wind drew around out of the southwest and at 10:30 was coming briskly out of the northwest. This wind blew directly across the course and while the quarter from which it came promised better things later in the day, theresult of a westerly wind on the river was as dangerous from the standpoint of oarsmen in an eight-oared racing shell. With conditions improving the rowing experts predicted good water in the afternoon, but the morning forecast of the local weather bureau was: "Occasional showers with high northwest winds."

The presence of President Roosevelt on board the dispatch boat Dolphin proved a magnet in drawing about the finish line one of the largest fleets in years. Four hours before the starting time of the first race, there were over a score of large steam yachts, almost as many schooners, and shoals of little sloops and auxiliary boats, while the drawbridge was constantly swinging open to admit more.

The country people came to New London by hundreds in the early forenoon, and their teams took up positions on the road along the river near the finish line. Usually they do not evince much interest in the races, but the possibility of getting a glimpse of the president or the members of his family was a great attraction.

Among the large craft clustered about the Dolphin, were the steam yachts Narada, Isis, El Reba, Atalanta, Uvira, Saranac, Sayonara, Duchess, Vervapa, Wadena, Zoraya and the White Heather, the latter the largest of the fleet, with her owner, D. I. Drummond, of St. Louis, on board:

The sailing craft of the fleet included the Sachem, Emerald, Montauk, Atalanta, Mayflower, Comanche, Isolde, Cachalot and Cachice.

The Dolphin's position was on the east side of the river, and half a mile above the drawbridge. As every yacht was gaily decorated not only with signal flags but also with either blue or crimson, as her owner preferred, the picture from the windows of the trains arirving from the East was brilliant and inspiring.

At noon the wind, which had constantly changed during the morning, was northwest by north. At the same time it stiffened considerably, kicking up a bad sea. Nevertheless, the Harvard varsity crew went to the west side of the river, where they practiced for about twenty minutes, after which they returned to their quarters. The men rowed under difficulties on account of the condition of the water, but they showed good form.

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 26.—At Broad View, the quarters of the Yale crew, the men were astir half an hour after 7. They ate a good breakfast and then lounged about the quarters. They were in the best of spirits. Head Coach Cameron, in response to a question, said his men were in good condition.

At both the Harvard and Yale quarters the only question was as to the condition of the water.

DONATIONS ARE SMALL

New York, June 26.—The will of the late Very Rev. E. A. Hoffman, dean of the General Theological seminary, has been filed for probate. It disposes of an estate the value of which is estimated at $12,000,000 to $15,000,000.

Among the charitable bequests are: General Theological seminary, $100,000 and the testator's library; the Domestic and Foreign Missionary society of the Protestant Episcopal church, $50,000, to be known as the Eugene Augustus Hoffman fund; clergymen retiring fund, $10,000; the fund for the relief of widows and orphans of deceased clergy, and of aged, infirm and disabled clergy, $25,000; the New York Historical society, $50,000.

After making these public bequests, the dean directs that his wife shall have $75,000 if she desires to buy a home for herself. The rest of the estate is to be held in trust and $75,0000 a year is to be paid to the widow. The remainder of the income is divided into four equal parts for her four children. The dean left $5,000 for his bookkeeper and $2,500 to his secretary.

EDWARD DIX IS IN A FIX

New York, June 26.—Owner of two yachts and member of the New York Athletic club, Edward S. Dix, is locked up in the Tombs, having been indicted on the charge of stealing $500 from Julian G. Buckley, president of an advertising agency and owner of considerable real estate. Buckley alleges that a large sum is missing from his rent roll. The alleged shortage was discovered in the course of a damage suit by Buckley against one of the Rapid Transit conductor for encroachment. The court demanded figures showing the income from the building alleged to have been damaged. Dix, who Buckley alleges, had entire control of the proerty was on a yaching trip. The books were examined and alleged discrepancies were discovered which led to the arrest of Dix.

ACCIDENTS AT MENOMONIE

Menomonie, Wis., June 26.—Fred Gierke fell down the elevator shaft in George Gallaway's furniture store last evening and died from his injuries. He leaves a widow and four children. He was about 34 years old. August Latch, who works for Paul Wilson on his stock farm near this city, was thrown from his buggy and had his leg broken in two places and was otherwise injured.

JAMES FERGUS PASSES AWAY

Helena, Mont., June 26.—James Fergus, a pioneer of Minnesota, Wisconsin and Montana, who founded the towns of Fergus Falls and Little Falls, in Minnesota and for whom Fergus county, in this state, was named, died last night at his home near Lewiston, this state, aged 89 years. He once refused land in the heart of Chicago offered him at $8 an acre.

WANTED TO LYNCH GRAFTER

St. Paul, June 26.—A Chippewa Falls, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: William Beaver, a stranger, had a close call to being lynched by an infuriated crowd last night. Beaver was operating a skin game on the corner and many persons were patrons. They were losers in the game and becoming infuriated took Beaver in hand. He escaped, the crowd following yelling "Lynch him," "Kill him."

A policeman caught Beaver and placed him in the city lockup to protect him. Later he was taken to the county jail. He is about 60 years old.

AT WEST DULUTH

A petition is being circulated among people interested in the paving of Central avenue, or, as it is now called, Fifty-fifth avenue, between Marion and Cody street. Said a prominent West Duluth business man this morning: "The street is in a very bad condition and to get it paved properly we will have to go to those living out here. Those who own property on the street but live elsewhere, I understand, would not object to having the street paved, but the initial steps must be taken by those right home. We do not know whether we will ask to have it paved with macadam or cedar blocks. Some favor macadam for the reason that when it is time to put brick or some other material on we have the foundation there, and besides is cheaper. There is no doubt but that the street needs it badly enough."

RECEPTION AND SHOWER.

A reception and linen shower was given last evening in honor of Miss Wilhelmina Jacques at the home of Mrs. W. F. Murnian, 229 Fifty-fourth avenue west. Miss Jacques is to be married to Leon LaCasse Monday. Refreshments were served, and a short program was rendered during the evening. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Pearl Simmons and Mrs. Whaley. Those present were: Mesdames Whaley and Simmons, Wilhelmina Jacques, Laura D'Aoust, Anna D'Aoust, Emma Ekholm, Cecelia Berg, Eliza Bower, Lily Forget, Alice Tims, Horora Tims, Leona D'Aoust, Alice Connell, Lida Goetzinger, Nell Murphy, Mammie Santerre, Daphne Kittlin. Messrs Ted Gonyea, Leon LaCasse, Fred Potvier, William Godfrey, William Freemont, Erasmus Kreidler, Ed Carpenter, Iver Seasted, Wallace D'Aoust, Harry Lanners, Arthur Jacques, Henry Goetzinger, George Woods, Steve Murphy, Conby Hines and F. Santerre.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The funeral of Oscar Gifford, the young man who died yesterday morning after a few days' illness, will take place tomorrow afternoon and not this afternoon, as stated in the morning paper. The services will be held at 2 o'clock from the home of his brother, Otto Gifford, 901 Fifty-sixth avenue west, and the interment will be at Oneota cemetery.

The West Duluth Fourth of July celebration is still on the boom. Frank H. Hantz has been out during the past few days posting large lithographs in flaming colors throughout Cloquet, Midway, Hermantown and other places. The posters are very cleverly gotten up and the inducements well displayed.

The steamer Jessie H. Farwell brought in a load of limestone to the blast furnace yesterday.

The lawn social which was given by the ladies of the Asbury M. E. church Epworth league on the home of Miss Gertrude Mallory, was a great success in every particular. The lawn was beautifully decorated with lanterns and a delicious duncheon was served.

Hendricks Dry Goods Co.

GREATLY ENLARGED

Silberstein & Bondy Company to Have Handsome Store.

Additional Story Will Add Greatly to Its Facilities.

Will Be Maintained as Leading High Class Dry Goods Store.

Duluth will certainly have a modern dry goods store when the contemplated improvements to the Silberstein & Bondy building are completed.

The city has several splendid department stores, but the Silberstein & Bondy company store is designed to be strictly for high class dry goods business.

There is a possibility that another story will be added to that already provided for in the contract, but the indications are that the building of two additional stories would delay business to such an extent that the second addition will be delayed till next year.

The new story will give the store 7000 feet of additional space, making 28,000 feet in all.

Thirty-three years ago the Silberstein & Bondy company began business in Duluth on a small scale. The growth of the store had been a barometer of the growth of Duluth. Now the demand for space in this store is so great that it is absolutely necessary to acquire more room, and if in the future as in the past, the store indicates the growth of Duluth, great prosperity for the city is not far ahead.

When building their store many years ago Messrs. Silberstein and Bondy selected the corner of Lake avenue and Superior street as the coming center for the retail dry goods business. That was almost before there was any city and the future to most men was very uncertain. The wisdom in the choice of location is now apparent and present conditions endorse business sagacity.

Mr. Silberstein and his late partner did much in the early days to keep alive the faith of Duluth's future, and at present Mr. Silberstein is frequently consulted in important city affairs.

About three years ago J. M. Gidding, then connected with the best dry goods houses in the East, was induced to come to Duluth and aid Mr. Silberstein in the upbuilding of his splendid store. Familiar with the methods of the larger dry goods centers, he has used his knowledge in assisting to give the Silberstein & Bondy company a name in the retail business of the Northwest that ranks the highest.

When the new addition is complete the present stock of high class goods will be augmented with other lines of goods consistent with the character and business of the store. It will be in no sense a department store, but will carry such lines as are carried by first class dry goods houses, such as Marshall Fields & Co., of Chicago, or Aultmann's in New York.

The contractors are in readiness to begin work on the new addition immediately so that it will be opened in time for the fall trade.

PROSPEROUS SEASON.

Hibbing Is Having Exceptionally Busy Season.

J. A. McIntyre, editor of the Hibbing Tribune, is a guest at the St. Louis today. Mr. McIntyre says that Hibbing, which has always been a busy town since the big mines were discovered near by, is having an exceptionally prosperous season.

"Including the Stevenson property, which is six miles away," said Mr. McIntyre, this noon, "there are seventeen shipping mines directly tributary to Hibbing. These properties employ an aggregate of about 2000 men this season. Then we have considerable lumbering to help out our business interests. The C. A. Remington Lumber company has a mill that saws about 50,000 feet a day. The Mashek Lumber company also has a mill on Longyear lake that saws 125,000 feet a day. The latter is the mill with which D. C. Thompson, of Duluth, is connected. The latter is the mill with which D. C. Thompson, of Duluth, is connected. Business is good in all lines. We now have a population inside our municipal boundaries of over 5000."

NO CREDIT.

Retail Grocers' Association Gives Notice to the Public.

Owing to the conditions which now exist, the retail grocers of this city are compelled to adopt a system in their credit business which is but just and fair to consumer and grocer alike. The jobbers, manufacturers and commission merchants compel the retail grocers to pay their bills in full every week and ten days, and if not paid by that time the grocer finds it necessary to pay cash or go without goods until said bills are paid in full.

The Duluth retail grocers are therefore compelled to adopt the system of carrying no baalnces whatever on their books, and have unanimously adopted a resolution to the effect that no balances will be carried by any grocer in this city on and after Aug. 1, 1902, and no customer will receive credit from any other grocer until they have paid their bills in full.

This imperatively applies to all customers without exception.

Very respectfully,

DULUTH RETAIL GROCERS' ASSOCIATION.

AT OATKA.

Improvements Contemplated For Next Year to Accomodate Crowds.

The popular dancing party at Oatka Beach auditorium drew another immense crowd last evening. The Park Point Street Railway company carried about 250 people to the pavilion and, besides these, there were a large number of campers and about 150 people from West Superior.

So popular have the tri-weekly dances become that it is understood that the management of the street railway and auditorium is seriously considering the proposition of building a much larger pavilion the coming winter to be run in connection with the auditorium next season. The idea is to build the new dancing hall about as large again as the auditorium and have the sides open instead of enclosed. If built, the new pavilion will be erected just south of the present site of the auditorium. If the plans of the management are carried out it will have the largest dancing floor in the Northwest.

Another project that has been under consideration in the way of improvements on Park Point is the placing of incandescent lights at intervals among the trees through the more thickly settled part of the Point in the vicinity of the auditorium. About the only light now had at Oatka Beach comes from the buildings of the street railway company and walking among the trees, especially on a dark night, is fraught with inconvenience and some danger of collision with trees. It is not likely that the lights will be put in this year, but they are said to be among the improvements scheduled for another season.

There is also a possibility of street railway improvement on the Point another season, in the way of a double track. With increased facilities for taking care of larger crowds at Oatka Beach a double track will be practically demanded to afford ample transportation facilities. The company has under consideration a return route by way of the lake shore. The street railway company has eight cars at the present time and there are times when all of these in use are scarcely enough to handle the crowds. New cars that are purchased hereafter will be of the open motor car type and capable of easily carrying from sixty to seventy-five people.

Increased facilities for handling the crowds will also call for a better service between the beach and West Superior and there is a strong probability that the Interstate Traction company will order built this fall, for the season of 1903, one and perhaps two, light draught speedy ferry boats capable of carrying from 150 to 200 people. The idea is to establish a regular half hour service between Oatka Beach and Connor's Point from early morning until late at night, and on the evenings when dancing is in progress at the auditorium the boats will be run to Tower bay slip. In event two of the boats are built, one will be available for excursion parties and can be chartered to carry parties between Duluth and the Beach.

NEW SCALE

Will Be Demanded By Striking Weavers Before Returning.

New York, June 26.—The silk weavers of Hudson county, N. J., who went out last night in sympathy with the striking helpers of Paterson, held a meeting today and decided no matter what the outcome of the Paterson strike might be to demand that each shop be made a union shop and present a new scale of wages to the employers before returning. If their demands are not conceded the weavers will refuse to return to their looms and a general strike of the silk workers of Hudson county will be inaugurated. There were about 2000 weavers present at the meeting and the vote was unanimous.

There have been times when the wild beasts have been more merciful than human beings, and spared the woman cast to them in the arena. It is astonishing how little sympathy women have for women. In the home the mistress sees the maid with the signs of suffering she recognizes so well, but she does not lighten the sick girl's load by a touch of her finger. In the store the forewoman sees the pallor and exhaustion which mark womanly weakness, but allows nothing for them. It is work or quit.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, by curing the womanly diseases which undermine the health and sap the strength. "Favorite Prescription" establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness.

"When I first commenced using Dr. Pierce's medicines," writes Mrs. George A. Strong, of Gansevoort, Saratoga Co., N. Y. "I was suffering from female weakness, a disagreeable drain, bearing-down pains, weak and tired feeling all the time. I dragged around in that way for two years, then I began taking your medicine. After taking the first bottle I began to feel better. I took four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' one vial of the 'Pleasant Pellets,' also used one bottle of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. Now I feel like a new person. I can't thank you enough for your kind advice and the good your medicine has done me."

"Favorite Prescription" makes weak women strong, sick women well. Accept no substitute for the medicine which works wonders for weak women.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most desirable laxative for delicate women.

BUILDING MATTERS

Floor Plans For Masonic Cathedral Are Being Prepared.

Foundation Only to Be Built the Present Season.

The Foundation of Kelley-How-Thomson Building Is Completed.

Floor plans for the new Masonic cathedral, a site for which was recently bought at the corner of Second avenue east and Second street, are being prepared by W. A. McGonagle and William Hoyt, both engineers who have had considerable experience along architectural lines. When the floors are laid out to the satisfaction of the building committee, it is likely that competitive plans based upon them will be called for from architects. It is the intention to build the foundations the present season, but to defer the erection of the superstructure until next year.

The contractors on the pile-driving and timbering for the foundations for the new building to be erected by the Kelley-How-Thomson company on lower Fifth avenue west expect to turn the work over tonight ready for Watterworth & Fee, the general contractors, to go ahead with the foundation and main part of the structure. From this time on, it is expected, rapid progress will be made, though the construction is said to be designed in a very strong manner.

Contractors are coming to regard the bulk of the heavy work of the season as well along. There will probably be the Silberstein & Bondy addition, the Wright-Clarkson addition, possibly the rebuilding of the Temple theater and a large office building to figure on, but aside from those jobs the business will probably be confined the rest of the season largely to residence, tenement and flat buildings.

The passing of the river and harbor bill will make some money available for the continuing of harbor improvements, particularly the breakwaters at Ashland and Port Wing and the beginning of work on new concrete piers at the natural entry to the Duluth-Superior harbor. Heavy work will be continued on the Mesaba range all the season on a very large scale, as a result of the opening of a large number of new mines, but the chances are that very few of the contractors not yet engaged in that line of work will become active factors in bidding for it.

RAILROADS.

Annual Meeting of Union Depot Company--Homeseekers' Tickets.

At the annual meeting of the Duluth Union Station and Transfer company, held in St. Paul, the old officers were re-elected for the coming year. They are: M. C. Kimberley, general superintendent of the Northern Pacific, president; R. M. Bell, secretary and superintendent; and C. A. Clark, treasurer of the Northern Pacific, in the same capacity with the depot company.

General Agent T. E. Blanche, of the Northern Pacific, is in St. Paul today.

The Omaha sent out two sleepers on its fast mail train yesterday afternoon, and both of them were filled with passengers.

Notice has been given by the Northern Pacific yesterday that on the first and third Tuesdays of each month, July to October, inclusive, it will sell homeseekers' round trip tickets to all North Pacific coast points, including all points on the Southern Pacific railway, in Oregon, main line and branches south of Portland to Duluth and Ashland inclusive. The rate is one fare plus $2 for the round trip, and tickets will be good to return within twenty-one days from the date of sale.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS.

Wheat Reported In a Thrifty Condition.

The crop report for South Dakota for the week ending Monday last is as follows:

"The temperature during the week averaged considerably below the normal, and the nights were cool. There were scattered showers, but mostly insufficient for best results, and in some counties more rain is needed, some limited areas needing it soon.

"Wheat, oats, barley and rye are generally in good, thrifty condition, especially wheat, which is heading in the extreme southern counties, and for which the cool weather was very favorable. Rye and barley are heading generally, and winter rye is filling well.

"There was slight frost in some northern localities on the 20th. On Saturday morning, the 21st, there was a gentral frost, light in the Black Hills and extreme southern counties and the middle counties along the Missouri river, but mostly heavy over the greater portion of the other counties east of the Missouri river. Over large areas in the heavy frost belt, many fields of corn and potatoes are reported seriously injured, and some, it is believed, irreparably. Some flax and rye and barley in head are also considerably injured. It is too early, however, to determine the actual damage, and it is believed that with favorable weather the bulk of the injured crops will promptly recover, especially potatoes. The frost was more severe in some localities than in others, and many fields of the crops mentioned escaped injury of any consequence. Tender garden stuff, where not protected, suffered generally. Early corn, it appears, was more injured than the late, and the injurious frost was confined mostly to the middle Eastern and Northeastern sections.

"Where not injured by frost, corn, potatoes and flax made slow growth, because of cool weather, but are in healthy condition, and the corn fields are generally clean.

"Grass continues in good condition and haying has begun, with fine outlook for a good crop.

"There was some injury to fruits by the frost in the heavy frost belt, and some fields of early millet were considerably injured.

"In county reports, where it states that no report of frost was received, no reports dated after the frost occurred, were received."

ZENOTA FLOUR GUARANTEED

CASH BASIS.

Retail Grocers to Refuse Credit After August 1.

The retail grocery business of Duluth goes on a cash basis on Aug. 1.

The credit system will be absolutely abolished on that date and persons that have not paid up their grocery bills will be unable to purchase groceries until all accounts are settled.

This decision was made at a meeting of the Retail Grocers' association last evening.

At the meeting it was reported that the credit business was likely to put a number of the leading retail stores in a bad condition. Bills were allowed to run too long and there was danger generally from this branch of the trade.

The wholesale grocers and commission men always compel the retailers to pay for what they get at the end of each week, and in order to do this the retailers say that they must abolish the credit system to consumers.

Secretary Holcomb, of the association, said today: "Our association is not a trust or anthing like that. If the people generally knew the grocery business better they would understand why it is absolutely necessary for our organization to take this step."

Within the next week or so every housekeeper in Duluth will receive a circular letter from the Retail Grocers' association saying that after Aug. 1, 1902, no customer will receive credit from any grocer till all grocery bills are paid in full.

The association will have a list of all persons in the city owing any bills to its members and each store will receive a list of the delinquents.

Persons not entirely in sympathy with the abolishing of the credit system say that they would not be surprised to see the new move cause trouble in the association, inasmuch as a certain class of people will be more economical in their purchases when cash is required for everything bought.

However, it is said the cash business system to be inaugurated by the retail grocers has been tried elsewhere, not only to the advantage of the grocers, but the consumers.

The grocers will have a picnic at Chambers' grove, Fond du Lac, on Aug. 6. It will be a big affair.

NOT LIKELY.

Sugar Brokers Do Not Expect Any Material Advance.

Local sugar brokers who have been looking for a sensational advance in the price of sugar are inclined now to believe that there will be little early material change in price. As much as 25 or 35 points advance were looked for in addition to the 5 points scored some weeks ago.

The reason for this unexpected turn is ascribed to the failure of congress to reduce the tariff on Cuban sugar. The deduction to the layman appears somewhat contradictory, for it is admitted that the reduction that had been worked for in the duty against Cuban raw sugar would have the inevitable effect or bringing into the American market a lot of cheaper raw sugar.

"The real explanation," said a local broker, "is to be traced to the fact that large loans have been placed by Cuban brkers on the sugar crop, who have been firm in their fath that the United States would reduce the duty and open this market to their crop. Now, as a result of the refusal of congress to reduce this duty, the outlook is that loans will be called and the crop levied upon. This will cause such depression so that it would not be surprising if for a time Cuban raw sugar were brought into this country at a lower ost to the refiner than as if the duty had been reduced.

"In anticipation of this turn of affairs, jobbers in the West and at Duluth and elsewhere in the Northwest have kept their stocks at the lowest possible point consistent with meeting their trade demands. My own impression is that the price of refined sugar will not vary largely from the present basis, though jobbers seem to think that it will be shaded."

SLOANE IS TO DECIDE

Local Inspectors Differ Over Continuance of Tugmen's Hearing.

Inspector Monaghan For Short Continuance--- Chalk Opposed.

Matter Is Referred to Supervising Inspector For Decision.

The case of H. G. Inman against the striking tugmen, which was set for trial yesterday morning but was not heard at that time, because the counsel for the plaintiff was in Chicago, was not continued until this morning, as was reported.

The inspector disagreed as to the time the case should be tried. The counsel for the tug company requested that the case be continued till this afternoon at 2 o'clock, while the counsel for the licensed pilots and engineers wanted it heard at that time or postponed until Dec. 1. Inspector Chalk stated that the case must go on at once or be postponed until December.

This was objected to by Inspector Monaghan. He stated that he did not consider the proposition made by the tug company's counsel an unreasonable one. The disagreement arising in the local board will have to be referred to John D. Sloane, the supervising inspector of the district, for decision. Yesterday an account of the case and disagreement was sent with a request that he set a date for the hearing of the case.

FOR ASSAULT.

Rufus Johnson of Pike Lake Charged With Shooting Another.

Rufus Johnson, proprietor of a boat house at Pike lake, was arrested late this afternoon charged with assault in the first degree.

Last Sunday he shot at Fred Mosimann and some of the shot struck Mrs. Mary Heiss.

Mr. Mosimann and Mrs. Heiss, it is said, rowed over to the Johnson boat house to get a boat that belonged to another family on the lake shore.

Johnson refused to let them have it and after an exchange of words he announced that he would kill Mosimann. He went into his house a short distance away and came back with a shot gun.

By this time Mr. Mosimann was rowing Mrs. Heiss out on the lake and Johnson fired at them from the shore. Some of the shot went through the gown of Mrs. Heiss, but did not do any severe injury.

AROUND ELY.

Considerable Prospecting For Iron In That Section.

Judge H. Van Blarcom came down from Ely this noon, and is at the St. Louis for several days. The judge says that Ely is not booming—just enjoying a healthy activity. All the mines are busy, and they have a good class of men, so that Ely profits from their employment.

"Considerable exploring is going on in the vicinity of Ely," said Judge Van Blarcom this afternoon. "However, there is not yet as much doing in this line as we expected. Morton Miller is sinking some test pits on the John Semer property within the limits of Ely. He also has a drill at work on the Sibley & Baringer property, just north of the Pioneer mine.

"Explorations are also going on in sections 19 and 22-63-11. The drill in 22 is owned by Cole & McDonlad. That location is known as the John Frazer location, and is said to be now owned by Swallow & Hopkins. In 19 the explorations are supposed to be under the direction of W. C. Agnew, who is thought to be acting for the Mahoning people. This is known as the Quinn claim. Quinn got rid of it some years ago, however, and is said to have died. It was explored twelve years ago and again three years ago, but it is said that not enough promise was discovered to warrant the development of the property. They seem to think now, however, that the indications are bright."

George Baker Robs Clothing Dummies and Gets Caught.

George Baker, one of the most disturbing sneak thieves that ever operated in Duluth, visited the city again yesterday and for a few minutes the police were very busy.

Clothing was mysteriously missing from the dummies in front of several Superior street clothing stores. Finally Officer Roberg caught Baker, who was seen snatching a coat from a dummy in front of Erickson's clothing store at 219 West Superior street.

The thief fought desperately, but was no match for the policeman. This morning in court he could remember nothing of what happened, or at least pretended he could not. Others, however, remembered him and the court imposed a sentence of thirty days at hard labor.

REALIZATION

Of Effects of Coronation Postponement Comes to People.

London, June 26.—Only today is London beginning to realize the practical effects of the coronation postponement. The exodus of visitors to the continent and the provinces is taxing the capacity of the railroads and steamboats. This return traffic, however, nowise makes up the railroad lines' loss of hundreds of thousands of passengers from the provinces and nearer continental points who had delayed their coming to the last moment. The big tourist agencies were crowded all day booking the cheaper class of "trippers" for whom London, minus the coronation, had no attraction. All persons of moderate means who can get away are getting out of the city as fast as possible. The smaller hotels and boarding houses are the worst sufferers. The big hotels declare they have been almost unaffected by the postponement of the king's crowning, the wealthy Americans and others who had come to witness the coronation making no move to go, though the next fortnight, doubtless, will witness a general migration to the continent and Scotland.

REBELLION

In North China Not Subdued By Any Means.

Victoria, B. C., June 26.—Contradictory reports come from China of the rebellion in Chi Li. The imperial officers have sent out reports of victories over the rebels, but these are not altogether credited by the papers.

A dispatch to the North China News from Pao Ting says: "From latest accounts obtained from reliable sources in the north it is asserted that the news given out by the officials at Pao Ting that the victories of Viceroy Yuan's troops (and, we may add, the massacres perpetrated by them) in the districts of Chuluh Sien, Kuang Tsung Halen and Wei Hsen have quite pacified them, is a mere fiction. The majority of the troops have been charged with wholesale plundering and maltreating the inhabitants of the peaceful districts through which they had to pass when en route to the disturbed districts, and, furthermore, when in the rebel territory to have pillaged, burned and destroyed no less than thirty-seven large mud-walled towns and villages, killing all the inhabitants who could not escape. This has been lately reported to the throne by a censor."

AUTOMOBILISTS

Start In the International Race From Paris.

Paris, June 26.—Girardot, Fournier, Edge and Knift, were the first four starters in the international automobile race from Paris to Vienna, which was started at half past 3 o'clock this morning from the village of Campigny, twelve miles east of this city.

Foxhall Keene left at 3:45 a. m. W. H. Vanderbilt, Jr., started at 5:32 a. m. His skillful manouvering was much admired. Immediately after the flag fell, Mr. Vanderbilt left at high speed and quickly disappeared. Lawrence Waterbury did not start.

Knift arrived first at Belfort, at 10:47:20. His average speed was 100 kilometres per hour. Henry Farman reached Belfort at 11:10:01, and Maurice Farmon at 11:13:45. Fournier's tire burst just after passing Chaumont, where he was leading. Foxhall Keene dashed into a gate at a level crossing at Ozier, eleven miles out. His automobile was injured and he was unable to continue the race. Mr. Keene was not injured.

DEATH LIST.

New York, June 26.—Edward Merrifield, proprietor of the Continental hotel in this city and who was for nine years president of the State Hotelmen's association, is dead at Central Valley. He was a director of and largest stockholder in the National Citizens' bank. Flags were half-masted on the leading hotels when news of his death was spread and this token of respect led to a belief in the streets that King Edward had passed away.

Wellington, New Zealand, June 26.—The Right Rev. William Garden Cowie, D.D., bishop of Auckland, is dead. He was born in 1821. He had been bishop of Auckland since 1869 and private of New Zenland since 1895.

ONE BODY FOUND.

St. Paul, June 26.—A Madison, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: The body of Miss Ada Rawley, who with George Lohr was drowned in Lake Mendota two weeks ago, was recovered early this morning, floating near the place where they went down. Lohr's body has not been found.

Prof. Curtis Says Schweitzer Deed Is Not Genuine.

According to His Expert Opinion, Mueller Did Not Sign It.

A West Duluthian Disconcerted at Telling His Occupation.

Professor C. C. Curtis, who for a number of years has conducted a business college in Minneapolis, and who has testified in many cases as a handwriting expert, today made the statement on the stand in the Mueller case that the signatures on the mortgage given to Father Kosmerl and on certain timber deeds and notes, which are admitted to be the genuine signatures of the Mueller now dead and who owned the land in controversy, were not made by the same person who signed the name Johann Mueller to the deed to Peter Schweitzer.

The battle of the handwriting experts is now on. The matter excites some surprise, for Attorney W. D. Dwyer, one of the leading attorneys of Superior, testified to the execution of the Schweitzer deed.

Professor Curtis went into a technical statement of his reasons for the belief which he expressed. He explained certain strokes and curves, which he claimed differed. He also said that the Schweitzer deed was signed by a man in the prime of life, and exhibits strength, while the other signatures were signed by a man somewhat nervous and exhibiting age in his lines, they being somewhat wavering and angular.

The greater part of the morning was devoted to the cross-examination of H. B. Wallace, of West Duluth, a witness that was introduced yesterday by the counsel for Mrs. Mueller.

On direct examination yesterday afternoon he identified the picture of Mueller as the man that went by that name and who lived on an adjoining claim on the range for some time, afterward boarding in West Duluth and frequently visiting at the witness' home. Wallace also testified to the tatoo marks that he claims to have seen on Mueller's arm one time when the latter was at his house and had his sleeves rolled up. He said he last saw Mueller in West Duluth in 1897. While they were living on their claims on the range, he said, Mueller frequently came to his cabin and played "66," and once when they were playing cards and the subject of their conversation turned to pugilism and strong men, Mueller boasted what a strong man he used to be in the old country, and claimed that he got into trouble with a man there and in the fight that followed he killed the man. Wallace said that he got the impression from Mueller's talk that he was trying to impress him with the idea that he used to be a pretty good man physically in his day, and that the killing was done in a drunken brawl.

On the cross examination, Wallace said that he could not give any idea of the character or the nature of the tatoo, that he simply remembers having seen one.

With reference to Mueller's appearance, he testified that he was a man about 60 years of age, with a sandy mustache, slightly stooped, quite active for a man of his years, but deliberate in his movements. He testified that while he had read some of the newspaper accounts of the case he had seen nothing of Mrs. Mueller's testimony as to tatoo marks. His testimony as to Mueller's method of walking differed from that of other witnesses in that he claimed to have noticed nothing peculiar about it, while testimony has been introduced to show that Mueller walked with a limp. Wallace said Mueller had never mentioned any family or relations either in this or the old country and was inclined to be reticent about his past life. Witness said that Mueller once told him that there was iron ore on his claim and that he had received an offer of $100,000 for it, but held it to be worth a million dollars or over.

Wallace testified that Mueller was about his own height, perhaps an inch or two taller, and at the request of Attorney Severance for the plaintiffs, he was measured by Clerk Halloway. This is claimed to be the first instance in the history of the court where a witness was legally measured and it created a little amusement among the attorneys. Wallace measured five feet five and one-half inches.

A feature in Wallace's testimony was the reluctance of the witness in testifying to his present occupation. On the cross-examination he admitted that he was employed by William Clifton, of West Duluth, whom he said ran a gambling house in that part of the city. Questioned further by Mr. Severance he said that his salary varied from $2 to $3 per day and that nothing was played there but poker. Clifton, he said, was commonly known as "Shorty."

When questioned by Mr. Severance as to the reason why, in the first part of the cross-examination, he had testified that he was doing no work at the present time, Wallace said he did not regard his present occupation as work, that it was play, even though he received a salary for it. At the close of the cross-examination he admitted, on question, that his attendance at court did not interfere with his duties at Clifton's.

Attorney R. R. Briggs, for the defendant, Mrs. Mueller, introduced another deposition of Mrs. Laura Morrison, daughter of Peter Schweitzer, of West Superior, relative to the ring claimed to have been Mueller's. Mrs. Morrison said that she had seen the ring in her father's possession and that he had told her it formerly belonged to Mueller. She said she had seen it within the past year on the hand of her younger sister. Counsel for the plaintiff asked that the testimony relative to the ownership of the ring be stricken out as hearsay evidence, and it was so ordered.

Mrs. Agatha Wittman, a sister of the Detroit Mueller, testified as to her brother's general appearance and burst into tears when shown the picture of the Duluth Mueller. Relative to her identification of the photograph her testimony was somewhat similar to that of Mrs. Webber's, in that there were some points in the features that were familiar and others that were not.

PULPWOOD

Manufacturers Look Over the North Shore Supply.

A party of men prominently connected with the manufacture of print paper in the West, arrived at the Spalding yesterday afternoon after making a trip along the north shore in the steamer Bradshaw. The party left on Monday and made the round trip on the boat. The supposition is that the general purpose of the visit was to inspect the north shore with a view to future pulpwood operations along the shore when the present large stumpage resources of the Pulpwood company of Appleton, which are now largely concentrated in the upper peninsula of Michigan, become somewhat curtailed.

Among the members of the party were: E. B. Mendsen, of Chicago, prominent in the General Paper company, which is the selling agency of all the Fox, Wisconsin, Menominie, Mississippi and St. Louis river paper mills; T. E. Nash, head of the large paper mills at Grand Rapids, Wis.; F. Garrison, who is also interested at the same point; B. F. Nelson, of Minneapolis, president of the mill at Little Falls, Minn.; Manager W. S. Taylor, of the Pulpwood company, which handles the raw material for the Fox River mills, and Manager McNair, of the Cloquet mill.

It is understood that the Pulpwood company has been figuring on a tract of stumpage in this vicinity for some weeks past.

SUDDEN END.

Mrs. James T. Hale Dies After Comparatively Brief Illness.

Mrs. Hattie Hale, wife of James T. Hale, died at 11 o'clock last evening at her home, 1201 East First street, as the result of intestinal perforation. She has been ill but two weeks and her condition was not considered serious until about noon yesterday.

Mrs. Hale has lived in Duluth for seventeen years, and was greatly beloved by many. She was forty-four years of age, and is survived by her husband and two sons, Paul and Tracey.

Mrs. Hale lived in Tonawanda, Pa., before coming to Duluth. She was the sister of Mrs. F. J. Nixon and John P. Morrow of this city.

The funeral arrangements had not been definitely decided on at a late hour this afternoon, but will be announced some time tomorrow.

CYCLONE

At Lancaster, Ky., Carries Away Houses and Bridges.

Louisville, June 26.—A special to the Evening Post from Lancaster, Ky., says: At 10 o'clock last night, a cyclone struck near here and did great damage. On the road to Crab Orchard, a dozen farm houses were blown to pieces and fences and wheat and trees were carried away. The iron bridge across Gilbert Creek was carried several yards away. The $3,000 residence of Mrs. Joshua Daniels was wrecked. The residence of James Dalton was carried 25 yards and his family therein were severely injured.

WORK OF CONGRESS

What Has Been Accomplished During the Present Session.

Reciprocity Treaty With Cuba Is Well Under Way.

Senator Jones May Become Isthmian Canal Commissioner.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—With the approach of the final adjournment of congress it is interesting to glance over the work of the session already accomplished and yet in prospect. This is done in the following paragraphs:

Killed the Nicaragua canal bill and passed the Panama bill.

Killed the bill for a government cable to the Philippines and decided not to interfere with private enterprises pledged to breaking the monopoly.

Passed a river and harbor bill aggregating $70,00,000.

Passed a public building bill aggregating $20,000,000.

Passed an irrigation bill and committed the government to the policy of reclaiming arid lands of the West.

May pass a bill for the civil government of the Philippines.

Passed many thousands of special pension bills.

Prohibited the sale of oleomargarine as butter.

Repealed all the war taxes, amounting to about $70,000,000.

The ship subsidy bill passed by the senate was killed in the house.

The Chinese exclusion law was reenacted.

Appropriated $360,000 for the remodeling of the White House.

Passed appropriation bills exceeding that of any congress at its first session except the war congresses.

Has failed to relieve Cuba.

Turned its back on the plan to provide for the national defense by enacting a militia law.

Refused to pass the bill for a general staff of the army.

Pigeon-holed all the reciprocity treaties, ignoring the words of the late President McKinley: "The period of exclusiveness has passed."

May go on record as being unable to agree on a comprehensive measure for the suppression of anarchy.

Considered consular reform as of little importance.

Failed to grasp the trust issue and has passed no legislation for the regulation of trusts, ignoring the recommendation of the president and the industrial commission.

Set its face against tariff revision and tariff reform.

Postponed action on the bill creating the department of commerce, which passed the senate.

Has not placed restriction of any sort, other than those now in effect, on European immigration.

* * *

It is generally understood about the senate that a reciprocity treaty with Cuba is well under way, but it is not believed that there will be any effort to ratify it during the present session, even if the document should be sent to the senate. The disposition, in brief, is to go to the country on the question, in the hope that at least some of the beet-sugar Republicans will be won over by next December. Senators generally do not count on an extra session immediately in case a treaty should be sent in, but many of them are inclined to believe that if the treaty is completed the senate will be called together in extraordinary session for its consideration soon after the November elections, in order to get the treaty out of the way, if possible, before the beginning of the regular session in December. Indeed, it may be said that this is the present program, so far as the program can be outlined, though its execution probably will depend somewhat on the result of the elections and whether they are considered favorable to reciprocity or not.

* * *

It is reported that at the expiration of his present term in the senate, on March 3 next, Senator James K. Jones, of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic national committee, will be selected as one of the seven commissioners who are to superintend the work of constructing the isthmian canal if authorized by congress.

As the Spooner bill now stands it embraces a paragraph, inserted at the instance of Senator A. O. Bacon, of Georgia, providing that a commission of seven overseers, four of whom shall be civilians, shall be selected by the president. The assertion was made at the time that in offering the amendment Mr. Bacon and his colleagues who voted for it had in view the creation of offices for some of the distinguished senators about to retire. One of these, it is said, is Mr. Jones.

Mr. Jones voted for the Panama route, and was, therefore, entirely friendly in his attitude toward those who advocated the Spooner substitute. It is calculated that it will require fifteen years' time to complete the construction of the canal. Therefore, for a man of Mr. Jones' age, who is 63, the appointment would be practically a life-long one. No salary has yet been fixed for the proposed commissioners, but it is sure to be equal to, if not greater than, that of a senator.

* * *

"The first race I ever made for congress resulted in my defeat by less than fifty majority," said a well known representative, "and if one of my friends had not been too zealous I would have been elected. There was a precinct where I expected to receive a hundred votes, and I feared there would be some fraud in the precinct that would injure me: so I got an old man who never participated in politics but who had almost paramount influence in the district, to take charge of my interests there, instructing him to see that every friend of mine voted and that the votes were counted.

"When the returns came in I had not received a single vote in that precinct, and the next day a bulky envelope was handed me containing 120 ballots, together with a letter from the man I had left in charge saying that he had seen every friend of mine and taken up their ballots so that none would be missed, and as he wouldn't trust the judges of election, he had sent them to me himself so I would be sure to get them. Since then I have seen to it that men in charge of my interests were not only honest, but knew something about politics."

BERGER SUIT

Against Steel Trust Is Argued Before Court of Errors.

Trenton, N. J., June 26.—Argument in the suit of Mrs. Miriam Berger against the United States Steel corporation to restrain the conversion of $200,000,000 worth of preferred stock into a like amount of bonds was resumed in the court of errors today. Counsel for Mrs. Berger made an exhaustive argument and was closely questioned by members of the court. He contended that the act of 1902, which was passed last winter, to permit the company to carry out its purpose was clearly unconstitutional, and that no right existed under the general corporation act to reduce the preferred stock of a corporation without payment for the same in cash; that the present plan of substituting bonds for preferred stock was an injustice to those bondholders of preferred stock that had not been substituted.

Counsel for the steel corporation will conclude the argument this afternoon.

Headache, Backache, Dizziness

Peruna Cures Pelvic Catarrh.

Mrs. Anna Martin, 47 Hoyt street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna did so much for me that I feel it my duty to recommend it to others who may be similarly afflicted. About a year ago my health was completely broken down, had backache, dizziness and irregularities, and life seemed dark indeed. We had used Peruna in our home as a tonic and for cold and catarrh and I decided to try it for my trouble. In less than three months I became regular, my pains had entirely disappeared, and I am now perfectly well." — Mrs. Anna Martin.

Miss Marie Johnson, 11 Columbia, East, Detroit, Mich., is worthy vice templar in Hope Lodge No. 6, Independent Order Good Templars. Miss Johnson, as so many other women also have done, found in Peruna a specific for a severe case of female weakness. She writes:

"I want to do what I can to let the whole world know what a grand medicine Peruna is. For eleven years I suffered with female troubles and complications arising therefrom. Doctors failed to cure me and I despaired of being helped. Peruna cured me in theree short months. I can hardly believe it myself, but it is a blessed fact. I am perfectly well now and have not had an ache or pain for months. I want my suffering sisters to know what Peruna has done for me."—Miss Marie Johnson.

Miss Ruth Emerson, 72 Sycamore street, Buffalo, N. Y., writes: "I suffered for two years with irregular and painful menstruation, and Peruna cured me within six weeks. I cannot tell you how grateful I feel. Any agency which brings health and strength to the afflicted is always a welcome friend, and today the market is so filled with useless and injurious medicines that it is a pleasure to know of so reliable a remedy as you place before the public."—Miss Ruth Emerson.

It is no longer a question as to whether Peruna can be relied on to cure all such cases. During the many years in which Peruna has been put to the test all forms and stages of acute and chronic catarrh no one year has put this remedy to greater test than the past year.

Peruna is the acknowledged catarrh remedy of the age. Dr. Hartman, the compounder of Peruna, has written a book on the phases of catarrh peculiar to women, entitled, "Health and Beauty." It will be sent free to any address by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

THE DAKOTAS.

Another Murder Trial Is on at Grand Forks.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—The trial of Ole Thoen, charged with the murder of Thomas Kjorvestad on June 8 at Thompson, N. D., was begun in district court. There was little trouble experienced in getting the juhy, which was completed shortly after dinner as follows: Joseph Monreau, A. A. Elton, John Smith, Arthur Thompson, A. McMaster, Iver Amundson and Richard Haviland, all of this city; I. T. Coburn, of Larimore; S. D. Osburn, of Fairfield; Joseph Wilson, of Strabane, David Spengler, of Strabane, and John Crerar, of Grace. The state called for Dr. Lowe, of Thompson, who testified that the cause of death was a blood clot on the brain caused by a fracture of the skull. A very important part of Dr. Lowe's testimony was in regard to admissions made to him by Thoen that he (Thoen) had struck the fatal blow. Dr. R. D. Campbell was next called and gave practically the same evidence testified to by Dr. Lowe. States attorney Winesman and Assistant States Attorney Rex represent the states, and John A. Sorely, the defense.

Fargo—Forger Saunders is comfortably located in the North Dakota penitentiary after having been extradited and returned here from Winnipeg. Saunders escaped from jail after having pleaded guilty to forgery and having been sentenced to five years in the penitentiary. On his return from Winnipeg, Sheriff Twichell took no chances with him, but kept him locked up in the dungeon between Fargo and Winnipeg. Saunders assumed a repentant attitude for his conduct, but declined to make any statement regarding his escape or his wanderings.

A woman who gave her name as Mrs. Smith and Bismarck as her home hired a livery rig from Doyle's barn for a short drive, and when she failed to return an investigation was made, which located her at Detroit, Minn., with the team. She was arrested and returned to Fargo. It is said there are some rather mysterious matters involved in the affair.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—Frank Lillam, employed by Parker Brothers, ice dealers, was discharged for incompetency. He bade his fellow workmen gaad-by Tuesday evening and said his employers would refret his discharge. Wednesday morning one of the firm's fine draft horses was found in its stable with its throat cut and dead. Another was found in the middle of the railroad track. The clothes of the missing man were found in the stable. It is thought he has drowned himself.

Faulkton—The Coleman murder trial will probably be given to the jury on Friday. The defense theory is in harmony with the defendant's story of the shooting, that Ed Coleman accidentally shot himself and lived to talk tnd help himself to a bed. The state proved that death ensued instantly, and that the ball entered the body from the rear. Dr. Mallery, of Aberdeen, an expert, testified, corroborating Dr. Stewart's testimony for the defense to the effect that a person wounded in the breast, three cavities of the heart punctured and otherwise badly lacerated, would probably live five to ten minutes and retain consciousness at least four minutes, that part of the rib torn from the backbone and lodged against the breastbone in front was not necessarily an indication that the ball entered from the rear.

Spearfish—The small fruit season has opened in the Spearfish valley, and home-grown strawberries are on the market. It has been an excellent season for them, and several growers have enormous crops. Perhaps the heaviest grower is Professor F. L. Cook, president of the state normal school, who is an accomplished horticulturist and raises not only strawberries, but raspberries, blackberries, currants and other small fruits with much success. Many normal school students are given employment during their summer vacation at Professor Cook's farm.

STATION FOR CHILI.

San Jose, Costa Rica, June 26.—The government has favorably received a proposal to grant Chili a coaling station on Caco island. The political prisoners taken during the last revolution have been pardoned. Demetrio Iglesias, minister of war and marine in the last cabinet, has protested against the charges that the previous administration was at the bottom of a conspiracy.

MARRIES AN ACTRESS.

New York, June 26.—Harvey Wilson Bell, son of Wilson Bell, of North Carolina, and Irene Perry, an actress, have just been married, according to a Boston special to the Herald. The ceremony was performed, it is stated, in St. Andrew's church, by the Rev. Dr. Kidner, in the presence of a few friends.

FOR FLOUR TRAFFIC

Illinois Central Said to Be After It From Duluth.

Would Ship to Gulf Port and From Thence Abroad.

Cutting of Flour Rate Charged By Lake and Rail Lines.

If the efforts of the Illinois Central road are successful, Duluth millers may be shipping flour abroad via New Orleans. It is said that the Illinois Central, now that it has acquired the Minneapolis & St. Louis and through it a direct entrance to Minneapolis, is determined to divert a share at least of the export flour traffic via the gulf port. As a result of this determination, a trainload of Washburn-Crosby flour will leave Minneapolis in a few days for New Orleans, consigned to foreign parts.

If the Illinois Central, which for years has been hauling wheat raised in Northern Illinois to New Orleans for export, persists in the determination of changing the former natural course of export business from the Northwest, the effect of its policy on the Northern lines will be watched with interest. It would mean, of course, if the policy were applied winter and summer, that traffic would be diverted from Duluth and the lake and rail lines. The Northern lines would be the chief sufferers, for it would be likely to take away a good share of their flour traffic between Minneapolis and Duluth.

One authority predicts that for the latter reason the Illinois Central will never be able to get much of the business out of Duluth, unless it builds its own road into this city. It is claimed that the Northern lines would take advantage of the opportunity to retaliate against the Illinois Central for the loss of its Minneapolis flour business by refusing to make a proportional rate from Duluth to Minneapolis that would enable the Illinois Central to put in a through tariff from this city to New Orleans.

Another man in the trade looks upon the move of the Illinois Central as an augury of good things to come. He claims that this policy, if applied during the closed season of lake navigation, will be likely to give Duluth still better all-rail rates to the seaboard of guif, and a more certain winter outlet for a larger part of its grain and flour. He declares that the Illinois Central would never have bought the Minneapolis & St. Louis if it had not intended to get some of the Duluth wheat business and some of its flour, and looks for either the building of a new line to Duluth or an amicable arrangement with one of the existing Duluth-St. Paul lines whereby a through tariff will be possible from this city to the gulf coast.

Thus far, it is said, no effort has been made to book business from Duluth via the Illinois Central route. A competing line man looks upon the move of the Illinois Central out of Minneapolis as simply a temporary affair. "It is undoubtedly an emergency rate," he continued. "The Illinois Central has done this before, but has never kept up the pace. In all likelihood some steamer is soon due at New Orleans without anything to carry out, and this low rate is probably made to meet the emergency."

CUTTING THE RATE.

Lake Lines Allege Shading of Flour Tariff.

Lake and rail lines claim that one of their number has been cutting the published tariff rate on flour out of Minneapolis via Duluth. The cut is said to have come soon after the Baltimore and Philadelphia rail lines announced a reduction in the proportional on wheat from Lake Erie ports to those seaports.

Nobody is willing to make affidavit that any particular line has cut the rate. However, it is declared that one line in, particular—the lake end of a New York rail line—has been carrying by far the largest part of the flour business from Minneapolis. Business that has been brought in over the two north coast lines from Minneapolis has it is said, been routed very largely via this same line, in spite of the fact that one of the Duluth-Minneapolis roads referred to has a very important and very close lake steamship line connection.

It was this anomaly that first attracted attention to the peculiar hold that this lake line had on the flour business for the time being. It seemed very peculiar to this rail line that a competing lake line should be loading out of its flour warehouses here the bulk of the flour the rail line had hauled in from Minneapolis when its own steamers were going begging for wheat cargoes at a cent a bushel.

Whether the situation has been relieved or not as far as the rate is concerned, it is said that the proportions of flour business carried has been gradually readjusting themselves during the past few days, and that line referred to is not getting so nearly the lion's share of the traffic as it formerly did.

As far as known no reduced or new flour tariffs have been published since the new tariff was agreed upon granting a differential on export flour as against domestic flour shipments.

INSTALLS THE SYSTEM.

First-In-First-Out Goes on Great Northern.

The Great Northern road has installed the first-in-first-out system for its train crews on the Virginia & Cass Lake runs, making the application of the system general on its road out of Duluth. It was only a short time ago that the Northern Pacific caused some dissatisfaction among its trainmen by extending the system to its Ashland and Staples lines.

There are two explanations of the reasons for this action by the Great Northern. The story that has gained currency outside of railroad circles is that all the roads are adopting the system as indemnity against temptation for conductors. It is claimed that some traveling men familiar with the runs of various conductors with whom they happen to be well acquainted habitually show great interest in the days their acquaintances are going out on their runs. It is not claimed that this applies to all conductors, and it is freely admitted that absolutely no significance is attached to the fact. Still it is contended that the railroad managements have decided that it is best to remove all chance whatever for suspicion by revising things so nobody will know in advance exactly what run a crew will go out on. The result is that travelers are unable to ascertain ahead when any particular conductor is scheduled to leave.

There is another side to the system that is anything but convenient for the conductors themselves. There is no question but that it takes them away from home more, makes it more expensive to live and in many ways is inconveniencing. For instance, a conductor who formerly could leave Ashland or Staples, or Cass Lake or Virginia in the morning and run to Duluth and thence back home in time to sleep and have an evening with his family, now may find himself at the end of another run than that which he expected to go out on. The conductor from Ashland may lie over in Duluth or he may be down at Staples. The conductor from Cass Lake may sleep at Duluth or he may have to tuck at Virginia. The interposition of an extra train may throw the whole schedule out of line, for the first man out catches the extra.

Regarded from the view point of the railroad operator, however, the new system equalizes and simplifies things. It gives no conductor any advantage in run over any other and it is claimed tends to eliminate inequalities and consequent occasion for dissatisfaction.

The reason assigned for making the change on the Great Northern is explained to be that the addition to the Mesaba range passenger run when the new line was opened up made it too much for one conductor to make th run into Duluth and return every day. The increased mileage, it is said, gave the trainmen reason to feel that they were discriminated again in favor of other crews. By making the run interchangeable with the Cass Lake run the inequalities were removed, and all the crews were placed on the same basis.

Both the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern have used the first-in-first-out system for train crews on their St. Paul runs for years. It was in effect on the old St. Paul & Duluth before it was bought by the Northern Pacific.

The Omaha employs the same system, but a conductor can generally tell where he is going to sleep when he leaves home. The crews on the Fast Mail run to Altoona and get a short lie over, returning to Duluth for their long lie over. The Duluth-St. Paul men get equal lie-overs at Duluth and Minneapolis. The two runs are never shaken up in a bag and the conductor given a chance to draw for where he will sleep that night.

A FIGHT IN SIGHT

Paving Companies May Scrap Over East Superior Street.

Property Owner Comments on Investigation at St. Paul.

Cedar Block Shows Up Much Better Than Other Pavements.

Duluth may reap the benefit of a spirited fight between street paving concerns.

The council, in calling for bids for bituminous macadam and Trinidad sheet asphalt for the paving of East Superior street between Eighth and Sixteenth avenues, is believed to have set the asphalt trust bidding against the Warren Bros. company, which has a corner on the bituminous macadam.

The city engineer is now drawing up plans and specifications for the paving contract and the firm that gets the contract will have to put the paving down in a much better way than strictly street paving engineers usually require.

Mr. Patton is considered one of the best informed men on street paving in this city. He recently studied up extensively on the bituminous macadam material, so that the specifications for that paving could be made as ironclad as the specifications for the sheet asphalt.

The fight for the East Superior street contract will undoubtedly be to the advantage of the city, but even at that many of the property owners are urging the consideration of cheaper paving than either of the two kinds for which petitions have been presented. One East Superior street property owner returned from St. Paul and Minneapolis yesterday. Last evening he remarked:

"What a fool a man is to take the word of some street paving promoter. I attended one of the asphalt meetings out in our neighborhood and believed all that I heard of the asphalt representative's argument. I was indignant at The Herald when it came out in opposition to such an ideal paving. For several days I have been in the Twin Cities and have made it a point to examine the asphalt paved streets in St. Paul and Minneapolis. I also talked with merchants about it. Now for the benefit of those that signed the asphalt petition with me, I would suggest that they make the same investigation.

'Cedar blocks are great compared with three-fourths of all the asphalt paving I saw. Merchants informed me that while the asphalt was excellent for the first month or so after it was put down, it simply went out in big holes after that and it is always a fight to get the asphalt companies to repair it, even with a guarantee.

"I do not know anything about this bituminous macadam, but I do know that there are worse and more expensive pavings than cedar blocks, and I am for cedar blocks or a straight macadam made of Duluth trap rock and by Duluth labor."

IN MICHIGAN.

Ore Find at Tilden Mine Made By Accident.

Bessemer—Through accident a valuable find of iron ore has been made at the Tilden mine, which will add a new lease of life to the property. A few days since Capt. W. H. Knight, the superintendent, was passing the old cave on the west line of the property, when he noticed that in one place where a portion of the wall of rock on one side of the opening had crumbled away, the ground had the appearance of being ore. Going down into the pit and making a close examination developed that the material uncovered was iron. Men were at once set to work to tunnel into the ore, which has now been found to extend eastward on the Tilden property. Years ago, when both the Tilden and Colby properties were operated by the Penokee & Gogebic Development company, the ground east of No. 1 shaft on the latter property was developed and worked up to the line between the two mines. The timbers were then taken out, and the ground was allowed to cave in. The wall of rock having been encountered from the Colby side of the line, it was considered that to search for ore any further in that direction would be useless, and the same obstacle being met with on the Tilden property at No. 6 shaft, work was also stopped there, leaving a large and supposedly barren territory between the present workings of the Tilden and those abandoned at the old Colby, undeveloped. Now a shaft house is being built just south of where the recent find of ore was made. A vertical shaft is to be put down, and drifts driven to test the extent of the ore deposit, which it is believed is very large in dimensions. It is believed by the mining men that the ore dips eastward and extends to the footfall; and if such proves the case, the discovery is one of the greatest ever made on the Gogebic range.

Escanaba—The Bay de Noquet Lumber company, which recently purchased 10,000 acres of land along the Sturgeon river from the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad company, is preparing for extensive logging operations in that section. Its new logging railroad has been completed from the river to Nahama, a distance of five miles, and will be extended for a distance of forty miles further, opening up a new farming and timber company. Locomotives and cars have been ordered and a connection with the Soo line will be made at Sturgeon.

An official of the company states that it is the purpose of the Milwaukee road to build another big ore dock adjacent to its present structure at North Escanaba. It is only in the past year or two that the road has made a bid for ore traffic, and its business in this line has reached enormous proportions.

Advices from Nahma, this county, tell of the awful fate of the 3-year-old daughter of Peter Frye. The mother was washing and left a tub of scalding water on the kitchen floor. The child in playing backed into the tub and death ensued in an hour.

Menominee—Charles Hoaglund, of Menominee, by rare presence of mind, saved his life the other day. He was at work in a mill when in some manner his clothing caught in a shaft and while he was being carried around grabbed a beam and hung on with all his might. His clothes were entirely stripped from his body and he was horribly bruised, but his life was saved.

RUHLIN

Defeated Sharkey In the Eleventh Round of London Fight.

London, June 26.—Gus Ruhlin, of Akron, Ohio, defeated Tom Sharkey, of New York, in the eleventh round before the National Sporting club last night. The fight was held in connection with the coronation sporting tournament.

Sharkey started in a slight favorite at 22 to 20. Both fighters were in the acme of condition. Sharkey's seconds were Tom Ryan, Bob Sharkey and Spike Sullivan, while Ruhlin was seconded by his brother, Billy Madden and Jem Mace.

Adopting forcing tactics Sharkey held his own in the first three rounds, although Ruhlin always managed to miss Sharkey's lightning left whenever there was any force in it. In the fourth round Sharkey was cautioned a second time for holding and although plucky, he appeared to be in trouble. Ruhlin showed great science and coolness. The fighting continued at a severe pace.

At the opening of the fifth round, Ruhlin sent his right and left to Sharkey's jaw and neck, the latter being cautioned for hitting low. Ruhlin was good on his feet and maintained a splendid defense while Sharkey was the "receiver general."

At the opening of the eleventh both men were full of fight, Sharkey trying to get in a knockout. He was punched down repeatedly but he wanted a lot of punching to finish him and Ruhlin was too tired to do it. Time after time the latter got in his right on Sharkey's body and his left on jaw, but without attaining the desired end. Sharkey rolled all over the ring and was down when the bell sounded and Ruhlin's second claimed the fight. The referee declined to allow their claim, explaining that Sharkey was only down eight seconds before the end. Sharkey's seconds, however, threw up the sponge, and Ruhlin was declared the winner of one of the most determined and desperate struggles ever witnessed at the National Sporting club.

Denver Ed Martin, the American fighter, defeated Sandy Ferguson, of Boston, in five rounds of fighting at the National Sporting club last night in a contest held in the coronation sporting tournament.

NEWSIES' BIG DAY

Picnic at Fond du Lac a Howling, Gluttonous Success.

Stuff Themselves With Watermelons and Everything In Sight.

Sports and Amusing Contests---Carrier Pigeons the Feature.

The fifth annual picnic given by The Herald for its newsboys is but a memory. The watermelons have gone, the peanuts disappeared, the races have been run and all is over in that line until Thanksgiving.

It was a jolly crowd that met in the circulation rooms of The Herald yesterday morning, 500 strong, armed with edibles and appetites. In point of numbers it was the largest picnic ever held and probably the most enjoyable one otherwise. Everything went off smoothly from the boat ride to the peanut scramble and the 500 came back safe and sound. The weather was perfect, in fact. It seems that the weather man always has a good day on hand for The Herald boys as during the five past years there has never been a bad newsboy picnic day.

A. C. Pearson, the circulator of The Herald, was in charge of the boys. He has managed them for the past ten years and is about the only man in the city that could do it successfully. With him were E. B. Fox, Wallace P. Welbanks and Manager Clow of the steamer Newsboy, besides several of the older carriers, who seemed to enjoy the expedition as much as the boys.

At promptly 7:30 yesterday morning the boys met in the circulation rooms of The Herald on Michigan street. Here Mr. Pearson made a little speech to them after which they toined in line and marched up to Superior street and down Superior street to Fifth avenue west to the dock of the steamer Newsboy.

Messrs. Clow and Nicholson, the managers of the boat, had given it over to the boys for the day and Mr. Clow was on hand to see that the boys used it. The boat seemed to be something like its namesakes with watermelon—plenty of room—and the large number were easily accommodated. There was a good deal of racket on board and people on boats in the bay had little difficulty in recognizing the passengers. Every boat in the bay saluted the youngsters both coming and going while screech after screech on the Newsboy's whistle greeted every craft that steamer down the bay.

The Newsboy pulled away from the dock at promptly 8 o'clock and took about two hours to reach Fond du Lac. There was a great deal of wind when the crowd started and lots of caps went overboard. Professor La Brosse and L. J. Gibbs furnished music on the trip while some of the newsboys displayed talent in other lines than that of selling papers. Singing by James Dodd, Harry Levine and Clifford Gullingsworth and dancing by Harry James and Harry Levine were among the features of the day. When the boat struck Fond du Lac it was about thirty seconds before a hundred or so boys were up the steep embankment that overlooks the river at that place. When they were called, it was something like an infant avalanche the way they came down.

The picnic proper was held at Chambers' Grove, where games were commenced as soon as the boat landed. A swimming race of 225 feet was won by Will Emerson, after which the baseball game was pulled off. It was between a team from the Duluth newsboys and the West Duluth base jumpers, the latter winning by a score of 3 to 2. It was a well played game and the umpire, Charles Orzekowsky, was cheered by both winners and losers after it was over.

The last dressing race was the next number on the program. In this race the boys are forced to remove part of their clothing and pile it up in one large heap. Then at a signal they go at it, and the boy dressed in his own clothes first wins. It is a very laughable contest filled with wild excitement. One lad yesterday had every one beaten with time to spare, but could not find his hat. He searched for it several minutes and finally gave it up as a bad job. Half an hour later he found it in his pocket where he had placed it in his excitement—a place where he would be sure to find it.

The fast dressing race was won by Clifford Gullings, with Frank O'Donnell second. At the end of the race Mr. Pearson had three stockings and one shoe for which he could find no owners. The leap frog race was won by Ben Bennett and Carl Berini, and the three-legged race went to Joe Steele and Henry James. Ben Bennett and Clifford Gullings took second place and Tom Furri and Fred Rickard came in third.

In the 100-yard dash (free for all), Fred Ilk came first, with Ed Ebner second and William Emerson, third. The 100-yard dash for little fellows was taken by Harold Steele, with Bessemer Steele second and Harry Olson, third.

The paper throwing contest for carriers was won by Frank Bradley, who threw 110 feet.

The fishing pole offered for the boy who caught the largest number of fish during the day was taken by Alex Janzig.

After the races were over the peanut scramble took place. Mr. Pearson placed a 5-poundsack of peanuts on his back in which a slit was cut. He ran around the grounds with the boys after him and when both were through there was not a peanut in sight.

Then came the feature of The Herald's picnics—watermelons. The first carload arrived in the city the day before the picnic and The Herald had eighty-three on hand for the boys. When the keeper of the hotel at Fond du Lac saw the load of melons going past, he sent word to Mr. Pearson that he would take all that were left over, but the boys replied with "they ain't even going to be any rinds left when we get thro." And there were not, figuratively speaking.

But the real feature of the picnic was the use of carrier pigeons to bring messages to Duluth from the picnic grounds. Henry Flynn sent up five of the little birds from his loft at 824 East Second street and they were released at different times during the day, the messages being brought to The Herald. This feature of the affair was greatly enjoyed by the boys, none of whom had ever seen homing pigeons at work and their flight was watched until they were half way to the city. The messages sent by Mr. Pearson are as follows:

9:15 a. m. Duluth Evening Herald: Over 500 boys on board steamer Newsboy on way to picnic—all well—minding finely—few hats gone overboard but no boys.

10:30 a. m. Duluth Evening Herald: Passed New Duluth, nearing Fond du Lac—no accidents, all happy—weather beautiful and wind gone down. Music, dancing and singing by the boys. Everything promises for a most successful picnic.

12:20 p. m. Duluth Evening Herald: At picnic grounds. All well, no accidents—peanuts and melons all gone.

2:20 p. m. Duluth Evening Herald: Picnic all over. Sending this by last of Henry Flynn's pigeons at dock at Fond du Lac.

The boys took great pleasure in watching the pigeons start for home and altogether the sending of the pigeons was one of the best features ever had at any of the picnics.

Every precaution possible was taken to guard the little fellows from accident and a boat lent by H. R. Patterson was in charge of two of the older carriers during the whole day but hats and appetites were about the only things lost.

On the boat on the way home every one was tired but happy. One little fellow that had eaten too much had to be taken care of a bit but it was the only case on record where any ill effects were felt, and this was not serious.

On the way home cheers were given for The Herald, and the people that run The Herald, for the steamer Newsboy and Harvey Clow, for everything and everyone and finally for "Pinky Pearson, do best ever."

When the boat landed there was a rush for the dock and half an hour later the erstwhile picnicers were on the streets with "Extry! Extry! Democrats nominate Rosing for guvner." And the fifth picnic was over!

AN OBSERVATORY.

Chance For the Location of One Here.

There is a good prospect that an observatory for the weather bureau service will shortly be established on the hill top over-looking Duluth. There has been a movement on foot for some months past looking toward this end and Bishop McGolrick, who is much interested in the project, returned recently from Washington, D. C., where he had a conference with Willis Moore, chief of the United States weather bureau service.

Acting on instructions from Chief Moore, H. W. Richardson, the local forecaster, has investigated the proposition and has strongly recommended that a complete observatory with all the instruments and apparatus be established on the brow of the hill. Mr. Richardson has hopes that the department will act favorably and that the observatory will be erected within the next two months. Ground at the top of the hill, 800 feet above the water level, and 700 feet above the zero mark of the barometer on top of the post-office building, has been secured, even if the observatory is built.

The service that could be given by means of an observatory on the hill top would be of great value to the marine interests. The hill top is frequently above the fog line and in the summer it is much warmer on the bluff than at the foot of it. The wind velocities are also greater at the top, especially the northwest winds, than below, where the hill shelters the instruments. With a better understanding of the conditions at the hill top it is reasonable to suppose that the forecaster would be better prepared to give a more correct interpretation of the relation of the force and direction of the wind to that of the weather and temperature changes. The value of the experiment will be more manifest when it is understood that there is a wide range between temperatures on Lake Superior and on the land, especially in the warmer months.

IMPROVING.

Some Work Being Done on West Superior Street.

The Business Men's association of the West End will meet at the club rooms tomorrow evening at the regular hour. At the last meeting a committee was appointed to call on the board of public works to see if something could be done in the way of putting West Superior street in better condition. The committee will report this evening, and their report will be supplemented by the fact that the board of public works has already taken action by cleaning up some of the gutters in front of the business places at the West End, and filling the largest holes in the pavement with crushed rock. The improvement is quite marked, and the business men are not backward in expressing their appreciation.

There will probably be another discussion on the matter of street paving on West Michigan and West Superior streets, and for that reason the club is anxious to have out to the meeting as many as possible of the property owners, whether they are members or not of the organization. The meetings are not secret, but are held openly by men who have the interests of the whole city at heart.

It is likely, also, that a committee of one or perhaps two of the members will be appointed to attend the meeting of the West Duluth Commercial club. Some weeks ago the idea of having delegations from each club attend the meetings of the other club, so as to bring the two civic organizations in closer touch and widen the field, was brought up by one of the West Duluth members, and was thought favorably of by the West Enders. They feel that much more good can be accomplished if the two commercial bodies work in conjunction than separately and neither being acquainted with the plans of the other.

There is another list of candidates for membership to be presented this evening. The club is having a gratifying growth in membership as well as interest, and now embraces nearly all the prominent business and professional interests at the West End. It is desired that a membership of 100 be reached, and for that reason the charter will be held open until July 1. All business and professional men and property owners are eligible to membership.

MORRIS BILL.

The Senate Has Concurred In the House Amendments.

Washington, June 26.—The Morris bill will be sent to the president for his signature in a day or two. Senator Quarles asked the senate to reconsider his request for a conference on the bill, and yesterday when it was returned to that body the house amendments were concurred in.

HAMPERS BUSINESS.

Coffee Drinking Incapacitates Some People For Business at Times.

A gentleman from McBain, Michigan, says: "Coffee drinking has cost me much, for during my life I have been many times so thoroughly put out of condition that I have been compelled to abandon business for a day or two at a time. The attacks of headache would commence on the right side behind the ear and become so severe as to totally incapacitate me for any exercise, even mental. I have frequently had to take morphine to relieve the suffering. Sour stomach troubled me and I had a nervous heart that gave me a great deal of trouble.

"Four years ago I saw an advertisement for Postum Food Coffee which recited the ill effects of coffee on the nerves. I at once decided to make the change and leave off coffee and take on Postum. The result has been all that one could expect.

"I am never constipated any more, the bilious attacks never come on except from some indiscretion such as drinking coffee, which I am foolish enough to indulge in now and then. I have no more headaches, no more sour stomach and no bilious spells. I have not been sick to my stomach or had a nervous vomiting spell in three years. Am now 56 years old, and have better health and do a better business and more comfortable than ever before in my life. I certainly attribute the change to leaving off coffee and using Postum, for I have taken no medicine to aid in making the change.

"The experiment as stated is absolutely true. I am willing, if necessary, to attach my affidavit to it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

CONTROLS ONE-THIRD

Hill Estimated to Have Traffic of That Much Mesaba Ore.

Difference of Opinion as to Amount of Ore Shown Up.

Steel Corporation's Share Much Lower Than Originally Estimated.

It is estimated by one iron man who was among the first in the Minnesota field and was a pioneer when the Mesaba range was discovered, that James J. Hill controls iron properties on the Mesaba range that contain total deposits of ore aggregating 300,000,000 tons of ore, that is, he controls the traffic. The same authority estimates the total amount of ore thus far shown up on the Mesaba range at 900,000,000 tons, so that Mr. Hill is estimated to control the traffic of one-third of the total stores of ore on this range.

Another authority considers this estimate too high all around. He doesn't think Mr. Hill controls as much ore as this by possibly 100,000,000 tons, though he is willing to admit that perhaps he controls one-third the ore body on the range. He would estimate the total amount of ore shown up at 700,000,000 tons.

As a matter of fact, the total amount of ore thus far shown up on the Mesaba is rather difficult to get at. It would be impossible to set a figure that would be acceptable to all good authorities on the subject. In the first place, the interests that own or control the largest share of the deposits keep strictly to themselves just what they have shown up. Preliminary exploring operations, an which many of the properties are sold, are so superficial in character that it is said the people into whose hands the properties finally land for mining purposes show up considerably more ore than had been looked for. These results are naturally kept quiet for business reasons. In consequence it is claimed by some that one estimate is almost as good as another.

The wonder of the statement concerning Mr. Hill is that he is conceded to control one-third of the ore in sight on the Mesaba. A great deal of this iron was acquired when he bought the Wright & Davis road and lands several years ago for $6,000,000. The same property would sell today for a number of times that figure.

In this connection there is considerable speculation by iron men as to just what proportion of the ore in sight in the Lake Superior region is controlled by the United States Steel corporation. When the combination was made it was stated on what seemed to be official authority that the corporation controlled 80 per cent of the ore in sight in the Lake Superior region. That statement is used sometimes now, but not by men who are at all in touch with the situation. An estimate made last winter was that the steel corporation controlled 50 per cent. If that were true at that time, it is claimed that it cuts considerably less than a controlling factor in the ore actually shown up to date. The rapid discoveries on the Mesaba the past two years and the fact that the steel corporation has kept pretty well out of the buying field, on the theory that too much money is asked for iron properties, lead some to believe that this interest has considerably less than a majority of the ore deposit tonnage in this region. Still, while the steel corporation makes no secret of its position that iron properties will soon be selling for less money than they can be bought today, and that it possesses sufficient supplies to last it a long while, some people consider that it may be making some purchases under cover. It is even intimated that the McCumber forty has been acquired on behalf of the steel cvorporation. It had been supposed that this deal was in the interest of absolutely independent people.

The Stevenson mine, according to the Mesaba Ore, has thus far this season shipped 400,000 tons of ore, and a third steam shovel, with a capacity of 125 tons, the largest of its kind in existence, will soon be placed in operation. It is explained that the Drake & Stratton comuany is stripping the surface from the part formerly worked underground, and where there is a body of 8,000,000 tons of ore. It is said that the ore is assaying up to 6 per cent and low in phosphorus. The body at this point is much wider, and it is said that uncovering it will open up such a large, easily-worked area that it will be possible to add very largely to the rate at which shipping is being done.

The Donora Mining company is opening up as rapidly as possible the Sweeney mine, just west of the Mahoning, the lease of which was bought of E. F. Sweeney and J. B. Adams. The mine will ship this year over the Eastern Minnesota.

The Grant mine, near Buhl, began shipping last week 50,000 tons of ore. It is a Jones & Laughlin property and is operated by Capt. Harry Roberts. The ore is raised from an 80-foot shaft.

The Morrow, which is being stripped for Joseph Sellwood by Halverson & Richards, will begin shipping eary in July.

It is said that 1000 cars of ore are daily shipped out of the Hibbing district.

AMUSEMENTS.

Kathryn Kidder's revival of "The Country Girl" has already awakened much interest in theatrical circles. For several years, it is said, this actress has been urged by her friends to give an impersonation of Peggy, the heroine of David Garrick's immortal comedy. Her admirers claim that she possesses in a marked degree the characteristics necessary for a successful portrayal of this most amusing role. Miss Kidder's success is reported to have exceeded the anticipations even of her most sanguine friends. She is already regarded with high favor in this city and an audience of large dimensions will undoubtedly greet her when she appears here in her revival of "The Country Girl," at the Lyceum next Monday. Several artists of note will be seen in Miss Kidder's support, among whom are Robert Ferguson, Marion Ashworth, Seymour Stratton and T. C. O'Brien.

Here From China.

Rev. C. A. Salquist and Mrs. Salquist, returned missionaries from Shanghai, China, where they were sent by the American Baptist Missionary union, are in the city, the guests of Rev. F. Linden of the Bethel Baptist church. Next Sunday evening they will both speak at the Bethel of missionary work in China, and will dress in the full costume of the people there. Rev. and Mrs. Salquist are preparing to go back to Shanghai in the near future.

CHURCH CLAIMS.

Palma Wants to Know How They Were Settled.

New York, June 25.—President Palma and cabinet have decided, says a Herald dispatch from Havana, to request Minister Quesada to obtain from Washington data explanatory of Gen. Woods' settlement of the church claims. The Cubans invoke the Foraker law and question the right of any permanent arrangement. The Planters' association has petitioned congress to free all estates from taxation for five years and private mortgage loan and banking institutions for fifty years. A proposition has been presented to congress to grant admittance free of duty for the next twenty years of all iron and material used in the homes of the poorer classes.

BREACH OF CONTRACT.

Allegation of It Made In District Court Suit.

C. A. Remington, A. H. Powers and G. A. R. Simpson, who comprise the Remington Lumber company, on the range, have brought action against Theodore Murdock and his bondsmen, in district court, to recover money from Murdock from an alleged breach of contract and to recover from his bondsmen, the amount of his bond.

The complaint, which was filed with the clerk of courts today, recites the following allegations: That Sept. 14, 1901, the defendant Murdock entered into contract with the trustees of school district No. 27 to build a new school house at the Stevenson mine, which was to cost $1119; that Sept. 15 to Oct. 5, the plaintiff lumber company delivered material to the defendant to the value of $657.93, and that the defendant has paid only $147.83 of that amount. Judgment is asked for the balance, $510.14, with interest at 6 per cent from Oct. 5, and a judgment of $400 against Murdock's bondsmen, G. W. Hard and J. J. Stewart.

Tremendous Millinery Purchase Sale!

IT will be impossible to increase the interest and enthusiasm manifested in our millinery sale today. Never were there such throngs at any previous millinery sale in this city—never such buying—for never before has any store in Minnesota given such stupendous values at the very opening of the summer season. The millinery is stylish and stunning, and priced at about one-fourth its value.

The sale is an outcome of a special purchase made by our millinery buyer of 1272 trimmed hats from Frederick Michel of New York—one of the largest millinery importers and manufacturers in America. The hats are high grade, of excellent design, newest Paris ideas, and were bought at an extremely low price. We have assorted them in three grand lots.

Lot 1. 95c

Trimmed hats worth from $2.35 to $3.25 selling on bargain counter 1 at only 95c.

Lot 2. $1.59

Trimmed hats worth from $3.50 to $6.50 selling on bargain counters 2 and 3 at $1.50.

Lot 3. $2.69

Trimmed hats worth from $6.75 to $9.50 selling on counters in ladies' reception room, 2d floor.

Every hat shown here is fresh from New York, and designed and made by Frederick Michel — none trimmed by our milliners. Do not fail to attend this Grand Opening and sale of summer millinery—the equal of which has never been approached in Minnesota.

Flood of Oratory in the Senate.

Now that the isthmian canal bill is practically settled by the action of the house conferees it is interesting to review the oratory that has been expended on this measure. An examination of the Congressional Record during the progress of the debate on the isthmian canal bill shows some interesting facts about speeches. They filled 420 columns of the Record, as follows: Senator Morgan's eight speeches, 172 columns, sixteen speeches by fourteen senators, 248 columns. Senator Hanna's two speeches in favor of the Panama route filled 42 columns in the Record, Senator Mitchell occupying the same amount of space with two speeches for Nicaragua. The entire 420 columns were filled as follows: Senator Morgan, eight speeches, 172 columns; Senator Hanna, two speeches, 42 columns; Senator Mitchell, two speeches, 42 columns; Senator Harris, two speeches, 29 columns; Senator Turner, one speech, 27 columns; Senator Fairbanks, one speech, 15 columns; Senator Cullom, one speech, 11 columns; Senator Kittredge, one speech, 13 columns; Senator Perkins, one speech, 20 columns; Senator Gallinger, one speech, 13 columns; Senator Spooner, one speech, 13 columns; Senator Teller, one speech, 3 columns; Senator Hawley, one speech, 1 column; Senator Pettus, one speech, 9 columns; Senator Clark, of Montana, one speech, 2 columns. Total, 420 columns. This statement does not include the speeches of Senators Stewart and Allison, which have not yet appeared in the Record.

The President and the Navy.

It is interesting to learn that President Roosevelt takes a keen interest in naval affairs and that it will have a good effect towards correcting the abuses of the service. From now on according to an order issued by th president the amount and nature of sea service performed by an officer who comes up for promotion will be the subject of rigid scrutiny. Even if the board of examining officers should recommend, as provided by law, the advancement of an officer, the president may set aside their judgment if he thinks proper. While the great bulk of navy officers have gone to sea in their regular turn, yet there are several cases where some have succeeded for years and years in dodging sea service, and holding fast to soft places on shore. During the past twenty years, shore jobs have multiplied under one pretense or another and now when the cry has gone forth that there are not enough officers to man the ships, inquiry has developed that fact that there are quite a number of land billets that could be abolished without injury to the service. The navy department is crowded with naval folk doing work that used to be performed by civilians, who, by the way, were not educated at government expense and the different navy yards, particularly Washington and Brooklyn, also show a very large number of officers performing more or less civilian work. It is plainly evident that reform is needed, and the order of the president is an indication that it will be attended to.

THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

The Democrats have nominated Hon. L. A. Rosing, of Cannon Falls, as their candidate for governor of Minnesota. The nomination was made unanimously and with an enthusiasm that augurs well for Mr. Rosing receiving the united support of the party in his canvass for chief executive of the state. Mr. Rosing is well equipped to discharge the duties of the gubernatorial office, his lengthy service in the councils of the political party with which he is allied and the experience which he gained as private secretary to Governor Lind having fitted him admirably for the position. Mr. Rosing is in the prime of life, having been born at Malmo, Sweden, in 1862. He came to this country with his parents when a child and has been a resident of Minnesota ever since. In a business way he has been quite successful, having a large general store at Cannon Falls, Goodhue county, and he has found time to be actively interested in politics. As chairman of the Democratic state central committee he has displayed excellent ability as an organizer, and he will make a vigorous campaign. With the conceded weakness of the Republican candidate, Governor Van Sant, and with thorough organization, Mr. Rosing's chances of a victory in November are excellent.

In a certain sense, Mr. Rosing was the logical candidate after the positive declination by Mr. Lind to again accept a nomination for governor, and while the delegates from St. Louis, Carlton and Aitkin counties made an attempt to secure the nomination of Senator Charles O. Baldwin, of Duluth, whose great personal strength in this section of the state would have cut deeply into the normal Republican majorities, they found the sentiment of the other delegates so strongly in favor of Mr. Rosing that they withdrew Mr. Baldwin's name from consideration and made the nomination unanimous without even the formality of a ballot.

The other places on the ticket were filled with men of acknowledged strength and ability. For lieutenant-governor, Mayor Robert A. Smith, of St. Paul, has been chosen, and his name will be a tower of strength to the ticket. Spurgeon Odell, of Marshall, named for secretary of state; Albert G. Leick, of Owatonna, the nominee for state auditor, and George P. Jones, of Rock county, selected for clerk of the supreme court, are all men of high standing in their sections of the state. For attorney general, the Democrats are fortunate in securing the candidacy of one of the best lawyers in the state, Frank D. Larrabee, of Minneapolis, while in Joseph L. Meyers, of Little Falls, Morrison county, they have a strong candidate for treasurer. Maj. J. M. Bowler, of Hennepin county, is well fitted for the place on the railroad commission to which he has been nominated.

The platform adopted by the convention is a strong and ringing declaration of Democratic principles that is in line with the general sentiment of Minnesota, and it alone should bring about the election of the whole ticket. In brief, it endorses the national platform and the administration of Governor Lind; states that the Democratic insistence of our pledge toward Cuba has been carried out and demands the same action with reference to the Philippines; denounces trusts and demands that the tariff be removed from articles controlled by trusts; opposes subsidies of every kind; favors reciprocity with Canada; favors postal savings banks; favors an income tax; opposes government by injunction; condemns the state administration for failure to prevent a merger of the iron range roads; condemns the management of the state prison twine plant; indorses the gross earnings bill; condemns the state administration for failure to regulate freight rates. It is a well written platform, conservative in tone and yet neglecting to grapple boldly with none of the prominent questions before the people.

PANAMA CANAL WINS.

The house conferees on the isthmian canal bill have agreed to the senate measure, and there is now every assurance that the bill which provides for the Panama canal will become a law. In view of this fact, which was expected, wealthy contractors and capitalists are already in the field to secure the work of digging the canal. Two or three years ago, when the Walker commission was in Nicaragua surveying the canal route, a number of engineers in private employ went along with the party. They made a reconnaissance also, both at Nicaragua and Panama, and submitted a private report for the purpose of furnishing information on which a syndicate of New York capitalists proposed to submit bids for constructing the big waterway. It is learned that these same interests are again looking into the matter.

A number of inquiries have been made of the Walker commission recently for facts relating to the Panama canal, and the belief at the commission headquarters is that one or more syndicates will be formed with the object of getting the contract for digging the ditch. There is no certainty at this time as to how the canal shall be constructed or under whose direction. The senate bill provides that it shall be done under the general direction of a commission, which shall be controlled by the president. It seems to be the universal understanding that a commission will be appointed, with Admiral John Walker at its head, as this officer has been chief of all the government commissions which have recently reported on an isthmian waterway. There are three plans for digging the canal, any one of which may be adopted. It may be decided that the government shall do the work, in which event the active management will be placed in the hands of the army engineers. If a syndicate of responsible men shall be formed, with competent engineers engaged and money enough to build the canal, the government would consider the advisability of turning the entire project over to it. The third plan is to divide the route into a number of sections and give out contracts for completing these divisions to various contractors.

These are a few of the points that will be discussed by the commission which is to be appointed as soon as the bill is passed. There will be no trouble in getting men to do the work. There are 2000 Jamaica negroes at work there now, and they will all remain. It is good news to know that a settlement of this long-drawn-out controversy is at hand and that there are contractors ready and anxious to take up the work as soon as possible.

GEN. SMITH'S CASE.

It is possible, even probable, that the court which heard the case of Gen. Jacob H. Smith found him guilty after all. There is reason to believe that the verdict will at least call for a severe reprimand from the president, although the general opinion is that Smith was acquitted. It must be borne in mind, in considering the Smith case, that Smith, when faced with his reputed orders to Waller, made a plea analogous to "confession and avoidance" in civil practice. He admitted having given Waller oral orders to "kill and burn," to encumber himself with no prisoners, and the like; but pleaded that these were justified by the code of war accepted by civilized nations.

The gravamen of his offense was therefore his gross—perhaps criminal—indiscretion in giving sweeping orders which by the inflections of his voice and other attendant conditions might easily have led a junior officer into the commission of great cruelty, and, especially the untimeliness of issuing any orders of that sort immediately after a surprise and massacre like that which had inflamed the minds of the American troops against the people of Samar. Of this indiscretion the best qualified observers have no doubt the court found the general guilty; and, though it may not have made his penalty as severe as some of his critics here would like, the way is unquestionably open for the president to put an adequate finishing touch upon the incident, which will leave its lasting mark as a warning in the future. The assignment of Smith to a post of responsibility here is readily reconciled with this view. Smith had asked to be relieved and transferred before his trouble began, and arrangements had been made accordingly. When he was about starting for America the order for his return was suspended by the summons of the court. Having finished his trial, there was nothing further to detain him in Manila, and he came home to carry out the rest of the original program.

The findings of the court have not been promulgated; therefore, as far as his routine relations with the army are concerned, his status is unchanged from what it was before the trial. As the findings presumably will not compel his degradation, he may take his reprimand or whatever follows, and continue to hold his command—just as Gen. Miles holds his in spite of what the president and secretary of war have publicly said to him. This is doubtless considered by those in charge to be the best way of ending the affair, for there is no one who believes that Gen. Smith was actuated by other than the best motives in issuing his order.

The New York Tribune avers, as the result of a careful investigation by its reporters of street affairs and a study of the conduct of departments, that the Low administration is keeping its pledges; that the people are getting a dollar's worth of service for every dollar expended; that the "grafter" is practically done away with, "Deveryism" largely a thing of the past, the dives gradually but surely being wiped out—and so on. "In a word, New York city is a good deal nearer what it ought to be as a result of the efforts of Mayor Low and his colleagues." All of which must be regarded as hopeful.

It is officially stated at London that the deaths from the plague in India from September, 1896, to March, 1902, are known to number 825,000, and the unrecorded mortality is calculated to bring the total up to a million. The worst of it is that the plague continues to flourish. In the Bombay presidency, during the first three months of this year, the deaths number 62,667, against 17,806 in the same time last year. In the Punjab there were 515 deaths in the first quarter of 1900, 15,245 in the same time last year, and 42,788 in the single month of March this year.

For example, says the Springfield Republican, Charles M. Schwab, president of the United States Steel corporation, is a member of the civic federation's board of arbitration. What is his attitude in respect to the coal strike? If he favors arbitration in industrial disputes, he cannot be in sympathy with coal corporations, and if he is in sympathy with them he cannot favor arbitration. If he does not favor arbitration, what is he doing on the arbitration board?

SAID IN FUN.

Washington Star: "When a man gits good an' mad," said Uncle Eben, "he's li'ble to 'magine he's a volcano when he ain' nuffin' but a firecracker."

Chicago Post: "What's the matter with the trains on this road?" asked the impatient traveler on a small line.

"Nothing," answered the conductor.

"But you aren't anywhere near on time."

"No, I s'pose not. But we didn't make the time table."

Philadelphia Press: Tess—What a queer remark that man made about the bride.

Tess—He said: "How natural she looks. Don't you think so?"

Jess—Mere force of habit. He's an undertaker, you know.

Detroit Free Press: "Sir!" said the grocer, bridling up, "do you mean to accuse me of putting some chicory into my coffee?"

"Not at all," replied the customer, coolly. "I always give you credit for putting some coffee into the chicory."

Baltimore American: She—I can't imagine anything more vulgar than the use of a $500 diamond stud to adorn a $1 negligee shirt.

He—Oh! I don't know; it seems to me the average woman who goes in for $500 ear-rings uses them to ornament a 30-cent face.

Washington Star: "You object to that man because he used money to secure your election?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum; "that's not the point. He didn't use it. He wasted it."

Chicago Tribune: "Can't I pay you just as well after you have cured me, doctor?" asked the caller with the ailment.

"By no means, madam. You might fail or forget to do it then. My terms are cash for every visit."

"I see you are not a real faith doctor, sir. Good morning."

IN THE COUNTRY.

He went into the country
To live a life of ease;
To watch the cows a-grazing,
To see the busy bees.
His farmer landlord met him
At the station and explained
The beauties of the scenery—
For that he was well trained.

A week was all he needed
To open up his eyes
To the fact that in the country
You can get a good surprise.

The cream, condensed, was blue;
The honeycomb (made by machine)
Was filled with sweetened glue.
The meat came from Chicago,
And the bread was bakers' bread,
While the mosquitoes, fat and juicy,
Hailed from Jersey, it was said!
He came back to the city
In a buzzing 'lectric car,
While the farmers, in the autos,
Waved him good-bye from afar.
And now, when others ask him,
Does he really think it pays,
"If you can eat good scenery
It is all right, sure!" he says.

LOOK OUT FOR DULUTH!

St. Peter Journal: It is about time for somebody to say something decent and something fair about the iron range, and for everybody to quit libelling it. It is about time for everybody to begin to understand that its worth in revenues to the state is about as much as the rest of the state combined.

It is about time for Republicans, particularly, to have it borne in on them that, but for the iron range, W. R. Merriam, David H. Clough and Sam R. Van Sant would have been defeated candidates for governor and that there would not have been a Republican congressman from the Sixth district since that district was organized.

It is about time for laboring men to look into the labor question in the mines of that section, where there has never been a strike, or provocation for one, and where the men are better paid, better housed and better treated than in any mining section on earth.

It is about time for tax payers to realize that two or three little stub ore roads, each less than a hundred miles long pay about a third of all the railroad taxes of the state, and that the mines they tap will dip about three-quarters of a million dollars into the state treasury next year.

It is about time for all of us to quit hollering down a rain barrel and settle down to the sensible and logical conclusion that a good many of us will live to see Duluth the metropolis of the state and the gateway to the Northwest. With her battlemented cliffs hewn down to meet the requirements of her ever growing commerce; with her towering buildings pushing the lake back into itself, and her docks and elevators groaning with their burden of precious millions; with her public spirited citizens, brisk and snappy as the air they breathe—with all this and all these, it only becomes a question of time when St. Paul and Minneapolis become mere feeders to the real metropolis and the principal consumer of the fruits of the farm—Duluth.

Look out for Duluth!

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York press: Generally country life is stone dead.

It is easier for most men to be a rich wife's husband than a wife's rich husband.

When anybody interrupts a pair of spooners in the corner of the plazza they act like a man who gets cut off at the telephone.

It takes a woman to get straight information at first hand and then give it out at second hand looking as straight as a bent spring.

You can win a woman by praising the way she manages her house, but the way to tickle a man to death is to envy his taste in neckties.

Now Altogether.

Minneapolis Journal: Hats off to the gallant Boers! They fought the last fight in the old era of independence for petty states and though losing they fought as few men have fought in this world of wars. They have humbled the world's mightiest empire, they have won honorable terms for themselves and they have given the world new material for heroic legend and tradition.

Merely a Time Saver.

Baltimore American: Mr. Hanna finds it a great deal more pleasant to write occasional letters to kind friends, declining to be consuered a candidate, than to waste his energies this early in the day in the effort to keep a boom on its legs.

Not One of Those Haughty Booms.

Washington Post: However, the Mason boom is not proud. Even if it is compeued to tour the south on the bumpers of a freight car, it will have its full share of the fun.

Succor Promptly Given.

Saturday Evening Post: Uncle Sam does not look for precedents, or at the color of the flag, when human beings are to be succored and saved. In doing more for the French islands in the West Indies than France did herself, this country again showed the same prompt and generous sympathy that fed the starving of Ireland and mitigated the famines of Russian and India.

Her Letter

By H. Mackenzie.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

"What have you got to say to me?"

"Nothing."

"Why did you send for me?"

A flush of red rose to her face.

"I thought, yesterday, when I wrote, that I had something to say, but now"—

"You have changed your mind, Miss Austin? That is a woman's privilege and you have used it ruthlessly."

"Yes, I know. Forgive me. I meant to do my best."

He frowned and his expression was not good to see.

"Her best." And this is what she had done.

He had thought himself one of the happiest men alive, engaged to be married to this girl, Eva Austin. He loved her passionately, and believed her to be the ideal type of womanhood, high principled, truthful, gentle—in fact, almost faultless.

Then came the blow to his faith. She had written, to break off her engagement, a short letter which was a masterpiece of polite reserve and feminine cruelty. She regretted if she had caused him any pain—oh, yes, regrets cost nothing—she was conscious of the honor that he had paid her—she wished to remain his friend—she returned his ring.

Capt. Humphrey traveled many miles to demand an explanation of his affianced wife. He was refused admittance, his letters were returned unopened by her sister—Eva was ill and could not write. The truth stared him in the face; in plain English he had been hopessly jilted. Then he vowed to forget Eva Austin's existence and congratulated himself upon his freedom from domestic ties.

Today, as he stood in the parlor of the hotel to which she had summoned him, he had so far overlooked his determination to forget her existence that his anger was waxing fierce against her. Why had she brought him here? To be made a fool of a second time? No, and a thousand times, no.

"If you did your best, Miss Austin, may I ask what your worst would have been?"

She moved quickly, almost as if he had struck her.

"I cannot explain. If you knew how it all happened you would perhaps believe—you might perhaps think a little better of me."

He stood bolt upright, speechless. He was struggling with his pride; in his heart of hearts he was longing to take her in his arms, to tell her that for him she was the only woman in the world, with all her faults.

Her faults. They were unpardonable.

"I should be glad to think well of any lady," he said at last, lightly, "more especially of a lady who once honored me with her friendship."

"Yes," she said gently, "it was because of that friendship that I wrote. I had a favor to ask you. Now—it is not necessary. I am sorry."

There was a brief silence, then she said: "There are changes in our family. Ella is going to be married; the engagement is very sudden; it was only settled this morning."

Ella was the younger sister of whom he had so often been jealous in those forgotten days.

"Allow me to congratulate you."

He bowed and turned to go; the interview was a farce.

At the door she stopped him.

"Do you start—tomorrow?"

"Yes."

"Good-bye. We, that is, Ella and I, wish you a happy return."

Considering their former intimacy, this was barely the farewell that good manners demanded, nothing more.

His hand was on the lock. Something else she said, her voice was almost inaudible:

"I will pray for you."

He shut the door quietly; there should be no melodramatic display of temper on his part. Arrived at the bottom of the stairs he missed his hat. Had he left his purse or his watch in that room no power on earth would have sent him back—but his hat.

He ran back hastily and knocked. There was no answer. So much the better. He entered the room and seized his property. Turning to go, he heard the rustle of draperies. She was there, standing on the spot where he had left her, with her hands clasped to her face.

* * * * *

Under the star-lit sky he had lain for hours. The fight was over. In the distance he could discern the figures of the wounded and the dead. His body was as hot and parched as the earth itself. All Samar seemed dying or thirst. The victory was with him men—so much he knew before he fell. And now, patience. They would find him by-and-by. If not, then the end could not be far off, not very far. Patience. The stars flickered and faded. He saw a room, with pale pink walls, flowers, a work basket on the table—nothing escaped his notice. Eva was there; she had on a gray dress and a gold chain round her neck.

Were there tears in her eyes? There were tears in his. "I will pray for you."

That is what she said at parting, and he had pretended not to hear her. He saw her again praying for the man who had not condescended to accept her good wishes.

In the old days he had often smiled at her earnestness, and called her a little Puritan; in later times he had raged at her as a hypocrite.

Do hypocrites look like that?

What did it matter what he called her? His one wish was that she should know that he died blessing her. With infinite difficulty he found his pocketbook and wrote her name on the flyleaf. His hand trembled; before he slipped from his grasp he scrawled feebly: "God bless you, Eva."

The orderly brought a bundle of letters into the shed which had been hastily converted into a hospital. The men crowded eagerly round him; even Capt. Humphrey, who was "dangerously" wounded, turned an anxious face toward the messenger.

The captain recognized the shape and color of the envelope that was brought to his bedside; the handwriting, too, was familiar. It was Ella Austin's.

"Now that I am happily married I must free my conscience and tell you our secret. Think as badly of me as you can, Eva sacrificed herself for me. I told her that I cared for you, that is why she wrote that letter. Afterward when she was ill. I sent back her letters without her knowledge."

The lines jumped up and down before the sick man's eyes; he read on:

"Eva wanted to put things right between you and me; that is why she sent for me before you left. Didn't you guess? She found out her mistake before you came and took all the blame on herself to shield me. I should not, but I can't bear to think that you are still misjudging her."

* * * * * * *

"Will he pull through, doctor?" asked a young officer that night. He it was who had found the captain and brought him into shelter.

"Pull through? Yes, now his mind's at rest."

"What's he been worrying about?"

"What do we all worry about, eh?"

The officer did not answer—he wasn't going to tell his secrets to the wily doctor.

"The first night he wanted to risk his life writing or dictating letters home. Now, I think he's satisfied with the news that today's mail brought him. Look at him."

"He's asleep," said the other in a whisper; "and, doctor, he's got a letter tucked away under his pillow."

Some Terrors Yet to Come.

Baltimore American: It is too early in the year to hope for a surcease of horrors and a refreshing period of rest and quiet. The terrors of the Fourth of July are yet to come, when the possession of nerves is looked on as a distinct lack of patriotism.

Beats the Horse in One Way.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: Edison has perfected a storage battery by which the automobile can be made to do all the work of a horse. The recent automobile accidents show that it can do a good deal more than a horse in spreading destruction.

Facts Blight Theories.

Baltimore American: The coal trust refuses to raise wages, but the independent operators have granted the increase. Thus do facts conflict with the magazine articles and theories showing how great combinations will better the condition of the laboring man.

DEGREES

Conferred Upon Well Known Men By Various Institutions.

Hartford, Conn., June 26.—Among the honorary degrees conferred by Trinity college is that of doctor of letters upon Richard Burton, formerly professor of English in the University of Minnesota.

Middletown, Conn., June 26.—Wesleyan university has conferred the honorary degree of doctor of laws upon Edmund J. James, president of Northwestern university.

Middlebury, Vt., June 26.—Middlebury college has conferred the honorary degree of doctor of divinity on Rev. Calvin B. Moody, of Osage, Iowa.

Burlington, Vt., June 26.—Hon. Hiram Stevens, of St. Paul, has been created doctor of laws by an honorary degree of the University of Vermont. Prof. William N. Ferrin, of Pacific university, Oregon, received the degree of doctor of divinity.

Williamstown, Mass., June 26.—Among the honorary degrees just conferred was that of LL. D. upon Gen. Leonard Wood, by Williams college.

FREIGHT HANDLERS

Demand Increase of Ten Per Cent In Wages.

Chicago, June 26.—The Freight Handlers and Warehousemen's union, which has on its rolls 7000 men who handle freight in 100 warehouses used by the twenty-four railroads entering Chicago, made a demand yesterday for a 10 per cent increase in wages. They claim to be able to prevent any freight from entering or leaving Chicago freight sheds. Should there be a strike, it is said, the teamsters' organization, although adverse to a strike by the freight handlers, would almost inevitably be drawn into it. As the railroads six months ago granted an increase, it is said they are not in the mood to meet the new demand.

SECURITIES ARE LOST.

Man Has Competence But Cannot Find It.

New York, June 26.—Almost blind and destitute, yet having at least a competence, if he could find where it is, is the incongruous situation in which Frank Meade, son of the late well known sporting man, William H. Meade, finds himself. Previous to his death last January, Meade was thought to be possessed of considerable wealth. So far as is known he owned no real estate but he had securities which he kept in a safe deposit vault. Where these securities are is the problem the son is trying to solve, but thus far he has not found the slightest trace of their hiding place.

BLOOD POISON

"I cure Blood Poison by my Original Perfected System of Anti-Toxine Treatment, thus avoiding the horrible effects of Poisonous Drugs."

The longest established, most successful and reliable specialist in diseases of men, as medical diplomas, licenses and newspaper records will show.

THESE ARE YOUR SYMPTOMS:

On account of its frightful hideousness, Syphilitic Blood Poison is commonly called the king of venereal diseases. It may be hereditary or contracted. Once the system is tainted with it, the disease may manifest itself in the form of scrofula, eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, eruptions or copper-colored spots on face or body, little ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, swollen tonsils, falling out of the hair or eyebrows, and finally a leprous like decay of the flesh and bones.

OUR ELECTRO-MEDICAL TREATMENT

improves the patient from the beginning. Our special treatment for Blood Poison is practically the result of my life work, and is endorsed by the best physicians of America and Europe. It contains no dangerous drugs or injurious medicines of any kind. It goes to the very bottom of the disease and forces out every particle of impurity. Soon every sign and symptom disappears completely and forever. The blood, the tissue, the flesh, the bones, and the whole system are cleansed, purified and restored to perfect health, and the patient prepared anew for the duties and pleasures of life.

We do not treat all diseases, but we cure all we treat; we treat men only and cure them to stay cured. We cure to stay cured Varicocele, Stricture, Lost Manhood, Atrophied or Shrunken Organs, Syphilitic Blood Poison, Nervo Sexual Debility, Rupture, Kidney, Urinary Diseases, and all associate diseases and weakne sses of men. We charge nothing for private counsel and give to each patient a LEGAL CONTRACT to hold for our promises. Is it not worth your while to investigate a cure that has made life anew to multitudes of men, and to which countless tongues gladly testify? If you cannot call at our office, write your symptoms fully.

tion simply got the preparatory work of the gathering out of the way and led up to the real business. L. A. Rosing, chairman of the state central committee, called the convention to order at 12:30 o'clock. There was a large representation of the Democracy of the state, and the body of the vast auditorium was comfortably filled.

Secretary H. T. Poehler read the call, until by motion its reading was dispensed with, after which the convention settled down to its work in a business-like way. Humphrey Barten, of St. Paul, nominated for temporary chairman Senator Peter McGovern, of Wabasha. The selection of the state committee, and he was unanimously elected. He was received with applause when he was introduced, and he made a brief address, in which he said that the convention represented the twentieth century Democracy, but not a new Democracy, because the principles of the party are now as they always have been, and the talk of a new Democracy is not founded on fact. The principles of Democracy are those on which this republic is founded.

In touching upon state topics, the mention of John Lind aroused a whirlwind of enthusiasm among the delegates. The speaker showed that Lind had recommended tax reforms that might have been accomplished by a capable legislature's getting together for a short time and amending the existing tax laws. His successor went him one better, and a tax commission, a tax code and an expensive special session of the legislature were the result. All that the special session did was to discuss the ways of burdening the taxpayers. A change is needed in state affairs, and it is due to the people of the state that a legislature be elected that will provide adequate tax reform.

C. M. King, of Wright county, was made temporary secretary, and W. J. Rohr, of Polk county, was made his assistant. The convention saved much time by doing away with the appointment of a committee on credentials. Lars Rand, of Minneapolis, moved that the temporary organization be made permanent, which was carried unanimously, and the convention took a recess.

At 2:30 it was called together again, and as the platform committee was not yet ready to report, C. D. O'Brien, of St. Paul, made a speech. He wanted to know what good were such public servants as the legislature that fiddled away six weeks last winter. Touching upon the case of Lind, he said the Democrats had troubles of their own, but they were bearing them cheerfully. While it was unfortunate that the standard-bearer of the party during three campaigns was unable to run again, Democracy existed before any of those living today, and it will exist when they are gone. The convention should meet the situation squarely. There will be a list of candidates that the party can honor and trust. He honored John Lind as much as anybody, and he might claim to be the original Lind man, but the Democracy of the state is bigger than any man, and the convention should elect a proper man to fill his place and go on with the fight.

L. L. Brown, of Winona, presented the set of resolutions prepared by the committee, and they were read by J. S. Pardee, the secretary of the committee. They were adopted by the convention with practical unanimity, on lone vote from Ramsey county coming in.

H. H. Hawkins, of St. Louis county, moved that the convention proceed to the nomination of a candidate for governor, and that the roll of the counties be called. This carried and everybody braced himself to see an interesting fight.

They saw none.

Aitkin county gave place to St. Louis, and T. J. McKeon, of Duluth, took the platform and nominated Senator Baldwin in a ringing speech in which he eulogized the Duluth man in unmeasured terms. He said that as nations rise from small beginnings into mighty empires, so men rise into foremost places among their fellows by their merits. The Democratic party breeds such men, for it stands for man and all that that word means. St. Louis county came with forty-five votes for John Lind. (Applause.) But as he is out of the question, St. Louis county presented the name of a man upon whom all could unite. Mr. McKeon told of the professional and political career of Senator Baldwin, and as an instance of his ability as a vote-getter cited his election for state senator in a strong Republican district.

Blue Earth county gave place to Ramsey, and there was something of a surprise when C. D. O'Brien, of St. Paul, placed the name of L. A. Rosing in nomination in a stirring speech. He said he had worked with ability only equalled by his modesty, and if the mantle of John Lind is to fall on any shoulder it should fall on his.

Carlton county seconded the nomination of Senator Baldwin.

Carver county seconded the nomination of Rosing. So did Chippewa. So did Chisago. So did Dakota. So did Fillmore, Freeborn, Goodhue, Houston, Hubbard, Itasca. It was a flood. There was soon no question of the way in which it was going. The strength of the man from Cannon Falls surprised everybody. All the rest was mere formality.

A. B. Choate, of Hennepin county, placed the name of Frank D. Larrabee before the convention. The Rosing flood continued until Lake county was reached, and she seconded the nomination of Baldwin.

A mild sensation came when Otter Tail county was reached. Editor Harry Wheelock, of Fergus Falls, arose and said that Otter Tail county had been thinking it over and had determined to make a monkey of itself, to use an expression of one of the previous speakers characterizing the effect of a nomination of John Lind. He placed the name of Lind before the convention. He said that if Lind was nominated by this convention and by another a week or two later he could not refuse.

The stampede did not come. It was too late. The name met with applause. It was faint at first, and merely polite.

Then it caught the crowd and spread. In a moment the house was in a tumult, but it blew itself out in that way, though an excited Ramsey county man wanted to nominate Lind by acclamation. The next county called seconded the nomination of Rosing.

Frank D. Larrabee had been trying to get on his feet for several minutes, being held down by the members of the Hennepin delegation who sat near him, but at last he got away and reached the platform, where he made a speech for Rosing. He said he could not make the speech he had been led to expect he could make on that platform, but he was better pleased the way it was. He said the perpetuity of the institutions of the republic is threatened. Not even the schools are left to preserve it, and there are no longer free press and free pulpit. Steps toward the restriction of suffrage are being taken, and it will not be long before the Republicans will be demanding that the man without property shall not vote to help govern the man with property. The efforts in the South to prevent the voting of negroes is Republican, not Democratic.

"We fall in line!" announced T. J. McKeon, of Duluth, at this point. There was great applause as St. Louis county withdrew her candidate in favor of Rosing.

H. H. Hawkins, of St. Louis county, moved that the further call of the roll be dispensed with, and the nomination of Leonard A. Rosing be made by a rising vote.

Harry Wheelock, of Fergus Falls, got up and said Otter Tail had thought it over again and concluded to withdraw its nomination of Lind.

F. L. McGhee, the St. Paul colored lawyer, got into the game with a ringing speech.

There was then but one candidate in the field, and the convention arose as one man to nominate him.

T. J. McKeon, F. D. Larrabee and Dr. Stone, of St. Paul, were named members of a committee to notify Mr. Rosing of what had happened to him. He was sitting in the back part of the hall, and he was immediately escorted to the platform, where he made a sensible talk. He said in part:

"I feel deeply the many kind things that have been said about me, and I wish to thank particularly Mr. Larrabee and Mr. McKeon. I come to accept the nomination you have tendered me. I am full of a sense of the honor you have done me by placing me at the head of the ticket of the Democracy of the state. I would rather lead the Democracy to certain defeat than the Republican party to certain victory. I am in sympathy with every word of the platform, and if my nomination is ratified at the polls, God helping me I shall to the best of my ability fulfill the pledges of that platform as you have given it to the people. From now till the polls close in November I shall make a fight, not for my own election alone, but that Democratic principles shall live in Minnesota. I expect loyal support from each member of the party. I have never laid down in your behalf, and I have a right to demand that you do not lay down in my behalf. That platform will be my guide, and I pray that Almighty God will give me the moral courage and strength to stand by it."

The rest was simpler. There was another surprise when Mayor Robert A. Smith, of Minneapolis, was unanimously nominated for lieutenant governor. This was taken to mean that whether they would acquiesce or not, the so-called re-organizers of St. Paul will have to stand by the ticket. Capt. Harries, of Caledonia, who had been mentioned before the convention as a possibility for governor, was nominated and so were John A. Johnson, of St. Peter, another possibly who did not show up in the final round, and G. P. Jones, of Rock county, otherwise known as "Jones of Rock." All declined except Mayor Smith. His nomination was seconded by St. Louis, Hennepin and Stearns counties. Judge Larson, of Minneapolis, raised a laugh by rising to inquire if it was true that John A. Johnson believed in keeping the Philippines, and by saying that if it was he did not want to vote for him.

For secretary of state Spurgeon Odell, of Marshall, was unanimously nominated. Michael E. Neary, of Minneapolis, the candidate for that office two years ago, was named, but he said he thought he did enough then, and he did not want to try it again. Lars M. Rand, of Minneapolis, was also named, but he begged to be excused.

For state auditor Albert G. Leick, of Owatonna, was the only one named, and he was unanimously nominated by a rising vote.

Frank D. Larrabee would have refused, but he was named for attorney general, and he was rising to beg off the rest of the convention rose at the same time and settled it by nominating him. In seconding the nomination of T. J. McKeon said if Larrabee was attorney general no bluff suits would be started.

Joseph A. Myers, of Little Falls, was named for treasurer by a unanimous vote, and George P. Jones, of Rock county, was nominated for clerk of the supreme court. H. P. Hall, of St. Paul, and J. S. Pardee, of Red Wing, were also named, but Frank Day, of Fairmount, said he was sure Mr. Hall would not run, and Mr. Pardee said the same thing for himself. Mr. Hall was nominated by a unanimous vote for railroad and warehouse commissioner, and that finished the ticket.

The convention endorsed the selection of members of the state committee made by the various state county conventions, and authorized the chairman to add four members at large to the list. Bert Fesler and Dr. M. B. Cullom are the Duluth members.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

THE PLATFORM.

Ringing Resolutions Adopted By the Convention.

Minneapolis, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Following is the full text of the platform adopted by the Democratic state convention:

1. We declare our allegiance to the principles of Democracy, as set forth in our national declaration of independence, as especially taught by that great exponent of Democracy, Thomas Jefferson, and as reaffirmed in the latest national convention of the Democratic party.

2. We further express our admiration for and grateful appreciation of the great ability, singular disinterestedness and untiring zeal in the service of humanity of the great leader of the Democracy and most fearless and eloquent champion of the rights of man, William J. Bryan.

3. We congratulate the people of the United States that their latent democratic spirit and sense of fairness have been sufficiently aroused to compel the present administration to so far keep faith, however reluctantly, with the people of Cuba so as to withdraw our troops from their island and allow them a measure of self government, and we condemn the Republican party for its failure to fully comply with the congressional resolution passed before the declaration of war with Spain. It is with deepest shame and regret that through the apostacy of the Republican party the people of the United States are, by our imperialistic policy in the Philippines, placed before the world in the false position of repudiating the most cherished fundamental principles of our government, and our brave citizen soldiers are forced to disgrace our flag and army in obedience to orders from their superiors.

We endorse and commend our Democratic congressmen for the position taken by them on the Philippine question, and demand that our government declare its intentions and purposes in regard to the Filipino people and grant to them their independence.

4. The power of the modern trusts is an appalling evil and a monstrous menace. We would revoke the tariff benefits they enjoy; we would refuses the subsidy they seek; we would pass appropriate legislation for the control of their affairs and to secure publicity, and we would enforce the laws against them, sparing none.

5. The Republican party openly advocates the policy of class legislation, conferring special privileges, benefits, subsidies, bounties, tariffs. Excessive riches and abject poverty that corrupt and debase character are results of the same social disease—special privilege. And we emphatically reaffirm our belief that the application of the Democratic principles of equal rights to all and special privileges to none is the only remedy for existing inequalities and wrongs.

6. We deplore the existence of a spirit of lawlessness which finds expression even in murderous attacks upon the chief magistrate of the republic, and has brought about the death of a recent incumbent of that exalted office.

7. We favor the postal savings bank and the income tax; we oppose government by injunction.

8. We would correct the imbecile and unbusinesslike policy that throttles our trade with Canada and Cuba at the behest of special interest.

9. We take this opportunity to pay heartfelt tribute to that statesman and popular leader, the heroic standard bearer of our cause during three hard-fought campaigns, John Lind. His place in the history of the Northwest and in the hearts of the people of all classes is secure, and the impress of his character upon the political life of this state will endure for all time. His term as governor will be known in the history of our commonwealth as that in which every executive department — railroad and warehouse commission, public examiner, labor commission, insurance commission, dairy and food commission, adjutant general, superintendent of public instruction, board of equalization and grain inspection—was brought to the highest standard of efficiency and in every respect represented the people.

It will be known as the administration which reduced the state tax levy, while securing a large increase of revenue from tax-dodging corporations; that cut down the freight bill of Minnesota farmers $400,000 per annum by reducing railway rates on grain; that reduced both the state cost and trust price of binding twine; that raised the standard of Minnesota wheat through just and efficient inspection an average of one grade on the entire crop; that ordered a 25 per cent reduction in railroad rates on iron ore and for the first time in years exacted of corporate power in Minnesota the same obedience to public laws as is required of the humblest citizen.

We pledge a continuance of this enlightened policy, efficient administration and fidelity to the people when the candidates of the Democratic party are again summoned to serve the state.

10. The state's law of forbidding merger of competing railroads should be enforced, and that in every case; and the state's neglected power to regulate rates should be exercised as the prime remedy for discrimination and extortion.

11. The readjustment of our tax laws is an absolute necessity with which the present administration has proved its incompetency to deal.

We adopt the clear and intelligent program submitted by the Democratic minority in the late session; the taxation of non-resident corporations equally with domestic; the adequate taxation of public service corporations, and the taxation of income and we favor the amendment of the constitution to that end.

We favor the municipal ownership of public-service corporations, the principle of direct legislation and home rule in local taxation.

12. We believe that the interests of labor can best be conserved by organization, and we demand for every man who labors an equal use of all natural opportunities, to the end that no man shall take the proceeds of another's labor without full compensation therefor.

We are in favor of the observance of a general eight-hour workday and that all printing done for and supplies purchased by the state of Minnesota shall bear the union label and pledge our support to organized labor in its efforts for securing the same.

13. We would correct the errors in the law establishing the state board of control.

14. We recommend to the voters the adoption of the proposed law, whose submission to the people was secured by the persistent efforts of the Lind administration, for the increase of the railroad gross earning tax.

15. We favor the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people and the election to the senate only of men pledged to that reform.

17. We condemn the surrender of the state railroad and warehouse commission to United States steel trust in giving up the state's jurisdiction over railroads wholly within its borders and abandoning the just rates ordered by the preceding commission, to the prejudice of the state's interest in the school lands.

18. We condemn the failure of the board of control to conserve the efficiency of the state institutions, and we abhor the theory that the public schools, which are fundamental to the life of the republic, are charitable institutions.

19. We condemn the administration for converting the state binding twine plant into an auxiliary of the cordage trust.

20. We condemn the Minnesota congressmen for their failure to promote legislation to strengthen the powers of the interstate commerce commission, and we regret that subserviency to privileged greed should compel our United States senators to vote for the iniquitous ship subsidy.

Mme. Yale's Hair Tonic.

The first and only discovery in the history of chemistry known to turn gray hair back to its natural and original color without dye. It acts on the natural live coloring matter of the hair, increasing and giving it circulation. It tones up the debilitated nerve force and the torpid glands to a healthy reaction, curing all disenses of the scalp. It creates a luxuriant growth, stops hair falling in from twenty-four hours to one week. It softens the hair when harsh or dry; contains no greasy matter, sulphur or lead, or any other injurious or unpleasant substance. Permanently cures dandruff.

MME. YALE'S HAIR TONIC is a perfect Hair Dressing, rendering the hair glossy and fluffy, greatly aiding it to remain in curl.

Manufactured only by Madame M. Yale, 189 Michigan avenue, Chicago.

PATTISON

Nominated For Governor of Pennsylvania For Third Time.

Erie, Pa., June 26.—For the third time in twenty years ex-Governor Robert Pattison, of Philadelphia, was nominated for governor of Pennsylvania yesterday by the Democratic state convention.

George W. Guthrie, of Pittsburg, was the unanimous choice of the convention for lieutenant governor.

James Nolan, of Redding, was nominated by acclamation for secretary of internal affairs.

After re-affirming all the statements, promises and declarations of purpose contained in the platform of the state convention of 1900, the platform says:

"We repeat that every department of our state government is honeycombed with profligacy, dishonesty and a reckless disregard of constitutional and moral obligations; that the powers of government are prostituted to the purposes of public thievery, that constitutional restraint and commands, the sanctity of law, the obligations of official oaths and the demands of common honesty are thrust aside by the substitution of a higher law—the demands of an insatiable greed of public plunderers for money, money, more money; that shamelessly and openly the votes of legislators are bought and so persistently and constantly that market values for legislators have been established by settled custom; that the apparent indifference of our people to these outrages emboldened the corruptionists to such an extent that the last session of our legislature outHeroded Herod in its infamies, and that all men pronounce it the most corrupt legislative body that ever convened in any state of the Union; that its very organization was founded on the purchase of venal legislators with money and place, and that it closed its session with the crowning infamy of that stupendous franchise steal, shocking the moral sense of the entire country; that the selection of a United States senator was accomplished in a carnival of corruption and bribery; that the reckless determination to punish enemies and reward subservient tools, established municipal governments were ruthlessly overturned and the chosen servants of the people expelled from their offices to make place for the creatures of a corrupt machine, while the faith of the people in the sanctity of the judiciary was broken by its baiting efforts to find plausible excuse for the crime."

The platform then promises a clean administration; the banishment of the lobbyist, bribe-giver and franchise robber, and assures the business interests of absolute exemption from "pinch legislation."

The existence of the labor trouble now affecting important interests, and a large portion of the people of the state, is deplored and the earnest hope is expressed that through concession, moderation and fair dealing an early adjustment may be reached. Capital is conceded its right to the utmost protection guaranteed it by the constitution and laws, but it is declared that labor also has the right to that protection which comes through organization and union.

The platform then closes as follows: "This Democratic convention waives all expressions of opinion on questions of national policy that might divert attention from the pressing problems that confront the people of our own state, or that might distract and divide the army of reform. In the contest about opening, we are concerned only as Pennsylvanians and for the good of Pennsylvania."

A SLIGHT DECLINE

Wheat Market Opens Lower But a Rally Follows.

English Market Closed and Paris a Little Lower.

Some Wheat Worked For Export---Flax Is Weaker.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 26.—The wheat market started out this morning at a decline from yesterday's closing figures sold down further, but rallied, recovering near all of the early loss. The markets at Liverpool and London were closed. Paris was unchanged to ¼c lower. The weather in the wheat harvesting districts was quite favorable and the Northwest receipts large; all of which were bearish factors.

Some wheat was worked for export, Chicago reporting about 10 loads. In the Duluth market about 5 loads were worked. The premium of the July option over the September in the Duluth market has in two days fallen from 4c to 3c.

Primary receipts of wheat were 496,000 bus, last year 580,000 bus. Shipments 362,000 bus, last year 317,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 374,000 bus.

There was a lively spurt in July oats in the Chicago market, and at one time the price was 1¾c up from yesterday's close. The close was 1¾c higher. The advance on the new crop of oats was even greater.

Corn advanced ¼c and at one time was up ½c. Primary receipts of corn were 811,000 bus, last year 267,000 bus. Shipments 234,000 bus, last year 183,000 bus. Clearances were 2560 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 345 cars, and at Chicago 18, a total of 363 cars, against 274 last week and 384 last year.

There was light trading in wheat today on the Duluth board. The market opened with July ¼c off at 75c, sold at 74¾c at 9:38, advanced to 75¾c at 11:35 sold at 75¾c at 12:09, at 75⅝-¾c at 12:12, at 75¾c at 12:25 and closed at 75¾c, a decline of ¼c.

Cash sales were 15,000 bus. Prices continued at ½c over July for No. 1 northern, 1c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3.

Flax trading was quiet and the market weaker. Cash seed fell off 5c, and September and October 1½c.

Cash No. 3 white oats closed without change today although No. 2 white oats sold at 48c. September oats advanced ¼c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—Cash, No. 1 hard, 77½c; No. 1 northern, 75¾c; No. 2 northern, 74½c; No. 3 spring, 72¾c; to arrive, No. 1 hard, 76¾c; No. 1 northern, 75¾c; July, 75¾c; September, 72¾c; Manitoba No. 1 northern, cash, 75¾c; No. 2 northern, 73¾c. Oats, cash, 46c; September, 32c. Rye, cash, 56c; September, 53½c. Flax, cash, $1.65; old track, $1.65; June, $1.70; September, $1.41½; October, $1.37; cash Northwestern, $1.75.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 25; last year, 82; oats, 12; flax, 4.

Receipts—Wheat, 15,626; flax, 2621.
Shipments—Wheat, 71,209; flax, 10,082.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Various Causes Gave All Markets Bearish Cast.

Chicago, June 26.—Closed markets in Liverpool and London unchanged Paris cables and a favorable weather map in the wheat harvesting country gave all markets on the board of trade at the opening today a bearish cast. July wheat opened ⅛c to ¼c lower at 74⅞c to 75¾c and on consideration by traders of an increased movement in the Northwest, dipped to 74c. The crowd sold generally and some long stuff came out from leading elevators. Buying was scattered and influenced a partial rally to 75¼c. September options were relatively as low as July, opening at 71⅝c to 71¾c and dipping to 71⅜c. Local receipts were 18 cars, 3 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 345 cars, making a total for the three points of 363 cars, against 274 last week and 384 a year ago.

Active buying of September wheat on the present corn bulls changed the tone of wheat from weak to strong. Shorts ran quickly to cover and July wheat was pushed to 75¾c and September to 72⅛@72½c. Manipulation was the late feature. Unloading brought a reaction and July wheat closed weak, ¾c lower at 73¼c and September firm, ⅜@½c up at 72⅛@¼c.

Corn sentiment was bearish, but nervous. July fluctuated widely with every offering. There was a fair amount of this delivery for sale and July opened ½@¾c lower at 68@67½c, rallied easily to 69¾c and sold off again to 67⅝@68c. September opened a shade down at 60@60¼c, and eased to 59⅝@60c. Receipts were 177 cars.

It is thought July longs have sold liberally of September as a hedge.

Bull tactics excited July corn shorts and that option went to 69c again. Strength in oats and wheat buoyed up September which sold at 61¾c and closed strong ⅞c up at 60⅝@61c. July closed steady, ¾c higher at 68¾c.

Oats showed the least weakness of the pits early. Cash business was still very good, and there was very little future stuff for sale. July opened unchanged at 42¼c, advanced ⅛c and dipped to 41⅞@42c. Receipts were 116 cars.

Talk of a corner and sales of cash oats at 52c created excitement in this pit late in the day and July new jumped 44⅝c, closing strong, 2¼c higher at 44⅞c.

Lower hog prices at the yards and free outside liquidation brought an easy feeling early in hog products. Packers, however, supported fairly on the break and held prices fairly steady. September pork opened unchanged at $18.47½, sold off 10c and rallied to its opening figure. September lard opened 5c down at $10.55@10.57½, eased a shade, and rallied to $10.57½@10.60, and September ribs started 2½@5c lower at $10.67½ and sold at $10.62½.

WRECK A SALOON.

Fort Myers Soldiers Make an Attack.

Washington, June 26.—James Geary's saloon at Roselyn, Va., has been completely wrecked and the place riddled with bullets from carbines and revolvers by a crown of 150 soldiers from Fort Myers, who carried on an apparently organized attack, presumably in revenge for the shooting of one of their comrades. One man was wounded during the raid.

A Matter of History.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, popularly known as "The St. Paul Road," began the use of electricity for train lighting in 1888. In that and many ways it has been a pioneer in the adoption of comforts for the traveler. In building the world-famous Pioneer Limited trains, a mark was set in luxury and beauty of cars that has never been equaled, and probably never will be.

TRADING IN STOCKS

Was Light and at Times Was at a Standstill.

Heavy Absorption of St. Paul Caused It to Advance.

Missouri Pacific Later Had Strong and Active Period.

New York, June 26.—Verw few stocks were traded in in the opening dealings and of these the price changes were insignificant except that St. Paul was run up about a point. Ice preferred also gained a point. A few stocks showed slight declines, but the prevailing tone was steady.

The market responded quite generally to an advance in the grain-carrying roads. St. Paul led this group with a rise of 1? but the Atchisons, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Canadian Pacific and Canada Southern advanced nearly as much. Amalgamated also rose about a point. Sugar opened 1¼ higher but immediately ran off ⅝. Trading became quiet before 11 o'clock but gains were well maintained. Pressed Steel Car and Detroit Gas rose a point, but Northwestern lost its rise.

Western and Pacific stocks reached a higher level in sympathy with the heavy absorption of St. Paul, which lifted it to 175¾. The other grangers gained over a point each but the advances in standard stocks generally were confined to large fractions. Amalgamated worked up to near 65, but the specialties generally were neglected but firm. Manhattan came into demand later and advanced 1¼ and American Ice preferred extended its gain to 2¾. Prices receded slightly before noon. Bonds were steady.

Business was practically at a standstill during the noon hour. Western Union sagged about a point and American Ice preferred receded 1¾ while Amalgamated rose 1¾ and St. Paul preferred 2¾. The variations in the leaders were unimportant.

Western stocks eased off slightly when the demand slackened. Missouri Pacific took the place of St. Paul in point of strength and activity and advanced to 105¾, a gain of 2¼. Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Rolling Coal also advanced and St. Joe & Grand Island first preferred 2¼. St. Paul and Manhattan reacted about a point.

There was an irregular decline of prices followed by hardening. Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis after falling 1¼ rallied but Chicago & Eastern Illinois rose suddenly 3½ and Consolidated Gas, Rubber Goods and Canadian Pacific advanced 1 each. The reaction in ice preferred reached 3½ and the loss in Western Union 1½. The closing was inanimate and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.—There are no indications of reviving activity in the stock market and the larger operators say that the prevailing stagnation is likely to last over the Fourth of July holidays. Meanwhile it will not be surprising if prices work lower owing to the great dullness, the evening up of accounts usual at the close of the fiscal year and the widespread disposition to await a definite outlook for the late crops, corn, spring wheat and cotton. Moreover important factors in the market are adverse to an active speculation while impending disbursements are being financed. That some of these powerful interests are preparing for aggressive movements later in the season, however, is indicated by current heavy borrowings. Today, for example, the First National bank loaned $6,000,000 on the stock exchanges. The bulk of money is said to have been borrowed by Clark, Dodge & Co., one of the most influential houses on ... street. It is reported tonight that this firm is acting for the Moore interest, which is accumulating a large line of Northwestern common in an effort to secure representation in the company's management. It is estimated that these capitalists have staked no less than $25,000,000 in their railroad ventures since they began buying Rock Island for control more than a year ago, the millions being the proceeds of sales of steel and other industrial stocks promoted and unloaded in the great boom of 1901.

Dache to Paine, Webber & Co.—The earnings of the Soo road for the third week in June increased $23,000. From July ... the increase is $1,629,000.

W. H. Laidley—I get this from a friend in New York: "This stock market certainly shows wonderful strength. The great majority of commission houses are, to say the least, conservative, as to purchases of stocks and advise their clients to stay out, that stocks are too high and that we will surely have a decided break before values can improve. The strength comes from buyers but no one seems to know where the buyers come from. There is a power behind the market which will no permit a decline other than a little shake out. For the present prices will be advanced until the country comes in and takes stocks off hands of people now holding them and that at much higher prices than now quoted. My best judgment would seem to be to buy stocks and go with the market which will sooner or later develop into a genuine bull affair."

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The copper market continues dull. Copper Range showed strength in the morning, sales gaining 1¾ with only slight reaction. United States Mining made a gain of ½, very strong. The rest of the coppers were very inactive except Mohawk, which showed a net gain of 1¼.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—Coppers have had a decidedly firmer tone today. The revival of buying demand found very few stocks for sale. Traders show a disposition to work on the long side of the best of the new mining propositions and it looks as if there might be a considerable advance in this class of stocks. We hear of recent sales of lake copper at 12½ cents. The metal outlook is strong.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 26.—The cotton market opened steady, with prices 1 point higher to 1 point lower and after a brief period of hesitation took an upward course on dry weather reports from Texas and official forecast for clear skies over the belt as a whole. The shorts were fearful of a rise to above the high level of yesterday and sought cover in a nervous manner. Prices advanced to 8.55, August 8.41 and October 8.01. Then came a weather forecast from Washington noting probably showers over Southern Texas tonight and tomorrow. An immediate rush to sell occurred under which July dropped to 8.67, August to 8.38 and October to 7.92. Jarring the close of the morning the market was very irregular and peculiarly sensitive to orders from either side. Receipts were light as anticipated. Private telegrams received were fairly good spot demand in the South at firm prices.

Cotton spot closed quiet. Middling uplands, 8.50; middling gulf, 8.75; sales, none. Cotton futures closed quiet and steady. June, $8.99; July, 8.64; August, 8.33; September, 8.02; October, 7.90; November, 7.84; December, 7.86; January, 7.84; February, 7.84; March, 7.86.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 26.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $204,808,718; gold, $100,751,285; silver, $24,-183,018; United States notes, $10,199,269; treasury notes of 1890, $128,854; national bank notes, $9,948,676; total receipts this day, $2,096,506; total receipts this month, $41,525,586; total receipts this year, $356,253,222; total expenditures this day, $500,000; total expenditures this month, $31,580,000; total expenditures this year, $468,951,797; deposits in national banks, $126,960,332.

WAS AWFUL.

The Tornado In Indiana Caused Almost Inconceivable Ruin.

Indianapolis, June 26.—Returns carefully gathered by the News indicate that the tornado which swept across the state from northwest to southwest yesterday morning was the worst and most disastrous storm that has visited the state since 1877.

The path of destruction extended for about fifteen miles and varied in width from three to six miles. In this path inconceivable ruin and devastation was wrought by the storm. Thousands of acres of growing crops were torn to pieces by the wind and hail, and barns were demolished.

Cattle were killed and injured, machinery was wrecked; forests were twisted and bent and froken; telegraph and telephone poles were snapped off and the wires scattered in fearful confusion along the highways and the lines of railway.

It is remarkable that only two persons were killed—James Van Hoy, a young man of 22, crushed in falling barn at Pendleton, and James Bailey, a farmer, caught in the wreck at McCordsville.

A conservative estimate of the total damage in the path of the storm places it in the neighborhood of $1,000,000.

PENSION INCREASED.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—An increase of pension to $8 per month has been granted to Henry G. Britt, of Buffalo, Minn.

BARBER KILLED.

Terre Haute, Ind., June 26.—While sitting in his barber shop at Ehrmandale, Terrell Lipton was shot and killed today. Lipton recently shot and seriously wounded Dan Watts, and the officers today are hunting for Watts.

Another Improvement.

CHICAGO, BOSTON AND NEW YORK TRAVEL.

On and after June 15th, the Erie railroad will still further improve their Boston and New York service by offering to the public a handsome limited train to leave Chicago from Dearborn station every day at 10:30 a. m., arriving New York next afternoon at 3:30, and Boston at 9 o'clock.

There is no doubt that this service will be highly patronized, as this new train will land the traveler in New York city in ample time to permit him to proceed leisurely to his hotel or home, rest, dress, dine and spend the evening in whatever manner may appeal to him most.

This every-day morning train will consist of standard Pullman drawing-room and sleeping cars. All meals en route served by the famous Erie dining cars. No extra fare charged on this train.

NEWS OF THE LAKES

Work of Unloading the Hadley Is Nearly Finished.

No Further Work Attempted on Sunken Wilson.

Most of the Chicago Tonnage Diverted to Iron Ore.

The work of unloading the coal cargo from the Hadley will be finished some time this afternoon, at the Pioneer dock. It is believed that the steamer will be taken to the dry dock at West Superior late this afternoon or early tomorrow.

Nothing further was attempted today in the way of work on the sunken steamer Wilson.

BUT LITTLE GRAIN.

Chicago, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—It is the old story of this season in grain freights. Just about enough grain was to be had to care for the boats on the market. These were few as most of the Chicago tonnage has been diverted to iron ore.

REPORT CONFIRMED.

Contract Between Postal and Pennsylvania Companies.

New York, June 26.—W. H. Baker, vice president and general manager of the Postal Telegraph company, confirmed today the report that a contract between his company and the Pennsylvania Railroad company had been agreed upon. Mr. Baker declined to discuss the financial part of the contract, but said he considered the arrangement an excellent one both for his company and the railroad company.

The announcement to the effect that 100,000 railroad messages a year are to be transmitted free and the balance paid for, is understood to be substantially correct. It is said that the terms finally agreed on with the Postal were not offered to the Western Union.

CHIL

IS WELL PLEASED

Judge Edson Entirely Satisfied With Congressional Outlook.

His Friends Think Bede Shows Weakness Out In District.

Judge Edson Will Make Tour of District Very Soon.

Judge W. D. Edson said today that he was highly pleased with the support he is getting in his fight for the Republican congressional nomination.

Not only in Duluth is this support given, but the judge says that he has received most encouraging letters from prominent men out in the district that were considered for Bede.

Friends of Judge Edson say that Bede fell down completely in the Itasca, Carlton, Anoka and Aitkin county Republican conventions and that when the proper time comes these counties will be found in line for Duluth's municipal judge.

In the near future Judge Edson will make a tour of the district. While his resignation does not take effect till Aug. 1, he will probably take the month of July for his customary vacation, so that practically his judicial work is at an end. In justification of this Judge Edson's friends say that in the seven years he has been on the municipal bench he has not missed a day from business and has always been entitled to one month's vacation each summer.

Special Judge Gilbert is occupying the bench much of the time now, and he is being strongly urged to come out for the appointment to the regular judgeship.

So far he has failed to announce himself a candidate for the appointment, and the two names most heard of on the street are Daniel Waite and William L. Windom. Despite the latter's statement that he is not a candidate to succeed Judge Edson there is a movement underway among his friends to properly present his qualifications to Gov. Van Sant.

IS READY.

Jordan Mine of Corrigan-McKinney Group Will Ship Soon.

Amos Shephard, general superintendent of the Minnesota mines of the Corrigan-McKinney group, came down from Hibbing this noon, and is at the St. Louis. Mr. Shephard says that the Jordan mine, the new milling property of the Corrigan-McKinney Mesaba group, is ready to begin shipments of ore. All that is necessary is the ballasting of the spur track leading into the mine. The Stevenson, he says, will soon receive a new steam shovel and two additional locomotives, for the purpose of increasing its product.

"Just now," said Mr. Shephard, "the mines shipping over the Great Northern are hampered by a shortage of equipment. The road made all of its plans well and carefully prepared for all the business that has developed, but it was disappointed in the delivery of its new 50-ton steel ore cars. The builders contracted to have 500 of these cars in the hands of the railway by April 1, and instead delivered, I understand, only about fifty. This disappointment, added to the early opening of the season of navigation, has placed the Great Northern to a considerable disadvantage. The cars are coming along gradually now, but not enough have been received to take care of the full volume of ore that could be loaded out. The road is doing and has done the best it could in the midst of overtaxed all Eastern factories and will no doubt very soon be in shape to very largely increase its ore traffic."

Mr. Shephard says he may bring his family to Duluth to live, but that for the better part of the season he will be so busy on the Mesaba that he expects to live under his hat most of the time, but in the vicinity of Hibbing.

The Duluth offices of Corrigan, McKinney & Co., will be closed July 1. The office has been used as a reporting office for Cleveland. It has been kept here largely for the convenience of Purchasing Agent J. G. Vivian, who leaves the first of the month to join George W. Wallace in his stripping operations. The offices with the exception of one room have been closed already. This is being kept open to facilitate the closing up of the business of the purchasing agency here.

A Glorious Fourth.

On the Fourth of July every true patriot will celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence by the Colonists, and although the struggle which followed was both costly and disastrous, yet it resulted in their ultimate freedom from the yoke of English bondage. Another very important day in the life of any one, especially those suffering from a weak or disordered stomach, will be the one on which they decide to give up old methods of trying to obtain relief and commence the use of that famous twentieth century family medicine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It will cure any one suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion, belching, constipation, biliousness or insomnia. Try it today and be convinced. Our Private Stamp is over the neck of the bottle.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Triennial Session of the International Association.

Denver, June 26.—Six special trains filled with delegates to the tenth triennial International Sunday School association arrived from the East today. The convention proper will open this evening. A preparatory service of prayer and praise was held at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Central Presbyterian church, and at 3:30 o'clock a memorial service for the late B. F. Jacobs, of Chicago, chairman of the executive committee, was held in the Central Presbyterian church.

The executive committee met this afternoon at the Brown Palace hotel, the vice chairman, W. N. Hartshorn, of Boston, presiding.

BLISS WILL BE NAMED

As the Republican Candidate For Governor of Michigan.

His Renomination Is Now Conceded on Every Hand.

The Upper Peninsula May Lose the Lieutenant Governorship.

Detroit, June 26.—The state Republican convention was called to order in Light Guard Armory shortly after 11 o'clock. In accordance with the universal anticipation that Governor A. T. Bliss, of Saginaw, would be renominated on the first ballot, the last effort this morning to effect a combination of the uninstructed and anti-Bliss delegates and unite in the hope of downing Bliss was a failure. A meeting of such delegates was called for 9 o'clock at the Hotel Cadillac. This was the hour for holding the congressional caucus and as a result only about twenty-five delegates appeared at the Cadillac and the meeting was declared off. The expected endorsement by the upper peninsula delegates at the Twelfth congressional district caucus of either ex-Senator Maitland, of Negaunee, or S. N. Dutcher, of Newberry, for lieutenant governor, did not take place and the rival upper peninsula candidates will both go before the convention. This may result in the upper peninsula losing the lieutenant governorship as William T. McGraw, of Wayne county, is making a strong fight for the nomination and the upper peninsula fight will be of help to him. Although Bliss' nomination is conceded on every hand it is expected that the names of other candidates will be presented at the convention. They are Justus S. Stearns, of Ludington, who made the principal fight against Bliss in the campaign, George B. Horton, of Fruitridge, master of the State Grange and John Patton, of Grand Rapids.

State Chairman Gerrit J. Dickeman, of Holland, called the convention to order and introduced Congressman William Alden Smith, of Grand Rapids, as temporary chairman. He said:

The Republican party moves among the political forces of our time with strength undiminished, purpose undaunted, and glory undimmed. I make bold to assert that no American patriot would blot out a single page of our party achievements or alter by so much as a single line, any important accomplishment for which we are responsible. Our great industrial system is the magnet around which circles the commerce of the world. It has been freely predicted by our opponents that our tariff wall would not only prevent commercial relations between America and the great countries of the world, but that most dire consequences would follow the re-enactment of our law. How idle the prophesy; how worthless such a gift of vision. We not only rebuilt the tariff wall, destroyed by the Cleveland administration, but in the face of their prediction, we have kindled the fire in the furnaces, furnished employment to millions of our countrymen, and have actually sold to Europe more agricultural and manufactured goods than has ever been done in the history of our government.

Proud as I am over that great victory against the prejudice of the world which we have at last conquered, yet I desire to give special emphasis today to the strength and the value of that far greater commerce which does not bulk at the seaboard, but can be seen every hour of the day as it passes along the turn-pike from the farm to the city, or is whirled over the commercial highways, giving employment to millions of skilled fingers and bringing cheer and happiness and luxury to the modest home of the artisan, the farmer, and the mechanic, amounting this year to the almost incomprehensible sum of $100,000 per minute, $5,500,000 per hour, $55,000,000 a day and $20,000,000,000 in the year just closed. In this great item America's future is conserved.

We hear a great deal of talk about our policy of protection being the mother of trusts. It is not so. If trusts thrive on protection, how is it that in free trade England trusts are more numerous and powerful than in protected America? Let no man be deceived. These combinations of capital are the outgrowth of the world-wide business tendency, and you cannot escape it, even though you immigrate to the Orient or the islands of the sea. It is neither a geological nor a climatic condition. It pertains to the whole business world. So long as conditions of capital are not oppressive, and so long as the public welfare is not assailed, we are, perhaps, powerless to check them. But wherever corporations are organized for the purpose of lessening the output or unfairly controlling the price, they should be dissolved and punished; and there sits a man today in the White House at Washington who proposes to enforce the law without fear or hesitation.

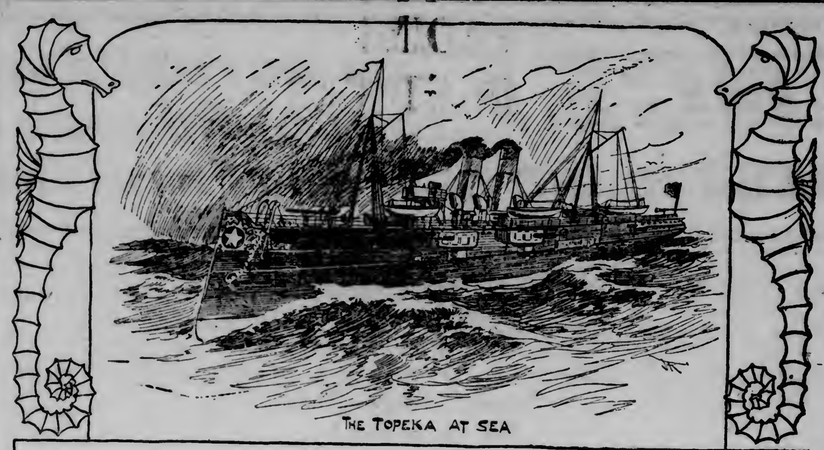
I have no interest whatever in maintaining the supremacy of the trusts in our industrial system; but if there are to be trusts anywhere in the world, I would prefer to have them in America, under the supervision and regulation of our laws, rather than have them in Europe, beyond our reach and beyond our power. If we were to strike down the tariff upon trust-made articles, with a view of crippling the trusts, is it not possible that we might inspire the organization of the international trusts. When that time comes, tell me, will the wages of labor be the wage of Europe, upon a low scale, or the wage of America upon a high scale? And if the wage of Europe shall prevail, tell me whether the purchasing power of labor will be as great and as profitable and as desirable as it is today?

We are irrevocably committed to the single gold standard, and honor national credit is the highest ever attained by government since time began. The government's credit is good because the government management is good. Our citizenship is the best educated, best clothed, best housed, best fed, and the happiest party on the globe. In the march of national events Spain has been driven from the Western world, and the new responsibilities thus assumed have been important and many. The world moves, and we must move with it. Destiny cries aloud for room, and opportunity opens wide the door. Whether for weal or woe, our pathway leads us along the heights. The dizzy and fainthearted, unequal to the task, may fall by the wayside; we march forward with the column. Our wand is liberty's torch, our aim the highest good.

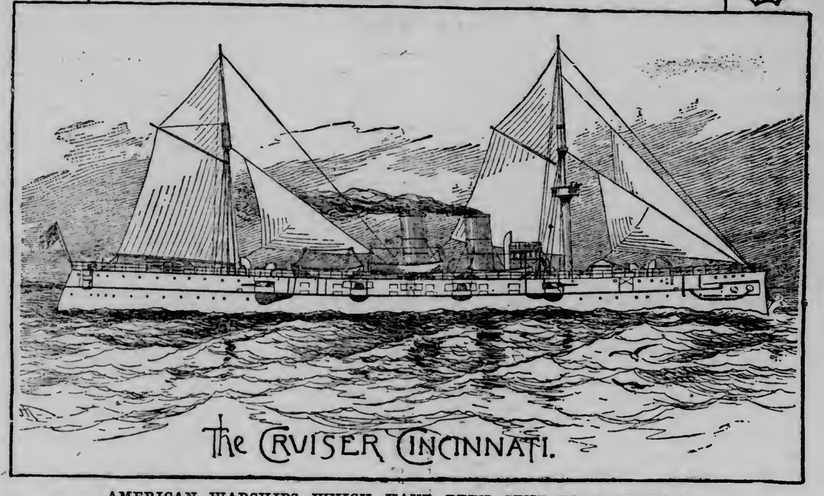
At such a time would it not, indeed, seem strange if we were unequal to any task growing out of our new responsibilities. Our effort to bring order out of chaos, to establish intelligence where ignorance and superstition have for centuries held undisputed sway should have the patient and loyal support of every lover of his country, regardless of party. And yet our pathway in the Philippines has been strewn with obstacles, our plans thwarted, our purposes belied, our position misrepresented and our task made more difficult by carping critics and copperheads at home.

Now that the stars and stripes wave over Manila, with Hawaii a part of this glorious republic, and the second place in a commerce aggregating $500,000,000 per annum, held by this country, is it not time for the United States to look with more attention to her interests in the East and to establish her Asiatic commerce upon a surer foundation than that of international sufference? Sixty thousand Americans, with measured tread and unerring purpose, are now seeking to establish the best government in the world among the most needy of our new possessions. But we are advised by our opponents that we should scuttle. There will be no scuttling while Theodore Roosevelt is commander in chief of the army and navy. There will be no scuttling until our work is finished. Our party never leaves its work half done. It will be time enough to consider plans when order is restored, our supremacy acknowledged and civil government established. When that time comes, guided by the wisdom of the fathers, we promise the Philippine people the best government of which they are capable. We can be relied upon to do for the Philippines whatever will be best for them and commend itself to the generous approval of mankind.

After appointment of committees the convention took a recess until 1:30 p. m. Gerrit J. Dickema, of Holland, was re-elected chairman of the state central committee by acclamation.



THE TOPEKA AT SEA



THE CRUISER CINCINNATI.

AMERICAN WARSHIPS WHICH HAVE BEEN SENT TO VENEZUELA.

Owing to the fact that complications will inevitably result from the probable overturning of the present Venezuelan government our navy department has deemed it expedient to send to La Guayra the cruiser Cincinnati and the gunboat Topeka. These vessels are under sealed orders, but it is generally understood that their commanders are given wide latitude in the matter of taking steps for the protection of American interests in Venezuela in the event of the realization of the present apprehensions for the safety of Castro's government.

RETURNING.

Bernard and Warren Come Back Crowned With Success.

St. Paul, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—A. G. Bernard, editor of the Cass Lake Voice, and E. L. Warren, of Cass Lake, were in the city today on their way home from five months' work in Washington city, where they succeeded in securing the passage of the Chippewa reservation bill.

"It will be the making of that section of the state," said Mr. Bernard. "It will be the best thing possible for the Indians. It will make as much of a beauty spot of the region as any legislation could do. It is the future home of thousands of settlers, and will redound to the direct and permanent profit of the wholesalers and jobbers of the Twin Cities.

"When we went to Washington, Jan. 15, we found that nothing had been done. We went to work and got the Minnesota delegation together for the framing of a bill, and found the national park advocates had been quite active, but we finally satisfied them by reserving several pieces of land from what was to be sold.

"Two islands in Cass Lake, Pine Point, Bear island and Sugar Point, in Leech lake, were taken out and will be used for park purposes.

"We had to fight the lumbermen, too, for they were adopting their old tactics of opposing everything, because they wanted to keep on stealing timber or getting it for a nominal price, as they had been doing.

"But we succeeded in requiring that timber be sold in bank scale, sealed bids being required at not less than $4 for Norway pine and $5 for white pine. There will be 1,000,000 acres of agricultural land thrown open for settlement at $1.25 an acre, which will go to the Indian fund. This sale will not begin until after the Indians have been allotted their eighty acres each for homesteads.

"It was Page Morris' bill and he is entitled to great credit."

CANAL BILL IS PASSED

Through Both Houses and Awaits President's Signature.

Little Falls Authorized to Build Bridge Over Mississippi.

The General Deficiency Bill Is Passed By Senate.

Washington, June 26.—The house met at 11 o'clock today. Bills were passed to authorize the city of Little Falls, Minn., to construct a wagon and foot bridge across the Mississippi river within the limits of said city; to amend the internal revenue laws relative to fermented liquors so as to eliminate the eighth of a barrel from the classification of packages; to confirm the title of the state of South Dakota to a section of land already granted to said state; to authorize the New York, Chicago & St. Louis and Chicago, Erie railroads to construct a bridge across the Calumet river at Hammond, Ind., and to authorize the Chicago & State Line railroad to construct a bridge across the Calumet river at Hyde Park Station, Ill.; to authorize and direct the circuit court of appeals of the Fifth judicial district, to hold one term of court annually at Fort Worth, Tex.

A request of the senate for the return of the bill for the sale of sites for manufacturing and industrial plants in the Indian Territory was objected to by Mr. Stephens (Tex.)

Mr. Hepburn (Iowa), chairman of the committee on inter-state commerce, then called up the conference report on the isthmian canal bill. The statement submitted by him yesterday was read, showing that the effect of the adoption of the report would be the elimination of the house bill and the enactment into law of the senate bill.

"I desire to move the adoption of the report," said Mr. Hepburn. "In doing so I desire to say that I have not changed in the slightest degree my belief in the wisdom of the house of representatives on the 9th of last January.

At this point further proceedings were blocked by the speaker's announcement that the original papers were missing and that no action could be taken until they were before the house.

"The papers should be in the hands of the clerk," observed Mr. Hepburn. "But they are not here," announced the speaker. "They must be in the senate. At any rate it is well settled that a conference report cannot be considered without the original papers."

"Can I ask unanimous consent for the consideration of the report?" asked Mr. Hepburn.

"The chair thinks not," replied the speaker. "The matter must go over until the papers are found."

Accordingly, the report was withdrawn and the house went into committee of the whole and resumed the consideration of the Philippine civil government bill.

Later, however, the papers belonging to the isthmian canal legislation were found and Mr. Hepburn moved to adopt the conference report.

The conference report on the isthmian canal bill was adopted by a vote of 252 to 7.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 26.—When the senate convened today the following bills were passed:

To provide for the removal of a shoal in the North river of New York harbor; directing the secretary of the treasury to bestow medals upon First Lieut. David H. Jarvis, Second Lieut. Ellsworth P. Bertholf, and Samuel J. Call, surgeon, all of the revenue cutter service, members of the Overland expedition of 1897 for the relief of the whaling fleet in the Arctic regions.

Consideration then was begun of the general deficiency appropriation bill, it being read for amendment. When the appropriation of $500,000 for the Buffalo pan-American exposition and $100,000 for the Charleston, S. C., exposition were reached, Mr. Bailey (Tex.) protested.

An amendment was agreed to in the general deficiency bill appropriating $15,000 to cover all unpaid expenses incurred on account of the illness and death of President McKinley including compensation to the physicians, no payments to be made to any employe of the government. The deficiency bill then was passed.

Mr. Morgan presented the conference report on the canal bill and it was adopted. This passes the bill and it will be sent to the president.

The senate has agreed to the appropriation in the general deficiency bill for the Buffalo, New York and Charleston, S. C., exposition deficiencies.

JENSEN CENSURED.

Retired Minister Wrote Some Objectionable Articles.

Minneapolis, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The conference of the United Norwegian Lutheran church today passed a vote censuring Rev. E. Jensen, a retired minister, seeking an active charge, for writing articles reflecting on the late president, Rev. G. Hoyme, and the venerable leader of the church, Rev. Dr. F. A. Schmidt. The vice president, Rev. E. J. Ellestad, was appointed to receive contributions for the Toyme memorial chapel at Northfield, Minn., and to report plans for the building to the next conference. For the mission work $18,000 was appropriated.

OBSTRUCTION ON TRACK.

Attempt to Wreck Train on Great Northern.

St. Cloud, Minn., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—An attempt was made about 11 o'clock last night to wreck train No. 7, the Winnipeg special on the Great Northern near St. Augusta station. The engineer saw the obstruction and applied the air, bringing his train to a stop as the engine was partly derailed by gravel which had been piled upon the track.

CASE CONTINUED.

Springfield, Ill., June 26.—Judge Creighton in the Sangamon circuit court today granted a continuance in the mandamus case of Carter Harrison, mayor of Chicago, against the state board of equalization. The two principal witnesses for the prosecution are critically ill. The case was brought to compel the board to assess side tracks and turnouts of railroads as local property. The case will be heard at the next term of court.

THE MAYOR FINED.

Zanesville, Ohio, June 26.—Mayor Holden was this morning fined $100 by Police Judge Bell for contempt of court. The case was the outcome of Mayor Holden's insistence on his right to withdraw an affidavit charging a woman with intoxication and his resistance to Chief of Police Tracy.

A CLOUDBURST.

Ironton, Ohio, June 26.—A cloudburst at Polkadotte last night washed away two stores, a warehouse and the post-office. Much damage is reported in the Symmes Creek valley.

TURKISH WOMEN FREE.

"There is a general impression abroad that Turkish women are shut up behind the lattice windows of the harem and have little freedom to go about. This is far from correct. The Bosphorus steamers are crowded with them, they jostle you on every hand in the narrow streets of Constantinople. Veiled they must be, but veiled they go about with a freedom better assured than any European woman, for to molest a Moslem woman means death to a Turk and serious consequences to a foreigner."

This is the statement of Miss Florence A. Fensham, dean of the American college for girls at Constantinople.

"To illustrate the power which these women have," continued the speaker, "it is a matter beyond dispute that polygamy in the present generation is fast giving way, not from moral conviction on the part of the Turk, so much as from lack of means to support large establishments. Why of the Turks of the present generation? First, because the country is impoverished and ancestral estates have decreased in value; but what is far more significant is that where formerly the three or four legal wives a man might have would live together in a harem under a single roof—now there must be as many establishments equally well equipped as there are wives; for the Turkish wives will not live together in the same house. What is this but an assertion of inalienable right?

"Still more, it is an acknowledged fact that the women of Turkey control most of the government appointments. To quote from a work recently published by one long resident in the country. "The women hold ultimate sway over the conduct of the men. The tangled intrigues for place and power which center in the harem form the key to many vicissitudes of Turkish history."

"Now that the Eastern woman, whatever her nationality may be, needs and is eager for is education. The influences which have brought her to feel this need are not difficult to find. Oriental people are naturally gifted, their minds are active and bright, their natures are capable of assimilating the refining influences of education in whatever direction these may be given."

THE RETORT FACETIOUS.

Your average young man of Gotham is a witty individual with a sense of humor as broad and rollicking as his conversation is crisp and incisive, says the Brooklyn Eagle. He may be a broker on 'change, a fakir vending on Broadway, or a district messenger boy perspiring in a misfit uniform—his remarks are favored with the same Attic salt, but withal tempered with a humor that robs them of half their sting. It seems to be in the atmosphere. You find it in our fellow citizen of foreign blood long before he gets his "second papers." It is to be expected of the quick tongued Irishman, his is the wit of the world, but your slower Teuton and his Latin cousins acquire it as they acquire the English tongue. Even stolid John Chinaman shows a gleam of it as he begins to take on the new "civilization."

"What became of your ring?" asked Magistrate Olmstead of Manhattan of a flashily dressed Chinaman brought before him for disorderly conduct. The magistrate had seen him some days before sporting a valuable diamond ring.

"Eatee, dlinkee, dlunkee," replied Ah Sin, laconically, as he produced the pawn ticket in verification.

It was a fiery headed longshoreman, known as "Red," who was shown the discretion that is sometimes the better part of valor, by retreating from a war of words with the brawny foreman, named Green.

"Why didn't ye take howld av 'im, Reddy?" queried a companion, "ye could down 'im."

"Sure, an' O'm too pathriotic to want the red above the green," was Reddy's vindication.

Two small boys whose Celtic extraction was plainly limned in their faces were settling a dispute with cudgels, near the Broadway and Chambers street corner of City Hall Park, as Justices Scott and Fitzgerald of the supreme court were passing.

"Ah," said Justice Scott, "what have we here, a breach of the peace?"

"Oh, no," responded Justice Fitzgerald, "merely two harps that beat as one."

"Say, Uncle Midas, old Pemquid wants to sell out his seat on the stock exchange," was the insinuating remark of a scion of the house of Roseburg to a rich and indulgent bachelor relative from whom he had great hopes.

"How much, Isaac?"

"Only $75,000."

"Only $75,000! Vell, Isaac, I think you had better stood up a vile yet."

A thin faced woman with a red nose and circular flounce was charging across Sixth avenue toward a window in which was a placard announcing "bargain sales in —." The street was crowded with carriages, trucks and street cars and she would have been run down but for a district messenger boy who rushed out and, grabbing her arm, steered her safely to the curb.

"Chee," he panted, as he saw her take a new start for the bargain counter, "De Broadway squad couldn't keep one o' them kind from a bargain counter."

It was a Brooklyn young man, candidate for a license as teacher in chemistry, who faced Dr. George T. Smith, chief of the educational department's board of examiners, a few days ago. The quiz closed with this:

"What are the chemists of today trying to do?"

"Most of them in New York seem to trying to qualify as experts in murder cases," blurted out the perplexed young man, who evidently read the papers, if he didn't know what was going on in the world of chemistry. It was not exactly what Dr. Smith expected, but the candidate went through all right.

Light bits are these, and half lost in the telling, of the endless "stringing" to be heard from walking to sleeping wherever man meets man. It is one of the safety valves that lets off the super charged nervous energy of the denizens of the metropolis.

The Evening Herald is the Duluth business man's paper, because it prints the news while it is news—not stuff warmed over for readers next day—and because it reaches him at an hour when he has time to read it, advertisements and all. To advertisers who want to reach business men the moral is good.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed proposals addressed to the Village Council of Grand Rapids, Minnesota, and endorsed, "Proposals for an Electric Light Plant," will be received by the Village Recorder of the said Village of Grand Rapids until 8 o'clock p. m. of Monday, the 7th day of July, 1902, for the construction of an electric light plant for the Village of Grand Rapids, according to the specifications and plans now on file.

Bonds of the village for the sum of $25,000 have been issued and sold by it, at par, for the purpose of raising funds sufficient to purchase, build, establish and control all necessary buildings, machinery, apparatus and material for making, generating and supplying light for public and private use in said village.

Proposals will be received on the following work:

First—The building.

Second—The machinery.

Third—The electric lines.

Bidders may make in addition a proposal for the entire work.

Proposals will be publicly opened and read at a meeting of the Village Council on the evening of July 7th, 1902. The proposal or proposals which are deemed for the best interest of the village will be accepted.

The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, and to change any item or items in the specifications.

Blank forms of proposals, instructions to bidders and specifications may be obtained and plans may be seen and examined at the office of the Village Recorder of Grand Rapids, Minnesota, and at the office of Edward P. Burch, Consulting Engineer, 1210-1212 Guaranty building, Minneapolis, Minn. All information will be given on application.

CAR WORKS TO BE USED

American Lumber Company Leases Large Part.

An Immense Planing Mill to Be Established.

Another important industrial development has been arranged for at West Duluth. The American Lumber company, of Chicago, has leased a large part of the plant and grounds of the car works, and will at once establish one of the largest sorting and finishing lumber yards and works in the country. The plans for the future are on a much larger scale than the management of the company is at liberty at this time to disclose. A large box factory, however, is a probable development of the early future, and it or parts of wood are manufactured in will not be surprising if other articles large quantity at no distant date.

The American Lumber company has been operating at the head of the lakes, exclusively at West Superior. It made its initial experiment in this line at this point with the planing mill erected by the West Superior Lumber company. This mill burned down some weeks ago. It hauled 18,00,000 feet of lumber the first year, 50,000,000 feet the second year, and expects, with the added facilities just acquired here, to handle 80,000,000 feet at the head of the lakes the current season. The enormity of this move will be appreciated when it is known that this is nearly 50 per cent more than the Mitchell & McClure mill saws.

The resident manager of the company is J. G. Ketcham, one of the best known lumbermen in this country. The concern is controlled by the Holt Bros., one of Chicago and one of Oconto, who are the chief owners of the Holt Lumber company, of Oconto, Wis. The American Lumber company interests are rated A1 and at about $1,000,000. They are the pioneers in the sorting and finishing line here, and as yet practically hold exclusive control of this field in their trade.

The business of the company is to buy sawed stock of the local mills, take it to its yards, sort it and finish it ready for use by the carpenter and builder. It is generally understood that comparatively all the lumber that has gone from this market in past years has been shipped in the rough, unplaned and untongued or unmatched. The American company thought there was an opening here for a sorting and finishing plant, and its success has justified their belief.

This is a business that develops in the lumber manufacturing centers, as those markets become mature, and the timber stores tributary have reached their height. Then these older markets are placed at such a disadvantage, as compared with the newer competitors for the rough stock that the jobbing trade is ready to look to the newer centers for the finished stock. It is an entirely different trade than that sought by the lumber manufacturers here. The manufacturers here have, heretofore, sold to this sorting and distributing trade in other cities—Chicago, Buffalo, Cleveland and Saginaw, for instance.

The American Lumber company has proved that this additional handling and manufacturing can be done here successfully. It means that Duluth will derive that much more revenue from the sale of the lumber before it goes into the hands of the jobbers and retailers.

The company has leased of the owners of the car works property the old erecting shop building, 180x400 feet in size, and the old paint shop, 120x480 feet in size. It has also leased of the Northern Pacific Railway company the three-cornered piece of yard property just below the car works on the flats for a sorting yard. Mr. Ketcham says that the facilities thus acquired will give piling room for 10,000,000 feet of lumber. He also gets the dry piler, railway and highway apparatus and the brick office building.

There are now five planers and matchers in the plant, and as many more will be added at once. The lumber will first be assorted, then seasoned and dressed and matched. It will be shipped exclusively in car lots, and the tertory reached will be points east of Chicago. The plant will compete with similar industries at Cleveland, Buffalo, Tonawanda, interior Wisconsin and other lumber finishing points. It is believed that it marks the development of a greater area for the distribution of many of the products of Duluth. It will contribute much to the growth of the rail freight business of Duluth.

In speaking of the establishment of the plant on such a large scale here, Mr. Ketcham said today that the company would never have engaged in its additional plans if it had not been for a reduction of the transfer charges at West Duluth, which has been brought about by the purchase of the old Duluth Transfer system by the Northern Pacific road. This absorption, he said, had resulted in a practical absorption of one transfer charge and one-half of the total cost of transferring cars from other roads to this plant, or vice versa. So much of the company's product would have to be rafted in in the rough and rafted out in finished form that the company could not have done business under the former high transfer charge.

The company will retain its present yards and docks at West Superior. Docks here are something that will have to be determined upon soon. The offices, which are now located at West Superior, will be removed to this city. About 100 men will be employed at the start.

Provision is made for the termination of the lease under certain conditions if the owners of the car works property should find an opportunity to sell it.

THE PRINCIPAL PHYSICIANS OF KING EDWARD'S MEDICAL STAFF.

KING OUT OF DANGER

All His Symptoms Are Highly Satisfactory.

Passed a Good Night With Some Natural Sleep.

London, June 27.—The following bulletin was posted at the palace at 6:15 p. m.:

"The king has maintained the satisfactory condition described in the last bulletin. The king shows no disquieting symptoms."

Signed by Lister, Treves, Smith, Laking and Barlow.

London, June 27, 10:12 a. m.—The first unofficial intimation this morning from Buckingham palace regarding King Edward's condition is to the effect that the pada mentioned in last night's bulletin was at first attended by some restlessness, but, subsequently improvement was noted and his majesty passed a fair night.

London, June 27.—The following bulletin of the king's physicians was posted at Buckingham palace at 2 p. m.:

"His majesty passed a comfortable morning. All his symptoms today are so far satisfactory. His temperature remains normal. No other than important fluctuations in his majesty's temperature will be recorded in the bulletins issued."

London, June 27, 2:27 p. m.—It is said that after the issue of this morning's bulletin, Lord Marcus Beresford asked Lord Lister how the king was progressing and that Lord Lister replied: "His majesty is practically out of danger."

London, June 27, 10:58 a. m.—An authoritative statement contained in dispatches to the Associated Press that the check in King Edward's progress towards recovery, which was recorded in the last bulletin of yesterday evening, was merely temporary in its character, receives gratifying confirmation in this morning's announcement by the physicians, which is as follows:

"His majesty had a fair night and has had some natural sleep. His appetite is improving and his wound is much more comfortable. On the whole, the king's condition is attended with less anxiety."

The announcement of a more comfortable state of wound and his having secured natural sleep is followed by an indication of increasing assurance in the minds of those responsible for the official report. It is contained in the last sentence, which indicates that everything is going as well as can reasonably be expected.

As the time approached for the posting of the morning bulletin the crowd about the palace of the king increased appreciably. When the better tenor of the news contained by the slip of paper attached to the baize-covered board became known, somethign like a cheer broke forth from the assembled people.

Prince Henry of Prussia and other representatives were among the earlier inquirers at Buckingham palace.

The prince of Wales and the duke of Connaught called early at Buckingham palace.

Lord Lister and his colleagues were in consultation for a quarter of an hour prior to issuing the bulletin posted at 10:15.

Throughout the afternoon only small crowds gathered about Buckingham palace. The 2 o'clock bulletin created the greatest satisfaction. Subsequently a member of the government said to a reporter of the Associated Press: "Really, everything is going on wonderfully well, and we all now think the king will recover, though, of course, we are afraid of being prematurely or unduly optimistic. The king is proving himself a gallant chap.

"A good deal of ill-feeling and misdirected criticism seems to have been caused by the omission of the temperature from the bulletins. I understand the doctors avoided mention of it for the purpose of preventing what they believed would be an avalanche of faulty deductions from the press and alleged experts. It is only natural that the king's temperature slightly rises at night, and it is expected to do so for some time. How little, however, this omission from the bulletins is calculated to inspire the public with false confidence can be judged from the fact that Wednesday evening, when, perhaps the king might have been expected to have been at his most critical period, his temperature was normal, yet the doctors purposely refrained from mentioning it."

The latest bulletins created the most favorable impression in parliamentary circles. Many of the medical experts now believe that all danger of any septic process has passed, and that, so far as can be seen, the crisis may be regarded as at an end.

Electric fans are being utilized to keep the king's apartment at a suitable temperature, the heat in London at present being oppressive.

Queen Alexandra continues cheerful and is in and out of the sick room at frequent intervals.

The prince of Wales today again spent a short time in his father's bedroom.

The operating table, bandages and other appliances connected with surgical operations were removed from the palace this afternoon.

At the adjournment of the house of commons at 5:30 p. m. today A. J. Balfour, the government leader, announced that the progress of King Edward was quite satisfactory.

EVERYTHING FAVORABLE.

Lancet Says King's Prospects Are Good.

New York, June 27.—The New York Medical Journal received today the following cablegram from the London Lancet:

"London, June 27, 12 noon.—So far as it is possible yet to say anything definite, the king's prospects are distinctly favorable. Thursday was a good day, followed by a fair night, the patient having refreshing sleep. The state of the wound is satisfactory, the discharge healthy, the temperature Thursday evening normal, a fact which is important as indicating that the occasional pain experienced in the wound had no sinister significance. Nourishment was taken and cheerfulness maintained. The king has seen and conversed with the prince of Wales and the royal princesses. The queen has visited the sick man several times. The definite statement issued by the Lancet that the bulletins are accurate, that the condition is simply perityphlitis, that the right medical opinion has been sought, that the right procedure has been followed, and that no symptoms of malignant disease are present have much reassured the public. At noon today the wound is comfortable and the general condition less anxious."

LONDON DESERTED

London, June 27.—What was to have gone down to history as a procession day, when it was expected there would be the greatest crush ever witnessed in the streets of London, finds the city practically deserted. The bank holiday proclaimed for today paralyzed business. The masses, apparently surfeited with their eventless wanderings in the streets yesterday, either cleared out to the country, tempted by the perfect weather, or else stayed at home. Certainly the main thoroughfares could not have been more deserted on any Sunday in the year. The big hotels, however, were each an oasis of activity amid the otherwise general stagnation. Many Americans are preparing to start for the continent, and others have already gone there or to the country, while numbers took advantage of the fine day to visit the great fleet assembled off Spithead. Sir Thomas Lipton is entertaining a distinguished party on board his steam yacht Erin.

The fashionable cafes and restaurants were the scenes of numerous smart luncheons, while extensive but quiet preparations were made for week-end house parties at the surrounding country places, whose owners seem to think that the situation warrants at least some subdued gaiety in honor of the many prominent visitors.

REID SAYS GOOD BYE.

London, June 27.—The American special ambassador, Whitelaw Reid, and Mrs. Reid called by appointment on the prince and princess of Wales this afternoon to take official leave of their royal highnesses. Mr. Reid will now close up the special embassy and go to Portsmouth to visit Rear Admiral Arent S. Crowninshield, commander-in-chief of the European station, on the United States flagship Illinois.

Rear Admiral John C. Watson, who was to have represented the United States navy at the coronation, went to Paris yesterday evening, and Gen. James H. Wilson, the representative of the United States army in the special embassy, is to follow him.

Col. John Biddle, Gen. Wilson's aide, will return to America.

The presence of the princess of Wales and the inclusion of Mrs. Reid in the audience today was simply a continuation of that specially friendly attitude which the British royal family and government have throughout shown towards the American mission.

King Edward has expressed himself as greatly pleased with the receipt of President Roosevelt's message of greeting, and the members of the government have missed no opportunity throughout the mission's visit of indicating its appreciation of the friendly feeling shown by the United States.

Prince Henry of Prussia leaves London tomorrow for Germany. He and the princess received, among other visitors this morning, Mrs. Montgomery Sears. The prince spoke to her of pleasant recollections of his visit to Boston. Among the Americans, outside the members of the special embassy, who have been received by Prince and Princess Henry of Prussia are Admiral Charles O'Neill, Miss Roosevelt and Mrs. Sheffield Cowles, wife of the former naval attache of the United States embassy at London.

When Prince Henry was leaving Buckingham palace, after his visit there this afternoon, the marked warmth of the cheering of the people evidently pleased him greatly.

RATHBONE

Says That an Injustice Has Been Done to Him.

Washington, June 27.—Maj. Estes G. Rathbone, former director general of posts for Cuba, requests the Associated Press to say for him that since he has been in this country various newspaper interviews have contained statements seeming to come from him which do him an injustice. Some of them are errors in fact, and others are faulty inferences drawn from known conditions. He regards these misrepresentations as having been inadvertently made, but they nevertheless do him an injustice. His purpose at this time is to have an investigation by congress, which will disclose the facts regarding his conduct in Cuba, and not revenge on any person or persons who may have injured him.

CHINESE OBJECT

To Surrender of Jade Seals to Officers.

San Francisco, June 27.—Ho Yow, the imperial Chinese consul general, has protested against the surrendering to the owners the Jade tablets and seals found in the baggage of United States military officers returning on government transports from China and the Philippines. As a matter of diplomatic courtesy the collector will hold Chinese seals until he shall receive advices from Washington.

EXPLORERS SAFE.

They Were Warmly Welcomed By King Menelik.

London, June 27.—Advices received here from Adis Abeba, capital of Abyssinia, announce the safe arrival there of Fitz-Hugh Whitehouse, of Newport, R. I., and Lord Hindlip, who started from England; Feb. 1, on an exploring trip to the Upper Nile. Both of the travelers were well and had enjoyed a successful trip. They were cordially welcomed by King Menelik. The explorers were to continue their travels round Lake Rudolf and homeward by way of Massowah, where they expect to arrive in September.

FEW SICK; MANY DEAD.

Surgeon Gets Report on Soldiers In Philippines.

Washington, June 27.—Surgeon General Forwood has received a report from Lieut. Col. C. L. Heizmann, chief surgeon, division of the Philippines, in regard to the health of the troops in the archipelago for the month ended May 15 last. According to the percentage of sick it is at the lowest figure yet reached in the division, 6.01 per cent, as compared with 6.24 per cent the previous month. A large increase is reported in the number of deaths, both from injuries and from disease. The increase in the former class was due largely to the battle at Bayan Mindanao, and in the latter class of cholera.

FROM DAWSON.

Steamer Dolphin Brings Down a Million.

Vancouver, B. C., June 27.—The steamer Dolphin arrived today from Skagway, bringing down from Dawson $1,000,000. A systematic search is being made for new placer fields in the Yukon territory. Operations have been commenced on the Hootalinqua river, and if unsuccessful there will continue on down the Yukon river below Five Fingers and Prospect, the streams flowing north from that point.

AN INCREASE

In Interest and Dividend Payments For July.

New York, June 27.—A compilation of interest and dividend payments to be made in July, published by the Journal of Commerce, shows that the total disbursements this season will run in excess of 123,000,000. This is considerably ahead of last year's large total, and thus undoubtedly breaks all records. Dividends on railroad securities show an increase over the same period last year of $2,137,000, while industrial dividends show a shrinkage of $4,619,000. The latter is attributed largely to the disappearance of several large copper companies from the list.

WISE REVOLUTIONISTS

Venezuelan Rebels Held Up Train on Which Was American Consul's Wife---She and Party Were Guaranteed Safety.

New York, June 27.—A train carrying Mrs. Bowen, wife of the American minister; the Spanish minister, Senor Ayala and his wife and others, who were going from Caracas to La Guayra to take breakfast on board the United States cruiser Cincinnati, has been held up and searched by armed revolutionists, who captured several of President Castro's high officers and important documents, cables the Willmstad Curacao, dispatch to the Herald.

William W. Russell, secretary of the American legation, conferred with the revolutionists, who guaranteed absolute safety for Mrs. Bowen and her party, among whom was Lieut. Commander J. C. Gilmore of Philippine fame.

On the arrival of the train at La Guayra the captains of the Cincinnati and the Topeka raised the Spanish ensign and gave an official salute to the Spanish minister.

MORE TROUBLE AT MINE

Men Armed With Clubs and Stones Attack Workmen at the Stanton Colliery---Six Are Placed Under Arrest.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 27.—There was a disturbance in the vicinity of the Stanton colliery of the Lehigh & Wilkesbarre Coal company, in South Wilkesbarre, today, which resulted in the arrest of six men on the charge of assault and battery and causing a riot.

Fifteen men, armed with clubs and stones, set upon a fire boss and an assistant mine foreman as they were about to enter the colliery. As soon as the crowd of men began attacking the two workmen, the coal and iron police came to their rescue. Two of the fifteen were arrested and the others escaped, but an hour later four of them were taken into custody by the city police. The two workmen escaped without serious injury.

There has been considerable trouble at the Stanton colliery since the strike began, a boy having been shot in that vicinity several weeks ago.

EASY MONEY AT ST. PAUL

Woman Fell Into an Inch and a Quarter Hole In Sidewalk and Got Verdict---Supreme Court Sustains It.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—A majority of the supreme court by Justice Lovely today sustained a verdict of $250 damage obtained against the city of St. Paul in the Ramsey district court by Esther Bieber.

Justice Lewis dissents, and indulges in some sarcasm with regard to the merit of the plaintiff's argument, and the majority contention that a depression of an inch and a quarter in a side walk in front of a store may be dangerous and render the city liable for damages.

The supreme court, in an opinion by Justice Lovely today, reversed an order of the Hennepin county district court by which the case of Judith E. Plaunt vs. the Railroad Transfer company, of the city of Minneapolis, was dismissed. Mrs. Plaunt claimed that one cold winter day in 1901 she and her husband were kept waiting fully ten minutes at the railroad crossing, while a train of freight cars was switched back and forth across the street.

Finally the train stopped and the engineer assured Mrs. Plaunt that he would not start the engine until she had crossed the track. Just as she stepped on the rail he started the engine. She jumped to avoid being run down, and fell, seriously injuring herself. Her husband sprang forward and pulled her out of the way barely in time to save her being run over.

The supreme court holds that Mrs. Plaunt was not guilty of contributory negligence in accepting the assurance of the engineer and going upon the track; that it was a question of fact whether the starting of the engine justified her in going forward instead of turning back, and also whether the starting of the engine was the proximate cause of the accident. The trial court erred in dismissing the action.

It will go back for a new trial, and the questions of fact will be submitted to a jury.

DISGRACED MAN ENDS IT ALL

New York, June 27.—James E. Pearson, 65 years old, a well known lawyer, whose home is at Hempstead, L. I., and who had an office in Brooklyn was found dead in his office today. He had killed himself by inhaling gas. In his hand was the photograph of a woman. He left a letter, in which he said: "It is of no use. I have prayed for death and it does not come. Opportunity is given me for the first time in three weeks and I am alone in the office. I must not miss this opportunity and my family will be better off without me. Ruined, disgraced and unfit to live, all good bye. You will despise me when all is known. I am a defaulter and thief, and where all the money is gone, I cannot tell. My wife and children are left penniless." Pearson had six children.

ARBITRATION BOARD FAVORED

Washington, June 27.—The labor committee of the house today perfected and ordered a favorable report on the bill empowering the president to appoint federal arbitration boards to investigate and adjust strikes, lockouts, etc., which are of such magnitude as to effect interstate commerce. The membership of the board was reduced to five members, three to be appointed by the president and one by each of the parties to a labor controversy. The duties of the board are to investigate and report the facts, the idea being that publicity of the actual facts would do much to compel an adjustment. Furthermore, provision is made that the contending parties may submit their case to the board of arbitrators for final decision, but this it not compulsory. The bill will be reported at once, but it is too late in the session to expect final action.

SUBJECTS RAISE A ROW

Some People In England Were So Aggrieved Over the Postponement of Coronation That They Created Disturbances.

New York, June 27.—That many persons unreasonably felt asgrieved by the postponement of the local coronation festivities is shown, says a Herald dispatch from London, by the fact that disturbances have occurred in different parts of England. A crowd gathered in the streets of Watford and windows in the house of the chairman of the council were smashed, together with those of other members of the town coronation committee. Mounted police charged the crowd.

Considerable rioting was indulged in at Dunstable. A protest meeting was held and the crowd afterward proceeded to the residences of the mayor and rector, where, amid much hooting, windows were smashed. A move was then made to the Chiltern hills, where a great coronation bonfire was lighted contrary to orders.

A riot also occurred in Hampstead, owing to the decision of the coronation committee to sell the beef and provisions obtained for the coronation dinner for the poor. The disappointed poor collected in crowds and smashed windows of members of the committee.

At Newton, Montgomeryshire, the committee decided to postpone all festivities indefinitely. Several residents, being of the opinion that the children should not be disappointed, requested the chairman of the district council to convene a public meeting to consider the matter. This he refused to do. When the chairman emerged from the committee meeting he was hooted by a large crowd. He took refuge in an inn, which was immediately surrounded by hundreds of persons.

BRITISH AMERICANS REJOICE

Chicago, June 27.—Rejoicing at the somewhat more favorable news as to King Edward's condition, expressing sympathy with him and Queen Alexandra, and pledging themselves to work for a "closer union between the United States and Great Britain in all that makes for civilization," some 5000 British-American citizens of Chicago held an enthusiastic meeting at the First Regiment Armory last night. One of the most striking features of the meeting was the tribute paid to President Roosevelt. His picture was the first one shown among the stereopticon views, and it was received with long and tremendous cheering and waving of the flags of both nations. Addresses were made by Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, the Rev. W. Robson Nutman, Professor W. Douglas Mackenzie and others.

SOLDIERS GUARD VILLAGE

Washington, June 27.—A mounted patrol from the army post at Fort Myer last night guarded the village of Rossiyn, a little hamlet containing many saloons, located on the Virginia side of the Potomac river, opposite West Washington. Wednesday night theer was trouble between Saloonkeeper Geary, who runs a dance pavilion adjoining his place at Rossiyn, and some soldiers from Fort Myer, who were refused admittance. Harry C. Pancoast, a private in the artillery, remained behind after his companions had left, and subsequently was found with three bullet wounds in his back. He is still alive, but is dangerously hurt. Some of his fellow soldiers, incensed at his shooting, proceeded to Geary's saloon and riddled it with bullets, its inmates fleeing and escaping injury, save that one of them suffered a slight flesh wound. The army officers at the post are investigating the occurrence, and have taken measures to prevent further thouble.

CHINESE KILL A MISSIONARY

Pekin, June 27.—The viceroy of the proivnce of Szch-Chuan has notified the government that the American and British mission buildings at Tien-Ku-Chao have been destroyed by a mob, and that a missionary has been murdered. His name and nationality were not reported. An imperial edict just issued deprives the local magistrate of Tien-Ku-Chao of his rank, and orders the extermination of the rioters. Several of the leaders of the outbreak are reported to have been beheaded. Apparently this was an anti-indemnity rising, like those which have occurred elsewhere in China.

DULUTH IS HEALTHY

Government Statistics Place It Very High In That Respect.

Other Northwestern Cities Have Typhoid---Duluth Has None.

Contagious Diseases Have Been Practically Stamped Out.

Government health statistics show that Duluth is practically the healthiest city in the Northwest.

Typhoid fever has been prevalent in many other towns, cities and villages, but about the only typhoid in Duluth is brought here for treatment and not contracted within the city limits.

Of the few cases that have developed within the city during the last six months or more the disease was entirely among persons that were not using city water.

The Duluth water is considered one of the greatest of health promoters, and the city health authorities are now endeavoring to make the milk supply just as pure. It is claimed that Duluth's high rank in health statistics is also largely due to the municipal cattle and milk inspection inaugurated last winter.

The government reports show that Duluth, like many other Northwestern cities, has been threatened with an epidemic of diphtheria. Now, however, there are but few cases, the physicians having used anti-toxine with the greatest of success in stamping out the disease.

The diphtheria epidemic, however, was not attributed to inadequate sanitary conditions, but to the unusually damp and chilly weather that prevailed for several weeks. It was fostered under unusual conditions and is not placed against Duluth's credit by those that compile the government statistics.

Smallpox is just about wiped out. A few days ago only two cases were in the detention hospital, but a couple more came in from the north shore points. The health authorities are active and have hopes of putting the detention hospital out of commission in the very near future.

The government reports show that scarlet fever, which was prevalent in mild form in Duluth during the past winter, is gradually wiped out.

A physician yesterday said that Duluth's great health possibilities were not sufficiently advertised. He expressed the opinion that outside capital might be interested in a health resort up among the pines and suggested a general booming of the city along this line by the Commercial club and newspapers.

SUGGESTION

With Reference to Inducing Manufactories to Locate Here.

"I've got a suggestion for the Commercial club," said a well-known business man this morning. "There's no question but that with the wonderful development that has been made in the Northwest and that is still going on, Duluth offers manufacturers a most promising location to do business from. The chief thing to do is to find the established, successful concerns that have legitimate reason for building anew.

"Now, why not conduct a campaign directed upon the owners of industrial concerns that have been destroyed or badly damaged by fire? It would be an easy matter to get a list furnished of the plants that have been damaged or burned, and the claims of this city as a location for manufacturing plants could be promptly laid before the owners. Everybody knows that the center of the distributing territory for manufactured products in this country is moving West, and nobody realizes this better than the manufacturer in the older communities. If we could get him to see the justice of Duluth's merits in this direction, we would soon see the results of our work. The biggest step in this direction would be accomplished if we could promptly and properly lay this information before manufacturers who intend to rebuild."

IS CAUGHT.

James C. Spence Brought Up at San Francisco.

James C. Spence, of Duluth, nearly six feet tall and $1400 short, was arrested last night in San Francisco.

Until a short time ago Mr. Spence was the local representative of the United States Installment Realty association.

Two weeks ago he mysteriously disappeared. The affairs of his office were checked over and it was found then that he was about $60 short. Subsequent investigation is said to have increased this shortage to $1400.

Mr. Spence was formerly of Winnipeg, coming to this city about two years ago and accepting a position with the Duluth Music company, which position he left to accept the management of the United States Installment Realty company.

It was thought that Mr. Spence would be captured in Los Angeles for which place he purchased tickets on leaving Duluth. But the San Francisco police caught him while passing through that place.

An Associated Press dispatch from San Francisco today says: "J. P. Spence, said to be manager of the United States Realty association at Duluth, Minn., has been arrested here on a warrant telegraphed from the chief of police of Duluth, charging embezzlement. Spence was found with his wife and two children in a private house in Sutter street. He was quite ill and could not be removed. Spence came to San Francisco on June 16 with his family. To the detective he asserted he did not know why he was wanted in Duluth. He said he came to California solely for his health."

A SHINGLE MILL.

A. L. Newton Establishes One at Oneota Mill.

A. L. Newton, proprietor of the small sawmill on the bay front in Oneota, at the foot of Forty-fifth avenue west, has finished his cut of 5,000,000 feet of logs that he brought to the mill by rail last winter, and has installed a shingle mill at his plant. The machinery is in place and the mill will start up Monday morning to run the rest of the season.

It is claimed that the shingle market does not show the scarcity that it did during the early part of the season, but that there are excellent opportunities still for the smaller manufacturers. Shingle shipments from the head of the lake have been smaller thus far this season than during a similar period for some years past. Some stocks have accumulated at the head of the lakes' docks, but the owners are holding them for better prices. It is understood that Mr. Newton will cut for himself.

FEW CHANGES.

Michigan Street Market Not Marked By Any Features.

The Michigan street market has undergone a few changes in prices during the past week and with or two possible exceptions the changes have been advances. Eggs have advanced a cent, but butter prices indicate no change since the first of the week. There has been a sharp rise in pineapples and 50 cents more per box is asked than a week ago. The advance is said to be due to a scarcity. Lemons have advanced $1 per box. Strawberries show no change and raspberries are 10 cents higher per case.

There is no dearth of green stuff in the markets now and prices are remaining practically stationery. The principal advance noted has been in peas, which are quoted 50 cents higher per bushel than a week ago.

One of the latest features in the Michigan street market is the arrival of Southern grown watermelons. These are rather small and quotations run from 15 to 25 cents each. New potatoes are getting more plentiful and the price has slumped 10 cents per bushel, 90 cents now being asked.

An additional feature in the live poultry market is the arrival of numerous crates of spring chickens. The demand is said to be quite lively and prices are very good. The Michigan street price today is $5 per dozen for the chicks. There is no change from last week in other poultry prices.

Lard has advanced in the wholesale nearly a cent per pound. Mutton has advanced a half cent, but little or no change is noted in other meat prices.

LOCATION OF EDEN.

Peculiar Tenets of Religious Sect In St. Louis.

St. Louis, Mo., June 27.—A strange religious sect, which calls its organization the Church of God, and which has a most peculiar creed, holds meetings every Sunday afternoon at Thirteenth and Benton streets. John Cheary, an aged dealer in poultry and vegetables at Biddle market, is its founder, teacher and financial backbone of the body, which is composed of thirteen persons.

The "elder," as Mr. Cheary is termed, holds that the garden of Eden was in Western Africa, and as Noah fled to the east of Nod he must therefore have settled on the same continent. Here, Cheary holds, Cain fell in with a strange company, being physically similar to man, but his inferior in intelligence. One of these, asserts Elder Cheary, became the wife of Cain. To prove that he does not look upon these views in a spirit of levity and that he is endeavoring to amass all the knowledge of Bible he can, he inserted in the paper the following advertisement:

"$50 reward—I will give the above reward to anyone that will produce evidence that the negro is a descendant from Ham, Noah's son, or Cannan, Ham's son. John Cheary, 18 Biddle market."

Cheary is 64 years old, married, the father of six children, who are his staunch disciples, and is said to be very well-to-do.

PRAISES THE THIRTEENTH.

Good Words By Wheaton For Minnesota Men.

San Francisco, June 27.—Maj. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, who arrived here this week after a three years and six months service in the Philippines, pays a high compliment to the old Thirteenth Minnesota. He said he had never known of a better and more willing lot of men than those in the Thirteenth, and he had always been much pleased when they were in his brigade. Barring one action, he characterized the work of the Thirteenth on the night of April 10 and the morning of April 11, 1899, as hardly equalled during the whole campaign in the islands, and he thought the repulse of the insurgents at Guiguinto and at the two bridges to the south, where Capt. Metz, Capt. Spear and Lieut. Snow were in command, was one of the noteworthy incidents of the war, and for the officers and men in those fights he had nothing but the highest words of praise. In the subsequent advances on and capture of Santa Maria he had never seen better fighting qualities displayed.

"The Thirteenth Minnesota was made up of fine men, true soldiers, and the state of Minnesota should be proud of them," he said.

STUDENTS Y. M. C. A.

Seventeenth Conference to Be Held at Northfield.

New York, June 27.—The seventh annual Northfield student conference of the American and Canadian Student Young Men's Christian association will open here this evening, says a dispatch to the Tribune from East Northfield, Mass. The advance registration for this gathering has been unusually large and everything points to the largest number of students that has ever met here.

The sessions of the conference will be held morning and evening. This morning will be devoted to athletics and other forms of recreation. A number of well-known speakers will attend, among them Woodrow Wilson, president-elect of Princeton university; Rev. Charles W. Gordon, of Winnipeg, Man., and Rev. John Kelman, of Edinburgh, Scotland.

PREMIERS

Are Expecting Much From Coming Colonial Conference.

New York, June 27.—The colonial premiers and ministers, while sorely disappointed over the postponement of the coronation, are consulting among themselves, cables the London correspondent of the Tribune, and receiving cues from Colonial Secretary Joseph Chamberlain respecting the imperial conference next week. There is reason for the belief that the conference will gain importance from the collapse of the general festivities since public attention will be centered upon it. Premiers Laurier, Barton and Seddon will be the chief figures, but there will be strong men behind them. There is a hopeful feeling among the Canadian ministers and the premiers that, with the help of Mr. Chamberlain something may be done in the direction of preferential trade. Astute men like Premier Ross, from Toronto, and Ministers Fielding, Mulock and Patterson don't wish to commit themselves prematurely to any statement of policy, but they are convinced that the self-governing colonies have in Mr. Chamberlain a resourceful leader who commands support.

A JUDGE IS NAMED

William L. Windom to Succeed Judge Edson On Municipal Bench.

Governor Van Sant Appoints Him and Sends His Commission.

The Appointment Seems to Give General Satisfaction.

William L. Windom has been appointed judge of the municipal court to succeed Judge W. D. Edson.

Governor Van Sant signed his commission yesterday afternoon and today it is in Mr. Windom's possession.

The appointment was something of a surprise— not that it went to Mr. Windom particularly, but that it came so unexpectedly. The ink on Judge Edson's resignation was scarcely dry when the appointment of his successor was determined, and the governor rushed things through in a manner that surprised the politicians that were looking for a long drawn out contest.

Mr. Windom will assume his judicial duties on Aug. 1. The unexpired term of Judge Edson has a year and a half to run, and the municipal judgeship pays a salary of $3000 a year.

There is also a little patronage with the office, but the indications are that there will be no immediate change in the working force.

Mr. Windom is said to have gone on record to that effect during a conference with a few friends early this morning.

The appointment seems to give the utmost satisfaction. Frequently today there were expressions such as this:

"So Windom got it, did he! Well, he has the qualifications of a good judge. The governor could not possibly have selected a man more popular."

The new judge was out of the city most of the day, returning shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon. He was kept busy receiving congratulations.

Mr. Windom has been a prominent factor in Republican politics in this city for several years. Two years ago he was urged strongly for the Republican congressional nomination against Page Morris. He has fought the old Republican machine some bitter battles, but today some of the politicians that were most strongly against him two years ago are commenting on the wisdom of Governor Van Sant's choice.

Fine Purchase of Goods.

James K. Stack has just returned from the East, where by the use of spot cash he succeeded in purchasing several thousands of dollars worth of seasonable merchandise, which will be put on sale tomorrow. Eton jackets, dress skirts, shirt waists, wash goods, ladies' suits, etc., are included in the lot, and were bought of over-loaded manufacturers at surprisingly low prices. These will be closed out at figures lower than the same goods sold at wholesale less than a month ago. Duluth shoppers will be given the advantage of this fortunate purchase which comes at an especially good time, as summer is just coming.

WILL GO IN FORCE

Two Hundred Halden Men Going to St. Paul Monday.

O. Halden, St. Louis county's candidate for the Republican nomination for the state auditorship, will have no lack of supporters at St. Paul, during the Republican state convention next Tuesday. Arrangements are being completed today for a party of from 200 to 250 persons, who will leave on the Northern Pacific train Monday morning for St. Paul, to root for Mr. Halden, the popular auditor of St. Louis county. The delegation will take with it the Third regiment band and the car will be decorated with appropriate streamers that will notify the people along the line from Duluth to St. Paul the train bears Mr. Halden's friends.

One of the men who is going with the party says that enthusiasm among Mr. Halden's supporters in St. Louis county are becoming more marked as the time for the state convention approaches and that the Duluth delegation will make things interesting in St. Paul for their candidate. He says that it would be no perhaps to secure a delegation of 200 and perhaps 500 voters from the city and county that would go down and work for Halden and that the 250 estimate is a conservative one to make at this early date.

The headquarters for the delegation at St. Paul has not yet been selected, but this will be attended to, with numerous other details, before Monday morning. It include the chartering of a special car or is understood that the other details will two if this is found necessary.

BROKE JAIL.

Six Men Get Away From Jefferson, Wis., Pen.

Milwaukee, June 27.—A Daily News special from Jefferson, Wis., says: Six out of nine prisoners broke jail here early today. The names of those who escaped are Fred W. Stevenson, held on the charge of murdering Deputy Sheriff Parker at Waterloo, Wis.; Peter Kohl, held on a grave charge; Edward Hayes, awaiting trial for attempted murder; James Francis, charged with carrying concealed weapons; Heman Smi[illegible], and Jack Bailey, charged with assault with intent to kill a fellow tramp.

The prisoners gained their liberty by working a hole through the roof with a penknife.

ORDER IS AFFIRMED

In Case of McCarthy vs. Weare Commission Company.

Court Holds That Orders Should Have Been Executed.

Ramsey Decision In Lamphrey Land Case Is Reversed.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court, by Chief Justice Start, today affirmed the order of St. Louis county court in McCarthy Bros. & Co., respondents, vs. Weare Commission company, appellant.

The commission company bought and sold stocks for the plaintiffs as their brokers. The action was brought to settle a dispute over an account between the parties, where plaintiff claimed that certain orders were not executed by defendant. The latter's manager had reported them executed, and the court holds that they must be deemed to have been executed.

The chief justice holds further that a contract for the sale of goods which the seller can only acquire by purchase is a gambling venture where the parties do not intend any actual purchase and delivery of goods to fill contract, but merely risking the difference between the contract price and the market price at a future day. The illegal intent of one of the parties will not avail unless the other party knows, or ought to know, of such illegal purpose.

Chief Justice Start affirms the decision of the Hennepin county district court in Ole Halvorsen, appellant, vs. Moon & Kerr Lumber company, respondent.

The chief justice also affirmed the decision of the Otter Tail county court in George Krueger, respondent, vs. Great Northern Railroad company, appellant, a personal injury suit.

The conviction of William Story, of Steele county, charged with selling liquor without a license, is affirmed.

Chief Justice Stuart, of the supreme court, today reversed the judgment of the Ramsey county district court in the case of Uri L. Lamprey, appellant, vs. the St. Paul & Chicago Railroad company and Russel Sage, interpleaded with the Farmers' Loan & Trust company, respondents.

Lamprey brought the action to secure the specific performance of a contract under which the railroad company was due to sell him 30,000 acres of land located in twenty-six county of northern Minnesota. The company declared the contract forfeited and transferred the lands to Russell Sage.

Lamprey brought suit and the district court gave him thirty days in which to pay the money due. Lamprey claimed that the company would not accept his money.

His contract was declared forfeited, and he appealed to the supreme court, and the court holds that they must be deemed to have been executed.

The chief justice holds further that a contract for the sale of goods which the seller can only acquire by purchase is a gambling venture where the parties do not intend any actual purchase and delivery of goods to fill contract, but merely risking the difference between the contract price and the market price at a future day. Lamprey brought suit and the district court gave him thirty days in which to pay the money due. Lamprey claimed that the company would not accept his money.

His contract was declared forfeited, and he appealed to the supreme court, which reverses the lower court, and holds that Lamprey should not be compelled to pay the balance of the purchase price into court before the defendants give notice that they are willing to accept the money and deliver the deeds.

Besides the $30,000 purchase money there are $62,262.20 in taxes and penalties due.

FEED THEM.

One Way to Make Lawyers.

You can dig up the lawyers and put them on their feet if you feed them right, but they are like other people, they don't thrive on poorly selected food.

A lawyer from Seneca Falls, New York, says: "When I went into a law office I was in fine health, having had much outdoor exercise, but at the end of the second month's study and work I was disheartened to find myself in poor health and failing every day.

"After reading a short time I would become so nervous that I would be compelled to stop, nor could I remember, to any extent, what I read.

"The study of law, which at first was a great pleasure, became a burden, and a first-class physician told me that I never could be able to serve a full term in a law office, and advised me to give it up if I wanted to enjoy life. When upon the point of doing so, I was talking one day with one of the firm, who advised me to make a change in food, and recommended very highly your Grape-Nuts, saying I could get a package at any grocery and make the test.

"The advice impressed me so strongly that I at once purchased and began using Grape-Nuts. I found that after using this food I was not troubled with the lingering pain in my stomach that had been with me for some time; instead I was perfectly comfortable, and I had not eaten the food for more than four or five days when I began to notice a change. My head became clear again and I began to enjoy my studies as well as I did on the start, and could accomplish more in one week from that time on than I had in a whole month prior to that time.

"My blood, which had naturally become bad, presently improved; my digestion also was better. The blotches on my face began to disappear and I felt better in every way.

"I owe much to Grape-Nuts. Would rather you did not use my name, but if it will do you any good, use it." Name furnished by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Look for free recipe book in each package of Grape-Nuts.

CONFEREES APPOINTED

By House and Senate For the Philippine Bill.

Senate Refused to Accept House Bill As Expected.

Mr. Moon Blocks Several Unanimous Consent Bills.

Washington, June 27.—A conference report on the bill amending an act to provide a code of laws for the District of Columbia was agreed to by the senate soon after it convened today.

A joint resolution appropriating $100,000 for a monument to prison ship martyrs to be erected at Fort Green, Brooklyn, N. Y., was passed. It provides that the appropriation of $100,000 shall be made on condition that an additional $100,000 shall be raised, the work to be done under direction of the secretary of war, the governor of New York and the mayor of New York city.

A joint resolution was passed providing for printing of 100,000 copies of the memorial address on the late President McKinley, delivered by Secretary Hay.

The senate disagreed to house amendment to the Philippines bill and asked for a conference, the conferees named being Messrs. Lodge, Allison (Iowa) and Culberson (Tex.)

A resolution was adopted authorizing the committee on territories to sit during the recess to consider bills providing for the admission of territories to statehood.

Mr. Mitchell (Ore.) presented a joint resolution of the legislature of Oregon, asking congress for a suitable appropriation for a centennial exposition in honor of the Lewis and Clarke expedition to the pacific coast to be held in the city of Portland in 1905.

The general deficiency appropriation bill was sent to conference with Messrs. Hale, Allison and Teller as conferees.

Mr. Pettus (Ala.), offered the following resolution:

Whereas, it is asserted that American citizens holding American passports have been and are excluded by the Russian empire from its territory, solely because of their religious belief, contrary to treaty stipulations, therefore

Resolved, that the president of the United States is requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to inform the senate as to the attitude of he Russian government toward American citizens attempting to enter its territory with American passports.

Mr. Bacon inquired if there was authority for the statement in the preamble of the resolution.

Mr. Pettus said that he had what he considered reliable authority for the assertion. The resolution was adopted.

Consideration then was begun of the bill, "to provide for the allotment of lands of the Cherokee reservation, the disposition of townsites therein and for other purposes."

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 27.—The house today disagreed to the senate amendments to the general deficiency appropriation bill and sent the bill to conference.

Mr. Alexander (N. Y.), asked if a separate vote would be allowed on the Buffalo exposition amendment.

Mr. Cannon replied that he had no power to prevent a vote and if the senate was in earnest in insisting on the exposition amendments, he had no doubt that the house would be called upon to act as he frankly stated that personally he would oppose the acceptance of those amendments.

Messrs. Cannon (Ill.), Barney (Wis.), and Livingston (Ga.), were appointed conferees.

A resolution was adopted calling on the secretary of war for information as to the number of promotions in the army since April 1, 1898, together with the number of officers who have been retired within one year of their promotion, and the additional cost of such retirement at the higher grade.

Bills were passed to authorize the West Elizabeth & Gravesburg Bridge company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela river at Port View, Pa.; to authorize the Duluth, Pierre & Black Hills Railroad company to construct a bridge across the Missouri river at Pierre, S. D.; directing the court of appeals of the Fifth judicial district to hold at least one term of court annually at Atlanta, Ga.

The senate's request for a conference on the Philippines government bill was agreed to and Messrs. Cooper (Wis.), Paine (N. Y.), Crumpacker (Ind.), Jones (Va.) and Maddox (Ga.) were appointed conferees.

Half a dozen requests for unanimous consent met with objection from Mr. Moon (Tenn.), who said quietly to his friends that as long as he was a member of the house he intended to object to every request for unanimous consent until he was given recognition to move the passage of the bill giving a territorial form of government to the Indian territory. He thus blocked the fond hopes of many members and they crowded about and appealed to him not to stand in the way of pet measures.

A bill was passed to amend the internal revenue laws so as to place perique tobacco on a similar footing with other tobaccos regarding packages.

Mr. Tayler (Ohio) then called up the contested election case of Houston vs. Butler from the Twelfth Missouri district, in which the majority of the committee reported there was na valid election and in favor of declaring the seat vacant.

Mr. Smith (Iowa) opened the debate on behalf of the majority report to declare the seat vacant.

AMNESTY

A JUDGE IS NAMED

William L. Windom to Succeed Judge Edson On Municipal Bench.

Governor Van Sant Appoints Him and Sends His Commission.

The Appointment Seems to Give General Satisfaction.

William L. Windom has been appointed judge of the municipal court to succeed Judge W. D. Edson.

Governor Van Sant signed his commission yesterday afternoon and today it is in Mr. Windom's possession.

The appointment was something of a surprise— not that it went to Mr. Windom particularly, but that it came so unexpectedly. The ink on Judge Edson's resignation was scarcely dry when the appointment of his successor was determined, and the governor rushed things through in a manner that surprised the politicians that were looking for a long drawn out contest.

Mr. Windom will assume his judicial duties on Aug. 1. The unexpired term of Judge Edson has a year and a half to run, and the municipal judgeship pays a salary of $5000 a year.

There is also a little patronage with the office, but the indications are that there will be no immediate change in the working force.

Mr. Windom is said to have gone on record to that effect during a conference with a few friends early this morning.

The appointment seems to give the utmost satisfaction. Frequently today there were expressions such as this:

"So Windom got it, did he! Well, he has the qualifications of a good judge. The governor could not possibly have selected a man more popular."

The new judge was out of the city most of the day, returning shortly after 3 o'clock this afternoon. He was kept busy receiving congratulations.

Mr. Windom has been a prominent factor in Republican politics in this city for several years. Two years ago he was urged strongly for the Republican congressional nomination against Page Morris. He has fought the old Republican machine some bitter battles, but today some of the politicians that were most strongly against him two years ago are commenting on the wisdom of Governor Van Sant's choice.

Fine Purchase of Goods.

James K. Stack has just returned from the East, where by the use of spot cash he succeeded in purchasing several thousands of dollars worth of seasonable merchandise, which will be put on sale tomorrow. Eton jackets, dress skirts, shirt waists, wash goods, ladies' suits, etc., are included in the lot, and were bought of over-loaded manufacturers at surprisingly low prices. These will be closed out at figures lower than the same goods sold at wholesale less than a month ago. Duluth shoppers will be given the advantage of this fortunate purchase which comes at an especially good time, as summer is just coming.

WILL GO IN FORCE

Two Hundred Halden Men Going to St. Paul Monday.

O. Halden, St. Louis county's candidate for the Republican nomination for the state auditorship, will have no lack of supporters at St. Paul, during the Republican state convention next Tuesday. Arrangements are being completed today for a party of from 200 to 250 persons, who will leave on the Northern Pacific train Monday morning for St. Paul, to root for Mr. Halden, the popular auditor of St. Louis county. The delegation will take with it the Third regiment band and the car will be decorated with appropriate streamers that will notify the people along the line from Duluth to St. Paul the train bears Mr. Halden's friends.

One of the men who is going with the party says that enthusiasm among Mr. Halden's supporters in St. Louis county are becoming more marked as the time for the state convention approaches and that the Duluth delegation will make things interesting in St. Paul for their candidate. He says that it would be no perhaps to secure a delegation of 200 and perhaps 500 voters from the city and county that would go down and work for Halden and that the 250 estimate is a conservative one to make at this early date.

The headquarters for the delegation at St. Paul has not yet been selected, but this will be attended to, with numerous other details, before Monday morning. It include the chartering of a special car or is understood that the other details will two if this is found necessary.

BROKE JAIL.

Six Men Get Away From Jefferson, Wis., Pen.

Milwaukee, June 27.—A Daily News special from Jefferson, Wis., says: Six out of nine prisoners broke jail here early today. The names of those who escaped are Fred W. Stevenson, held on the charge of murdering Deputy Sheriff Parker at Waterloo, Wis.; Peter Kohl, held on a grave charge; Edward Hayes, awaiting trial for attempted murder; James Francis, charged with carrying concealed weapons; Heman Smith, larceny, and Jack Bailey, charged with assault with intent to kill a fellow tramp.

The prisoners gained their liberty by working a hole through the roof with a penknife.

SEVERE STORM

Has Been Raging at Galveston and Houston.

Dallas, Tex., June 27.—Communication with Galveston was re-established via Postal Telegraph company at 2 o'clock. It is learned from the telegraph officials that there has been a severe storm with considerable ramage both at Houston and at Galveston, but so far as known no loss of life. Heavy rain is falling from Dallas to the gulf.

JUDGE LONG DEAD.

Detroit, June 27.—Justice of the State Supreme Court Charles D. Long died here this afternoon after a long illness.

ORDER IS AFFIRMED

In Case of McCarthy vs. Weare Commission Company.

Court Holds That Orders Should Have Been Executed.

Ramsey Decision In Lamphrey Land Case Is Reversed.

St. Paul, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court, by Chief Justice Start, today affirmed the order of St. Louis county court in McCarthy Bros. & Co., respondents, vs. Weare Commission company, appellant.

The commission company bought and sold stocks for the plaintiffs as their brokers. The action was brought to settle a dispute over an account between the parties, where plaintiff claimed that certain orders were not executed by defendant. The latter's manager had reported them executed, and the court holds that they must be deemed to have been executed.

The chief justice holds further that a contract for the sale of goods which the seller can only acquire by purchase is a gambling venture where the parties do not intend any actual purchase and delivery of goods to fill contract, but merely risking the difference between the contract price and the market price at a future day. The illegal intent of one of the parties will not avail unless the other party knows, or ought to know, of such illegal purpose.

Chief Justice Start affirms the decision of the Hennepin county district court in Ole Halvorsen, appellant, vs. Moon & Kerr Lumber company, respondent.

The chief justice also affirmed the decision of the Otter Tail county court in George Kruezer, respondent, vs. Great Northern Railroad company, appellant, a personal injury suit.

The conviction of William Story, of Steele county, charged with selling liquor without a license, is affirmed.

Chief Justice Stuart, of the supreme court, today reversed the judgment of the Ramsey county district court in the case of Uri L. Lamprey, appellant, vs. the St. Paul & Chicago Railroad company and Russel Sage, interpleaded with the Farmers' Loan & Trust company, respondents.

Lamprey brought the action to secure the specific performance of a contract under which the railroad company was due to sell him 30,000 acres of land located in twenty-six county of northern Minnesota. The company declared the contract forfeited and transferred the lands to Russell Sage.

Lamprey brought suit and the district court gave him thirty days in which to pay the money due. Lamprey claimed that the company would not accept his money.

His contract was declared forfeited, and he appealed to the supreme court, which reverses the lower court, and holds that Lamprey should not be compelled to pay the balance of the purchase price into court before the defendants give notice that they are willing to accept the money and deliver the deeds.

Besides the $30,000 purchase money there are $62,262.20 in taxes and penalties due.

FEED THEM.

One Way to Make Lawyers.

You can dig up the lawyers and put them on their feet if you feed them right, but they are like other people, they don't thrive on poorly selected food.

A lawyer from Seneca Falls, New York, says: "When I went into a law office I was in fine health, having had much outdoor exercise, but at the end of the second month's study and work I was disheartened to find myself in poor health and failing every day.

"After reading a short time I would become so nervous that I would be compelled to stop, nor could I remember, to any extent, what I read.

"The study of law, which at first was a great pleasure, became a burden, and a first-class physician told me that I never could be able to serve a full term in a law office, and advised me to give it up if I wanted to enjoy life. When upon the point of doing so, I was talking one day with one of the firm, who advised me to make a change in food, and recommended very highly your Grape-Nuts, saying I could get a package at any grocery and make the test.

"The advice impressed me so strongly that I at once purchased and began using Grape-Nuts. I found that after using this food I was not troubled with the lingering pain in my stomach that had been with me for some time; instead I was perfectly comfortable, and I had not eaten the food for more than four or five days when I began to notice a change. My head became clear again and I began to enjoy my studies as well as I did on the start, and could accomplish more in one week from that time on than I had in a whole month prior to that time.

"My blood, which had naturally become bad, presently improved; my digestion also was better. The blotches on my face began to disappear and I felt better in every way.

"I owe much to Grape-Nuts. Would rather you did not use my name, but if it will do you any good, use it." Name furnished by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

Look for free recipe book in each package of Grape-Nuts.

CONFEREES APPOINTED

By House and Senate For the Philippine Bill.

Senate Refused to Accept House Bill As Expected.

Mr. Moon Blocks Several Unanimous Consent Bills.

Washington, June 27.—A conference report on the bill amending an act to provide a code of laws for the District of Columbia was agreed to by the senate soon after it convened today.

A joint resolution appropriating $100,000 for a monument to prison ship martyrs to be erected at Fort Green, Brooklyn, N. Y., was passed. It provides that the appropriation of $100,000 shall be made on condition that an additional $100,000 shall be raised, the work to be done under direction of the secretary of war, the governor of New York and the mayor of New York city.

A joint resolution was passed providing for printing of 100,000 copies of the memorial address on the late President McKinley, delivered by Secretary Hay.

The senate disagreed to house amendment to the Philippines bill and asked for a conference, the conferees named being Messrs. Lodge, Allison (Iowa) and Culberson (Tex.)

A resolution was adopted authorizing the committee on territories to sit during the recess to consider bills providing for the admission of territories to statehood.

Mr. Mitchell (Ore.) presented a joint resolution of the legislature of Oregon, asking congress for a suitable appropriation for a centennial exposition in honor of the Lewis and Clarke expedition to the pacific coast to be held in the city of Portland in 1905.

The general deficiency appropriation bill was sent to conference with Messrs. Hale, Allison and Teller as conferees.

Mr. Pettus (Ala.), offered the following resolution:

Whereas, it is asserted that American citizens holding American passports have been and are excluded by the Russian empire from its territory, solely because of their religious belief, contrary to treaty stipulations, therefore

Resolved, that the president of the United States is requested, if not incompatible with the public interest, to inform the senate as to the attitude of he Russian government toward American citizens attempting to enter its territory with American passports.

Mr. Bacon inquired if there was authority for the statement in the preamble of the resolution.

Mr. Pettus said that he had what he considered reliable authority for the assertion. The resolution was adopted.

Consideration then was begun of the bill, "to provide for the allotment of lands of the Cherokee reservation, the disposition of townsites therein and for other purposes."

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 27.—The house today disagreed to the senate amendments to the general deficiency appropriation bill and sent the bill to conference.

Mr. Alexander (N. Y.), asked if a separate vote would be allowed on the Buffalo exposition amendment.

Mr. Cannon replied that he had no power to prevent a vote and if the senate was in earnest in insisting on the exposition amendments, he had no doubt that the house would be called upon to act as he frankly stated that personally he would oppose the acceptance of those amendments.

Messrs. Cannon (Ill.), Barney (Wis.), and Livingston (Ga.), were appointed conferees.

A resolution was adopted calling on the secretary of war for information as to the number of promotions in the army since April 1, 1898, together with the number of officers who have been retired within one year of their promotion, and the additional cost of such retirement at the higher grade.

Bills were passed to authorize the West Elizabeth & Gravesburg Bridge company to construct a bridge across the Monongahela river at Port View, Pa.; to authorize the Duluth, Pierre & Black Hills Railroad company to construct a bridge across the Missouri river at Pierre, S. D.; directing the court of appeals of the Fifth judicial district to hold at least one term of court annually at Atlanta, Ga.

The senate's request for a conference on the Philippines government bill was agreed to and Messrs. Cooper (Wis.), Paine (N. Y.), Crumpacker (Ind.), Jones (Va.) and Maddox (Ga.) were appointed conferees.

Half a dozen requests for unanimous consent met with objection from Mr. Moon (Tenn.), who said quietly to his friends that as long as he was a member of the house he intended to object to every request for unanimous consent until he was given recognition to move the passage of the bill giving a territorial form of government to the Indian territory. He thus blocked the fond hopes of many members and they crowded about and appealed to him not to stand in the way of pet measures.

A bill was passed to amend the internal revenue laws so as to place perique tobacco on a similar footing with other tobaccos regarding packages.

Mr. Tayler (Ohio) then called up the contested election case of Houston vs. Butler from the Twelfth Missouri district, in which the majority of the committee reported there was na voild election and in favor of declaring the seat vacant.

Mr. Smith (Iowa) opened the debate on behalf of the majority report to declare the seat vacant.

AS EXPECTED.

Governor Bliss Renominated By the Michigan Republicans.

Detroit, Mich., June 26.—No surprises developed in yesterday's state Republican convention, and as was expected, Governor Aaron T. Bliss, of Saginaw, was renominated for a second term on the first ballot. A motion to make his nomination unanimous was defeated, however, by the objection of Editor M. L. Cook, of Hastings, who had placed John Patton, Jr., ex-United States senator, of Grand Rapids, in nomination, and who waged a bitter fight against Governor Bliss throughout the campaign. The following is the ticket:

Governor—Aaron T. Bliss, of Saginaw.

Lieutenant-governor—Alex Maitland, of Marquette.

Secretary of State—Fred M. Warner, of Farmington.

State Treasurer—Daniel McCoy, of Grand Rapids.

Auditor-general—Perry F. Powers, of Cadillac.

Attorney-general—Charles A. Blair, of Jackson.

Commissioner of State Land Office—Edwin A. Wildey, of Pawpaw.

Superintendent of Public Instruction—Delos A. Fall, of Albion.

Members of State Board of Education—Patrick H. Kelly, Detroit; L. L. Wright, of Ironwood.

All of these, with the exception of Lieutenant-Governor Maitland, attorney-general, and members of the board of education, are re-nominated. Both Maitland and Blair were nominated on the first ballot.

FOUNDRIES

Now Organized In Trust With Forty Millions Capital.

New York, June 27.—Formal announcement of the organization of the American steel foundries under a New Jersey charter, with an authorized capital of $40,000,000, half 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock and half common, was made yesterday. The new corporation acquires these plants and properties:

American Steel Castings company, of New Jersey; Bellaire Steel Castings company (Ltd.), of Pittsburg; Lebanon & Howard Steel company, of St. Louis, Mo.; Franklin Steel Casting company, of Franklin, Pa.; the Sargent company, of Chicago, Ill., and American Steel Foundry company, of St. Louis.

It will issue against them and for additional working capital $15,000,000 6 per cent cumulative preferred stock, and the same amount of common stock.

The balance will remain in the corporation's treasury for future purposes, not to be issued save for actual cash or property of actual cash value at par. Control of the companies named is to be taken over not later than July 15.

The statement is made that the owners of the constituent companies declined to accept any cash payment, but took stock instead, thus reducing the cash requirements very considerably. These were guaranteed by Charles M. Schwab and Elbert H. Gary, president and chairman respectively, of the United States Steel corporation, and Max Pam.

It is stated that no underwriting fees or privileges were exacted. Announcement of the election of officers will be made shortly.

THE RAIL CONTRACTS

For Next Year Already Amount to About 700,000 Tons.

The Locomotive Works Are Sold Up Well Into 1903.

Building Demand Is Not Checked By Present Prices.

Cleveland, June 27.—The Iron Trade Review says: The iron trade has added considerable new tonnage to its bookings for 1903 in the past week, and consumers have found that pig iron, steel billets and the heavier forms of finished material are increasingly difficult to get for this year's delivery. Steel rail contracts already made for next year amount to about 700,000 tons, and it is estimated that 1902 tonnage on the books that cannot be rolled this year will increase this amount to 1,000,000 tons. The railroads give no sign of being less liberal buyers in the coming year than in the year ending with the first half of 1902. Locomotive works are sold up well into 1903, and have even taken orders for 1904. In car construction also there is no indication that the pace will be slackened in the year just ahead. Agricultural works in many instances will be busy through most of the summer, except for the time required by necessary repairs, and specifications for a considerable tonnage of steel bars will come in just that much earlier than usual. In this way some of the easing up on converting and open-hearth plants expected to result from the slowing down in the wire trade, and to some extent in sheets, will be counteracted.

A number of rolling mills in the Central West that will be closed down for the first two weeks in July have been very active this month on specifications that came in in anticipation of the shut-down. In the East the settlement of some of the puddlers' and finishers' strikes has added to the production of bars and abolished premiums that were being paid for early deliveries. The structural and plate mills are steadily booking orders for 1903. Building demand seems not to be checked by present prices, even though some producers of structural shapes continue to get a good advance over the Pittsburg basis of 1.60 cents. Concerning the proposal for the shutting down of wire and wire nail plants for a part of July, there is no concert in the matter. Some of the plants of the larger producers are undergoing repairs, and in the case of smaller interests the present prices for billets and rods are operating to dimit their production. Further importations of steel are in prospect and prices for foreign billets are rather lower—$30 at seaboard and $32 at Pittsburg and Chicago, import steel for the latter point coming via New Orleans. The pig iron market shows in some localities continued interest in 1903 contracts for foundry iron. The agricultural interests are believed to be fairly well covered for the first half, and some jobbing foundries that have sold castings for delivery in the next twelve months have supplied themselves. The bulk of the foundry trade considers that prices will not be higher and is not in a hurry to contract. Meantice prices for spot delivery advance. Lehigh valley furnaces continue to bank for lack of fuel. In Southern Ohio the furnaces banked for lack of New River and Pocahontas coke have not secured enough to start and at Columbus two shut-downs seem inevitable. A number of foundries are on the point of closing down. We hear of sales of Southern No. 2 foundry iron for 1903 delivery at $17 at furnace. Delivered sales are not now made from the South, in view of the agitation of an advance in freights. From Central Western furnaces sales for next year are made at from $20 to $21 for No. 2 foundry.

BRIDE

Complained That She Had Been Married to a Woman.

Baltimore, Md., June 27.—Is Herman G. Hood a man or a woman? His bride of a week has entered complaint to the police department through the minister that united them that the husband is a woman, and in the face of this the groom comes forward with the positive statement that he is a man. There the matter rests, but the minister says that the bride desires to take out a warrant for the arrest of her man-woman husband, as she has fears for her life.

Hood came to Baltimore six years ago from Elizabeth City, N. C., and about six months ago took up his residence with Mrs. Ernestine L. Rauck, a widow of a year. First acquaintance ripened into love, and on June 16 the couple were united in the parsonage of the Universalist church by the pastor, Rev. Anthony Bilkovsky. Last evening Mrs. Wood went to the minister and complained that he had married her to a woman, and he in turn called upon the police department to unravel the mystery.

The groom when seen proved quite communicative, but said that the news that he was a woman completely staggered him. "I certainly think I am a man," he said in a distinctly effeminate voice, in spite of his size, which is that of a vigorous man. "I am astonished at my wife going to Rev. Bilkovsky with such a story."

In discussing the matter further he said that all Mrs. Wood had to do was to say that she was dissatisfied and she need not live with him.

PHILIPPINE

Passed House Practically as Reported From Committee.

Washington, June 27.—At 8 o'clock last night, at the end of a nine-hour session and of a debate lasting night and day for a week, the house passed the Philippine civil government bill practically as it came from the committee. It was a party vote, 161 to 97, with the exception of Mr. McCall, of Massachusetts, who voted with the Democrats. The minority substitute for the establishment of a temporary government in the islands and their permanent independence, as soon as a stable government could be established, was defeated by 35 to 136.

The debate during the day was at times of a lively character. The Democrats offered a multitude of amendments, but all were voted down, including one offered by Mr. Patterson, of Tennessee, to prohibit slavery or involuntary servitude in the islands. The greatest interest attached to an amendment offered by Mr. McCall, Republican, of Massachusetts, to the end of the bill to declare the policy of the United States to be to develop the capacity of the Filipinos for self-government. He supported the amendment in an eloquent speech, and the Democrats challenged their political adversaries to declare their future policy. Mr. Grosvenor, of Ohio, and Mr. Cooper, of Wisconsin, said it would be unwise to mortgage the future by making such a declaration now, and the latter quoted Governor Taft as saying that such a promise now would tend to prevent the pacification of the islands.

The amendment was lost by a strict party vote, except for Mr. McCall and Mr. Littlefield, of Maine, who voted with the Democrats for the amendment.

GRAY A CANDIDATE.

Minneapolis, June 27.—Former Mayor James Gray will be a candidate for the Democratic mayoralty nomination, Mr. Gray has been turning the proposition over in his mind for some time, and Wednesday he gave his answer to some of his Democratic friends, who are particularly interested. He said privately that he would be a candidate, and a public announcement is looked for within a week. He will then enter the field now occupied by Julius J. Heinrich and Tom Lally.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Millions of grasshoppers are attacking the grain in the Hill river district near McIntosh, Minn. The state entomologist is assisting the farmers in combating the pest and hopper dosers are in daily use. Unplowed stubble is the cause of the trouble.

Diavolo, who does the loop-the-loop on a bicycle at the Elk's carnival, fell Thursday at Des Moines. His shoulder blade was broken. He was removed to a hospital and will recover.

Governor Nash has appointed Harry L. Gordon, a well-known attorney of Cincinnati, lieutenant governor to succeed Hon. Carl L. Nippert, resigned. There will be no election of a lieutenant governor this fall.

W. J. Bryan, Thursday evening made the announcement that he was not invited to the Tilden club banquet in New York, adding that if he had been he "would have responded explaining why he would not attend a political banquet given in honor of one who twice opposed the Democratic ticket and never since has announced his intention to return to the party."

At a meeting at which were delegates from all branches of the silk industry at Paterson, N. J., it was voted not to order a general strike in sympathy with that of the dyers' helpers. The Socialists' Trades and Labor alliance withdrew and did not vote.

John D. Rockefeller has given $30,000 to the University of Indiana for the erection of a building to be used for local and religious purposes among students. Under the circumstances of the gift from Mr. Rockefeller the friends of Indiana university must raise $30,000 on or before Jan. 1, 1903. Of this amount $15,000 has already been secured.

Into the hot oven of a stove Daniel Culnane of Marlboro, Mass., thrust his 7-year-old son, but while the father was gathering fuel to make a greater fire the lad was liberated by an older brother, who heard his screams. The child was terribly burned, but will recover.

The father said that the devil had told him to burn his child.

Word has been received from Fort Hale, Idaho, that Judge Donaldson, a landowner of Wood River, Neb., and Charles Fritz, who accompanied him, had been found murdered on the newly located Fort Hale reservation. No object except that of robbery has been given for the crime. Donaldson at the time was locating grazing lands and Fritz had accompanied him as a guide.

Fifteen thousand workmen of the Carnegie Steel company have received a voluntary increase of 10 per cent, making the lowest pay $1.60 per day. Tonnage men and other skilled workmen are not affected. The increase in pay goes into effect without the knowledge of the men.

SAVED FROM AN AWFUL FATE.

"Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa. "I was so low after six months of severe sickness, caused by hay fever and asthma, that few thought I could get well, but I learned the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, used it and was completely cured." For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world, and is infallible for coughs, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. A. Abbett's Drug Store.

OPTIONS ARE MANY

Much Land on Vermilion Range Has Been Covered.

But Explorations Are Not Under Way on Very Large Scale.

Opinions as to Leasing of the Section Thirty Property.

Surprise is expressed by people familiar with exploratory operations on the Vermilion range thus far that they are not on a larger scale. One man who has looked into the subject somewhat says that there is no doubt but that enough options have been given on lands on the Vermilion this spring to warrant the belief that somebody was trying to corner all the possibilities on that range.

"Parties vaguely claiming to represent some very strong interests caused some little stir some time back," said he, "by going about and gathering options on all the property that anybody had ever spoken of as bearing indications of iron on the Vermilion range. Nobody has been able to find out that there parties have anybody back of them or that the lands they have secured by option will ever be explored by them or anybody connected with them.

"In fact, it looks to me very much like a little scheme for gambling on the probability of a demand for these lands for exploratory purposes, and the chance of having this option equity in some piece that might be badly wanted. Of course, if anybody should want such a property, he would have to obtain a release of the option rights already acquired by these mysterious parties.

"It looks very much to me as if some of the people who had given options so freely might have occasion later to wish they had not done so without investigating a little more carefully. However, we can't always tell. These parties may represent the steel corporation."

While the Cleveland-Cliffs people have been busily denying that they are making a deal for the section 30 lands, negotiations it is well known here, were begun, and have been going forward looking to the purchase of the lands by that corporation. On what basis a trade is being talked about is not known. Very few people ever believed when The Herald announced that the Cleveland-Cliffs people were considering a deal that they would pay $4,000,000 and 50 cents royalty. No secret was made of the fact that the owners of the property asked everybody that had interviewed them concerning the lands the full figures stated by The Herald at the time. It is said that no less than eighteen different parties have gotten as far at least as preliminary negotiations for the purchase of section 30. To all of them the same answer was given—$4,000,000 and 50 cents a ton royalty.

It is considered that the Cleveland-Cliffs company has the first refusal of the property at a figure acceptable to the owners owing to the very friendly relations that have long existed between the largest interests in the corporation and George J. Lonstorf, who is the largest individual owner of the section 30 property.

"People may scout the idea that there is a large ore body on section 30," said a veteran explorer of the Vermilion range today, "but I am satisfied that there is another Chandler mine there. The formation is the same as at the Chandler as far as anybody can see. There is no question but that the drill holes that have been put down have revealed the existence of ore bodies on the property.

"I am inclined to believe that this is the last large body of ore on the Vermilion range. My conviction is that most of the other deposits there are in the form of pockets, and that the ore does not exist in large bodies. Still you can't tell what may be found even on lands that have been pretty well explored already."

COMING BACK.

St. Petersburg, Thursday, June 12.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.)—Official figures showing the emigration for the year 1901, are published. The total movement to Siberia is given roundly as 128,700, comprising 94,700 emigrants, 25,000 pioneers of intending emigrants and 9000 peasants seeking work. There returned 55,000 persons, including 31,000 emigrants, 18,000 pioneers and 6000 workingmen. The return movement is stronger than it was in 1900. The greatest emigration was from Poltava and from other thickly populated central provinces where the land allotments made after the emancipation were most unfavorable to the peasants.

Special Notice!

We have for some time past been seriously considering the advisability of adding a candy kitchen to our store in order that our patrons could buy from us pure, wholesome, fresh home made confections at popular prices. The chief obstacle in our way has been that a candy kitchen interfered with our insurance. As we are constantly looking out for the interests of our patrons to give them the best goods for the least money, we have arranged with Mr. W. W. Seekins to take the entire management of the Candy Department, and manufacture all our better grade of goods in a candy kitchen in connection with his greenhouses. Mr. Seekins will take charge the first of July. We will also turn over to him on the first day of July our Flower Department, which he will conduct in connection with his greenhouses—and while our patrons may be put to some disadvantages while the improvements of our store are going on, we feel justified in saying that when The Greater Glass Block Store is completed our Flower Department will have no equal in the city and our candy will please the palate of the most exacting Epicure. Mr. Seekins is well enough known to need no recommendation from us—he takes possession Tuesday morning, and we want to have one parting sale of candy tor Saturday—sale will be conducted on Bargain Counter 3 and at the Candy Department.

10c All Candy that we have been retailing at 25c and less will be sold at 10c a lb.

All Candy that we have been retailing at 35c, 40c and 50c will be sold at 25c per lb. 25c

The Candies to be sold at 25c include all our fine 35c, 40c and 50c Chocolates, all flavors—50c Peerless Wafers, 50c Licorice Lozengers, 50c Burnt Almonds, 50c Fruit Tablets, 40c Candy Sticks, etc.

All Candies Offered at This Sale Are Fresh and Absolutely Pure and Wholesome.

VEST'S REMINISCENCES.

Replying to the suggestion that he write his memoirs, Senator George G. Vest of Missouri, who will retire to private life next year, after forty years of public service, has this to say, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean: "I am not vain enough to suppose that matters personal to myself would excite any general interest. But the time may come when I might consider it necessary to ublish my recollections in order to do justice to the dead and remove many false impressions now accepted as authentic history." The senator's "recollections" would be a valuable contribution to the history of the civil war period, and he could hardly round out his career in a worthier manner than by committing them to writing.

DEWEY IS POSITIVE

In His Statements Concerning His Dealings With Aguinaldo.

States Plainly What He Did and Did Not Do.

Says Aguinaldo Was Out For Personal Gain Solely.

Washington, June 27.—Admiral Dewey continued his testimony before the senate committee on the Philippines today. Replying to questions put by Senator Patterson, he said that he had begun negotiations with the governor general of the islands, Gen. Jaudenes, for the surrender of the city, and the negotiations were conducted through the Belgian consul who, after the death of the British consul, had been very courteous in acting as a go-between. It was a diplomatic negotiation, no letters being written. The admiral said he had informed Gen. Merritt of the proffer of Gen. Jaudenes, but that he did not believe that Merritt had taken "much stock in it. I assured him that such was the case," said the admiral. "But told him of the arrangement that before the surrender should take place I wag to engage an outlying fort and make the signal according to the international code, 'do you surrender,' after which the Spaniards were to hoist the white flag on the southern bastion. I may say that I was the first to discover the flag, notwithstanding I had stationed fifty men to look out for it. It was a thick day, and I chanced to be the first to discover it." He also said he had read the testimony of Gen. MacArthur, saying that he knew of no agreement of the kind mentioned, but that it had not been his (Dewey's) business to communicate with any one except the commanding official.

Asked by Mr. Patterson to explain his statement that Gen. Merritt had not accepted the report that the Spaniards had agreed to capitulate, Admiral Dewey said that was only his belief: "I don't believe," he said, "that the general entirely trusted the Spanish authorities. Still he did not say so in so many words. I may add that I have since learned that some of the Spanish officers were tempted to fire at us, though they did not say so. Even my own flag lieutenant did not accept their proffer as in the best faith. I knew, however, that they would surrender, for I understood he straits they were in."

Replying to a question as to whether the agreement to surrender had been made public at the time of the attack upon Manila, Admiral Dewey said he thought not. "There are," he said, "lots of things which are not comcunicated to the public."

Mr. Patterson sought to secure from Admiral Dewey an admission that Aguinaldo had issued a proclamation of independence to the Filipinos about the time of the sinking of the Spanish squadron, but the admiral said he did not remember it, although it was possible that he might have done so.

Mr. Patterson then read the paper forwarded by Consul General Pratt, May 20, 1898, in which the Philippine leader said that Providence had opened the way for independence to the Filipinos, and spoke of the Americans as their liberators. The admiral said, however, that he did not remember to have seen the paper. He had, he said, given Aguinaldo a printing press, and probably he used this press for getting out his proclamations.

In reply to a question, the admiral said that Consul Williams, who had been stationed at Manila, was an honest man, although perhaps quite enthusiastic. The admiral did not, however, remember to have promised to Aguinaldo his "cordial co-operation," as the consul had reported. For the purpose of making inquiry concerning some of the representations of Consul General Wildman, located at Hong Kong, Mr. Patterson asked concerning that gentleman's character. The admiral said: "He's dead. I'd rather not say. He was a very able man—an able consul."

Mr. Patterson then read Mr. Wildman's letter of July 18, 1898, saying that Aguinaldo had conducted himself in a dignified manner, etc., and the admiral assented to the truth of this statement.

Speaking of Aguinaldo's loyalty, the admiral said he had become suspicious of that leader before the receipt of his proclamation of July 15. He said: "I began to suspect that he was not loyal to us when he demurred to moving out of Cavite when our troops arrived."

"You mean that they were thinking more of their independence than of us?"

"Yes."

Admiral Dewey also testified concerning the arms sent to Manila by Aguinaldo, and Senator Dietrich asked the admiral if "he did not believe that the arms were purchased with money previously paid by Spain to secure peace, and that it was his intention to use the money to foment another insurrection."

The admiral's reply was: "Exactly so."

Admiral Dewey said he had forwarded the proclamations of Aguinaldo to Washington without reading them. The days and nights were not long enough for my work at that time, said the admiral. "Since you have asked my opinion," he continued in reply to a question, "I will say I beleieve Aguinaldo was there for gain, for loot, for money, and that independence never entered his head."

Senator Carmack asked him why he furnished such a man with arms and helped to organize his army, to which the admiral replied that all was fair in war, and there were no American troops in the islands to oppose the Spaniards. When he assisted Aguinaldo he did not call him a robber and plunderer, but the "insurgent leader."

"I say I think he was there for loot and money," he continued.

"Do you think he was there for anything else?" he asked, turning to Senator Carmack?"

"I do," responded the senator.

"Well, I swear I don't," said the admiral emphatically.

Answering several questions the admiral said he thought he knew Aguinaldo better than Gen. Otis, Gen. Bell or any other officers, as he saw more of him. He had not been in Manila forty-eight hours before he saw he was there for loot; he was taking everything he could lay his hands on from everybody, and he got the lion's share."

The inquiry ended rather abruptly at 12 o'clock. Senator Carmack asked: "You do not know of a single dishonest act on the part of Aguinaldo, yet you regard him as a thief?"

Admiral Dewey rose and said: "I think I shan't answer that question," and taking his hat and bowing, left the room.

The examination will continue tomorrow.

AT WEST DULUTH

The announcement in The Herald today that the car works property has been leased to the American Lumber company, which will establish therein an immense planing mill and wood finishing business, will be good news to West Duluthians. The car works property has been idle for many years, and West Duluth people have been several times elated over reports, seemingly well founded, that the plant would be placed in operation, only to be reduced again to a state of despondency by the failure of the promised developments to materialize.

This time, however, there is no doubt that the plant is to be utilized. The Herald has been cognizant of the fact for several weeks that the negotiations were under way, with an excellent prospect of being closed, but has refrained from arousing any hopes that might be blasted. The matter has now gone to such a conclusion that there is no longer any doubt.

The company has already built up a large business, so that it is not a new business that is to be established in the plant. It expects to handle 80,000,000 feet of lumber this year. The men in the company have certain ideas which, if they are carried out, will in time make the plant one of great magnitude.

PAINFUL OBJECT LESSON.

Hereafter when anybody asks Dan Keene, of West Duluth, how it is possible for a person to get injured on a shingle saw, he will refrain from giving them an object lesson on the subject, at least until his thumb has healed.

The other day while the machinery for shingle sawing was being installed at the Newton mill, Keene volunteered to show Mr. Newton's younger son how accidents with the saw usually happen. He placed his hand on the carriage of the knot saw and pushed it toward the saw. The belts not been put on and the saw was not connected up, but while Mr. Keene, with his hand a few inches from the saw turned round to explain something, another employe, who was unaware of the lesson in progress, seized the belt wheel and gave it a turn, throwing the carriage to the saw and Keene's thumb against it. The illustration was very quickly made very realistic, and by the time his hand was jerked away the saw had nearly cut off the end of his thumb.

FUNERAL OF OSCAR GAFVERT

The funeral of Oscar Gafvert took place this afternoon at the home of Otto Gafvert. The services were held at 2 o'clock, Rev. Titus Anderson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church, being in charge of the ceremony. There were a large number of relatives and friends of the young man present, and many beautiful floral offerings were received. Mr. Gafvert leaves a mother, three sisters and a brother. His mother had just returned from British Columbia, where she had been during the winter, when her son fell ill. The interment took place at the Oneota cemetery. The pall-bearers, all young men, were: Joseph H. Lauermann, L. J. Brotherton, Edgar Lynch, Lee Swingle, Harry Cruthers and Alfred Johnson.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Arrangements for the Fourth of July celebration to be held in West Duluth one week from today are going on swimmingly. Almost $1700 has been raised and the event will be the largest ever held in this part of the city. The Lesure Lumber company, whose float attracted so much notice two years ago, are at work on one which they say will eclipse that one entirely.

The work on the Jenswold street crossing will be in full swing within a short time. The street car company has part of the temporary tracks laid, but will not put a full force of men at work until after the Fourth of July celebration. They will have to have as complete service as possible for the crowds they expect.

In all probability the Leading Stars' Baseball team will play the Hubs next Sunday afternoon. It was thought that a game might be arranged with Lake Nebagamon on the latter's grounds, but it does not seem as though it can be pulled off this time. The line-up is not definitely decided upon, but the West Duluth boys expect to come out on top.

It is said that the blast furnace will be in full operation within six weeks. A large amount of limestone and coke is being received, and by the time they are ready for work the docks will be filled with the materials.

J. A. Scott last week made a sale of a house and two lots on Olney street to William Ritchie.

A fine 13-pound boy made his appearance at he home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Chapman, of 630 South Sixty-sixth avenue yesterday.

Rev. W. E. Loomis will leave tomorrow for a week's trip to Princeton and surrounding towns, taking the place of Presiding Elder Forbes.

Miss Celia Murphy, of Drummond, is in town visiting relatives.

Mrs. D. Bethune is visiting friends on the range this week.

Rev. Dr. Forbes will preach in Asbury church Sunday morning, and Rev. M. Adams will speak in the evening.

The Republican club will hold a meeting Saturday for the purpose of winding up several affairs incidental to the recent banquet.

Oron Roff, a 6-months-old boy, and son of Mr. and Mrs. Seth Roff, of Sixty-fourth and Cody street, died yesterday afternoon of pneumonia. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The burial will be at Oneota cemetery.

Miss Helen Lundberg left for a visit to Barnum yesterday.

James Osborne left for Butte, Mont., yesterday, where he will remain during the rest of the summer.

Miss Ruth Flack left today for Helena, Mont., for a two months' visit with friends.

Mrs. C. Morrison left today for a visit with friends near Buffalo, N. Y.

Miss Georgiana Ross left today for Ottawa, Can., to visit friends.

Mrs. Paul Gliden and family arrived from Eau Claire for a short visit with Paul Glidden.

George Collins, of Butte, Mont., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Charles Brett, of 5808 Waseca street.

Mr. A. D. Mandert, of Fergus Falls, is in town.

Peter Jiley is decorating the front of his double store with two coats of paint.

William Braden is down from Hibbing.

William Browning, of the West Duluth bank, leaves tomorrow for Menominee, Mich., on a vacation.

Axel Johnson, of Wisconsin, is visiting his brother, Monte Johnson.

Edward Robison returned today from a two months' visit in Cincinnati.

The roof has been put on Wieland & Wade's new building.

There is a first-class show at the corner of Fifty-fourth avenue and Romsey street. See It.

PRESIDENT IS JOVIAL

He Returns to Washington Feeling In Good Humor.

Nearly Forgets His Usual Parting With the Train Men.

Pulls His Hand Away From Long Island Enthusiast.

Washington, June 27.—President Roosevelt's party arrived in Washington on a special train over the Pennsylvania railroad at 10:35 this morning.

The president's special train traveled as the second section of the Federal express. There were no noteworthy incidents during the morning journey. The president was in fine humor. He walked briskly down the station platform on reaching Washington and almost had reached the gates when he recollected that he had not bade adieu to the engine crew, his invariable practice on returning from a trip. Quickly retracing his steps, he reached the side of the big engine and vigorously shook hands with the engineer, fireman and another trainman who had climbed into the cab to share the honors. As he turned again toward the gates, a man roughly brushed against him, seized his hand and exclaimed that he was from Long Island. "Glad to see you," said the president, and he wrenched his hand away and regained Secretary Cortelyou. The White House carriages were in waiting and the president drove quickly to his new temporary official quarters.

THE DAKOTAS.

Another Fatality From Tuesday's Storm Reported From Ciene.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Yankton—Another fatality of Tuesday night's storm is reported from near Ciene. Knud Rye stopped at a large country church for shelter and was tying his team when part of the church was blown over, crushing him to death. This makes the list of dead so far: Mrs. Frank Johnson, Dr. Curtis Beresford, Mrs. Bierce, Knud Rye. A number of others were hurt. The loss of property in the path of the storm, aside from crops, will reach a half million dollars.

Chamberlain—Government inspectors have taken up a permanent residence in Pierre and Chamberlain, to put a stop to fraudulent homesteading, intentional or otherwise, and hundreds of claims have already been canceled as obtained in bad faith, costing the filers from $50 to $200 each. Government land locators are charged by the inspectors with fraud in representing to prospective claimants that it is not necessary to reside on the land after taking claims, when, as a matter of fact, homesteads can be secured without residence only by perjury. In two days at the Chamberlain registry office, fifty-nine claims were cancelled.

Centerville—The Centerville department store, R. R. Hotchkiss, proprietor, made and assignment to E. J. Odell for the benefit of creditors. The liabilities are not definitely known, but are estimated at $6000. The store has been closed since the assignment was made, and until invoiced the assets can only be estimated, but will hardly reach that amount. The failure is attributed to causes outside of the business itself, as the store has had a good and profitable trade.

The Chicago & Northwestern coal house caught fire just after the hurricane. The derick and building were destroyed, but the fire was stopped before it got into the coal bins to any extent. The cause of the fire is not known. But for the promptness of the fire department and the efficiency of the city's waterworks for fire protection, several elevators and warehouses must have been burned.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown—Conductor Hatton alleges that he was beaten and an attempt made to hold him up in the Jamestown railroad yards. An attempt was made to capture his assailants. Five men were arrested, but Hatton was unable to identify them positively and they were discharged.

Two Northern Pacific brakemen engaged in a fierce fight, and as a result one of them had his face badly pounded. The cause of the trouble was the fondness of one of them for the other's wife.

Fargo—Elmer Rice has received the appointment to West Point from this state. A. W. Hillis, of Bathgate, is the first alternate, and J. W. Hammond, of Orr, second. Young Rice was born in Fargo and is 19 years of age. In the high school and later in Fargo college he was a star quarterback on the football teams and is prominent in other athletics.

Hundreds of lives saved every year by having Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house just when it is needed. Cures croup, heals burns, cuts, wounds of every sort.

IN MICHIGAN.

An Italian Crushed In Calumet & Hecla Mine.

Houghton—While at work in the thirtieth level, Shaft No. 2, of the Calumet & Hecla mine, James Ronano, an Italian, was crushed by a rock which fell upon him. He died shortly after being removed to the hospital. A coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death.

Judge Haire issued a writ of temporary injunction restraining the town board of Greenland from building a ne wtown hall. The board recently decided to build a hall at an expense of from $5,000 to $6,000. Mass City and others outside of Greenland village are opposed to this, partly because of local jealousies and also because the township debt is now $13,000. A spirited contest is looked for in the courts.

Marquette—Capt. W. H. Hunt died at the Waukesha county, Wis., poorhouse from the effects of a stroke of apoplexy. Thirty years ago he was proprietor of the Tremont house at Marquette, Mich., which was at that time one of the best known hotels in the Northwest. He kept his own carriage and colored driver and was known all over the state for his fine carriages and horses. Later he conducted a hotel at Escanaba, Mich., and subsequently resided at Green Bay. Reverses came, however, and his wealth rapidly disappeared until finally he and his wife were obliged to seek refuge at the county house, where the latter died in 1894. Capt. Hunt was for years skipper of a freight barge on the lakes. On one occasion his barge was wrecked in a terrible storm on Lake Michigan and part of his crew lost. The storm lasted for two days and Capt. Hunt, after having been in the water, clinging to the wreck for thirty-six hours, was rescued. The experience caused a terrible shock to his nevous system, from which he never fully recovered.

Menominee—The reputation of Menominee is fast growing as a Gretna Green. Sunday's excursions brought several people to this city from Wisconsin towns to have the nuptial knot tied. The reason for their coming to Michigan is that they can get married in this state the same day on which they obtain license. Licenses were issued yesterday to Charles Woodman, Jr., of Niagara, Wis., and Winifred O'Connell, of Marinette; John A. Kubitz, of Appleton, and Miss Emma Joers, of Seymour, Wis.; William J. Battac, of Neenah, and Miss Mary L. Reiter, of Sheboygan; W. M. Elliot, of Menasha, and Mrs. Ina Larson, of Menasha, and several others whose names are kept secret. All of these were married during the day and in the evening left on the excursion trains for their homes to surprise their friends and relatives.

ROUSS' WILL.

Last Testament of Blind Merchant Filed In Texas.

Waxahachie, Tex., June 27.—A copy of the will of the late Charles Broadway Rouss, of New York, was deposited in the county clerk's office to be recorded. The will is a lengthy document and disposes of property of the estimated value of $1,500,000 or more, though no estimate of its value is stated. Cash bequests to the amount of $414,500 are made, and $32,500 continuing annuities are devised by the instrument. The mercantile business buildings, etc., of the deceased are left to his son, Peter W. Rouss, and daughter, Virginia Duane Lee, jointly, with a provision that, should the son elect, he shall have the exclusive control, management and revenues of the business by paying to the daughter the sum of $25,000 per annum.

DO NOT AGREE

Steamship Interests May Yet Engage In Open Warfare.

New York, June 27.—A decided difference of opinion—that promises to develop into open warfare—may be said to exist between steamship interests at New York and those at the outports in regard to the working of the recent modification of the freight rate pool, says the Journal of Commerce. This modification provided for charging a higher rate at the outports than at New York, a rate sufficient to counteract the lower railroad rates from the interior enjoyed by the outports.

A rumor is current that a substantial increase in nocean freight rates is in process of negotiation, but whether the present arrangement will hold together until teh new one is promulgated is a matter on which considerable doubt is expressed in local freight circles. The chief trouble seems to be what may be termed the complete absence of faith entertained by the lines of any port in regard to the honest observance of the terms of the agreement by lines of all other ports.

BIG DISPLAY

Will Be Made at World's Fair By Germany.

St. Louis, June 27.—A letter received from Joseph Brucker, World's fair commissioner for Germany, speaks very encouragingly of his work in that country. He is now confident that Germany will make a big display, one that will attract as much attention as any other foreign exhibit at the exposition. He has learned that it is the wish of the emperor.

Chief Goldsborough of the department of electricity reports from Philadelphia that his interview with electrical engineers and manufacturers of electrical machines and appliances have been of a very encouraging character. At a meeting of the American institute of electrical engineers, held at Great Barrington, Miss., a very strong favorable sentiment was developed.

POSITION AT CORNELL.

Chicago, June 27.—Ralph C. H. Catterall, an instructor at the University of Chicago, has accepted an appointment to an assistant professorship in Cornell university. Mr. Catterall is at present teaching in the summer school of the university and will sever his connection with the local institution at the close of the present quarter. He will occupy the chair of modern and English history at Cornell and will begin his work there after he returns from a year's study in Europe, for which leve of absence has been given him.

LATEST FASHION NOTES.

A Pretty Blouse of Liberty Satin.

There is greater latitude in the cut of sleeves than that of any other portion of the feminine costume. They range in style from the perfectly plain coat sleeve, made somewhat larger than formerly and usually furnished with a cuff, to the immense sleeve, comparitively small at the shoulders, and increasing in size as it descends, nearly or quite covering the hand. The latter type is found more frequently upon the more elaborate of the long silk coats. A medium among these various types of sleeve is seen here. In this the fullness is arranged in tucks which are allowed to escape at the elbow, forming a puff which is gathered into a small close cuff. The blouse is made of Liberty satin, laid in tucks and stitched with Corticelli silk in such a way as to produce the effect of puffs. These are mounted upon a yoke of plain material which is defined by straps, embroidered in Corticelli filo silk to imitate the gay Bulgarian embroidery now so fashionable.

FOR SCIENCE.

American Association For Advancement In Session.

Pittsburg, June 27.—The annual convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science began its sessions at Carnegie institute today.

Most of the delegates have arrived, and by tomorrow upwards of 1000 visitors will be here representing the affiliated organizations of the society.

The convention will adjourn on July 3, but the delegates will remain over the Fourth in order to take part in the reception to President Roosevelt on that day. After the usual address of welcome today the session was devoted to the reports of officers and the reading of technical papers, among which was that on "Electro-chemistry as an Engineering Course," by Charles H. Burgess, assistant professor of electrical engineering, university of Wisconsin.

FOREST FIRES

Are Still Raging In Lightner Creek, Col.

Durango, Col., June 27.—The forest fires up Lightner creek are still raging and the flames are working northward at a rapid rate. A herd of several thousand sheep are hemmed in at the upper end of the canon, and if the entire lot is not destroyed it will be miraculous.

The fire on Corbett creek, near Ouray, is still raging, and a woman and four children had a narrow escape near the Teller mine. They had to be carried to places of safety by their rescuers.

Notice to Contractors.

Sealed proposals addressed to the Village Council of Grand Rapids, Minnesota, and endorsed, "Proposals for an Electric Light Plant," will be received by the Village Recorder of the said Village of Grand Rapids until 8 o'clock p. m. of Monday, the 7th day of July, 1902, for the construction of an electric light plant for the Village of Grand Rapids, according to the specifications and plans now on file.

Bonds of the village for the sum of $25,000 have been issued and sold by it, at par, for the purpose of raising funds sufficient to purchase, build, establish and control all necessary buildings, machinery, apparatus and material for making, generating and supplying light for public and private use in said village.

Proposals will be received on the following work:

First—The building.

Second—The machinery.

Third—The electric lines.

Bidders may make in addition a proposal for the entire work.

Proposals will be pubuclly opened and read at a meeting of the Village Council on the evening of July 7th, 1902. The proposal or proposals which are deemed for the best interest of the village will be accepted.

The right is reserved to reject any or all proposals, and to change any item or items in the specifications.

Blank forms of proposals, instructions to bidders and specifications may be obtained and plans may be seen and examined at the office of the Village Recorder of Grand Rapids, Minnesota, and at the office of Edward P. Burch, Consulting Engineer, 1210-1212 Guaranty building, Minneapolis, Minn. All information will be given on application.

Amendment of Articles of Incorporation

—OF—

The Guarantee Land Co.

It is hereby certified, That at the regular meeting of the stockholders of the Guarantee Land Company, held at the office of said company in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902, at which were present in person, or represented by duly executed proxy, the holders of more than two-thirds of the capital stock of said company, it was duly and unanimously resolved as follows:

"That the capital stock of this company be reduced from two hundred thousand dollars, being two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, to forty thousand dollars, consisting of four hundred (400) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and that Article III and Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of the Guarantee Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

"Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be forty thousand dollars instead of two hundred thousand dollars, to which amount the capital stock is hereby reduced, the whole amount thereof having been heretofore paid in.

"Seventh—That the number and amount of shares of the capital stock of said corporation shall be 400 shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each."

It is further certified, That at a regular meeting of the directors of said corporation, held at the office of said company, in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902, and subsequent to the aforesaid action of the stockholders of said corporation, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, viz:

"That the capital stock of this company be reduced from two hundred thousand dollars, being two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, to forty thousand dollars, consisting of four hundred (400) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and that Article III and Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of the Guarantee Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

"Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be forty thousand dollars instead of two hundred thousand dollars, to which amount the capital stock is hereby reduced, the whole amount thereof having been heretofore paid in.

"Seventh—That the number and amount of shares of the capital stock of said corporation shall be 400 shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each."

In witness whereof, the Guarantee Land Company has caused these presents to be subscribed and sworn to by its president, and its secretary, and has caused its corporate seal to be hereto affixed this 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902.

ORDER FOR HEARING APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 17th, 1902.

In the matter of the estate of James McDougall, deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Annabell Smith, of the county of Douglas, Wisconsin, representing, among other things, that James McDougall, late of the county of St. Louis, in the state of Minnesota, on the 7th day of June, A. D. 1902, at the county of St. Louis, died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this county at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this county, and that the said petitioner is the mother of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to M. H. McMahon, granted.

It is ordered, that said petition be heard before said court, on the 11th day of July, A. D. 1902, at ten o'clock a. m., at the probate office, in the court house in the city of Duluth, in said county.

Ordered further, that notice thereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said county.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, the 17th day of June, A. D. 1902.

Promoting Trade With China.

The bill introduced not long ago by Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, providing for an appropriation of $275,000 for a permanent exposition building in China for the display of American goods, is but another evidence of the enterprise of the Northwest to try and get a large share of the world's commerce. While the bill was introduced at this session it will not be pushed until the short session next winter. Mr. McCumber believes that the trade of this country with China would be increased if there were somewhere a place where Chinese merchants might have an opportunity, at their leisure, to inspect American goods, and so he would have the government erect, at Shanghai where the great steamships of J. J. Hill's line will unload, a large building, in which American manufacturers and merchants may maintain exhibits. He would have the government pay for the building, provide an interpreter and general superintendent; the several firms which make exhibits would pay a rental that he thinks, would defray all the current exhibits of maintenance. Chinese merchants, it is said, will not purchase goods on samples. They must see what they are paying their money for, and on that account it has been impossible for traveling men with sample cases to make great headway among them. Public bodies in the large cities, such as boards of trade, chambers of commerce and commercial clubs, will be invited to consider the bill and express themselves as to its merits. It is doubtful if such a bill stands any show whatever of passing, but Senator McCumber is to be credited just the same for his enterprise. One objection to the bill would be that such an establishment should be provided by private enterprise, which would get the entire benefits therefrom. Another would be the danger of a precedent it would set, for if it were successful in one place, fifty others would demand the same thing. At any rate a discussion of the matter will do good, if nothing comes of it.

Need of a Pure Food Bill.

Senator Mason, of Illinois, should be encouraged in his efforts to secure the passage of his pure food bill through congress. The measure is intended to put a stop to the masquerading of a mixture of clover seed and glucose with a little red coloring matter, under the name of red raspberry jam and similar frauds which are now imposed on the public. The bill proposes to make it unlawful to sell adulterated foods unless the fact that adulterants are used is printed on the package containing the article in question. Senator Mason has been working on the present bill for four years and has held hearings in the big cities for the purpose of getting information in regard to the tricks by which grocers and others palm off artificial jellies, preserves and other food preparations. Senator Mason believes that this is practical legislation of the right sort, and he cites instances showing its value in connection with the law that was passed a couple of years ago prohibiting the selling of "mixed" flour unless it was so labeled. "Prior to the passage of that act," he said, "it was an almost universal practice for millers to mix flour with various other materials, including white earth. We made this unlawful, unless the preparations were labeled adulterated. During the first year of the operation of the law the authorities seized 11,000 barrels of flour that were in violation of the act. There were two large mills in North Carolina which were doing a big business producing mineraline, which was sold at one-half a cent a pound and used as a mixer in flour. Since the law was adopted both of these mills have closed. The act raised the standard of American flour both at home and abroad and has increased our exports of white flour more than 5,000,000 barrels a year. I believe that the pending pure food bill will be just as beneficial as the flour act and while it will injure only a few it will protect the public and insure the sale of pure and wholesome foods." There is no question but what the country needs some radical laws to prevent the sale of adulterated foods for the real article. There is no particular objection to the mixing of certain ingredients as long as they are harmless to the user, but they should not be sold for the real thing. When properly branded, the purchaser knows just what he is getting, and if he wants it, it is his privilege to buy. The Mason bill should go through by all means and all others of a similar nature.

A MINER'S STORY.

The statement has been repeatedly made that the miners of the anthracite coal mines are ignorant Slavs, Italians and other immigrants from Southern Europe. So often has this story been told that most people believe that all the miners belong to this class. But this is not true. There are undoubtedly many of the ignorant class working in the mines, but there are also a very large number of intelligent men, fine types of American citizens. In a recent issue of the Independent one of these miners tells a touching story in good English. He was brought up in the mines. Every day's toil has been at the risk of his life. One of his brothers was killed and another was badly wounded in the mines. The latter he took to his own home, where he was nursed back to life. Out of his poor wages he paid the doctor's bills for twenty-one weeks. Commenting upon this, he says:

"It is nonsense to say that I was not compelled to keep him; that I could have sent him to a hospital or an alms house. We are American citizens and we don't go to hospitals and poor houses."

No one can read this statement without being impressed by the indomitable spirit exhibited by this true citizen of the American republic. This independent spirit cannot be crushed, no matter what the coal barons may do. The Independent vouches for the truthfulness of this miner's statement. He tells of the puny recompense for his labors, setting down his slender wage and over against it what he has spent for the necessaries of life. The story is simply heart-breaking in its merciless revelations of honest penury. Aged but 35, he is prematurely old, broken on the cruel wheel of toil. And he says, "I am only one of the hundreds you see on the streets every day."

These are the men who have been forced to strike because the operators have denied their just claims and say, "There is nothing to arbitrate."

PUBLIC SCHOOL STUDIES.

The Herald has received a letter from "A Music Lover," as follows:

"There is one matter that is of great importance to our city which seems to have been overlooked and which ought to be taken up by your paper and agitated to such an extent that some action would be taken to see that it is restrained. Some time ago our funds were in such shape that some of the studies in the schools were dropped, among which was music or voice culture. Since then all the other studies have been reinstated except the latter. Why not all lovers of music agitate this matter to such an extent that our schools, so ample in all other respects, will have the finishing touch of perfection put on and be second to none in the state? Will you be kind enough to insert this in your valuable paper?"

While complying with the request to publish the above letter, The Herald does not agree with the views of its author and therefore cannot second the recommendation. The Herald believes, in common with many other people, and it pleased to notice the number is steadily growing, that the range of studies in the public schools is now too wide and it would be far better to reduce the number of studies rather than increase them. The complaint is frequently heard, and it has considerable basis, that the education given in the public schools, not in Duluth alone, but in nearly every city in the United States, is superficial—that the scholars receive a smattering knowledge of many things and learn little thoroughly. So strong is sentiment on this point growing that in some cities the number of studies have been cut down and many of the so-called fads have been eliminated. The tendency is to get rid of the studies that do not properly come under the heading of "a good English education," in order that the scholars may have time to acquire a thorough knowledge of what is needed to equip them for ordinary business life.

AN EXPENSIVE MISTAKE.

It is hard for some of the anti-imperialistic Republicans and those who have been lukewarm in their support of expansion, to refrain from commenting adversely on the present conditions in the Philippines. The fact that cholera is ravaging the islands and that according to the figures of the war department the expenses of the new possessions have thus far amounted to $187,000,000 furnishes an argument against them that could scarcely be stronger. No less a prominent man than Senator Hale, of Maine, recently said: "It does seem like rubbing it in on some of my imperialistic associates to say I told you so, but I should think that there is no one in Washington who has watched the course of events since the Philippines became part of our territory who would not be willing to admit now that their acquisition was a mistake. I fear conditions will be worse before they are better. The cost of governing the Philippines is something enormous and it entails additional expenses in the way of an increased army and navy. If a member of congress today mildly suggests a new public building for his district, or an improvement in the water way of his locality, he is sternly frowned upon and told that such extravagance must not be tolerated. And yet millions and millions are appropriated for new ships and a big army and for the government of the Philippines. The major part of the work of this session has been devoted to discussing ways and means for conducting the government of our new colonies, while important domestic matters have been slighted over with little consideration or entirely neglected."

Such views are entitled to consideration. They are by a man who knows whereof he speaks. There is more need than ever of some solution of the Philippine problem by which this country can honorably and gracefully dispose of its tremendous burden.

The case of Justus Smith, charged with intoxication June 14, 1865, was only disposed of last Saturday, thirty-seven years Democrat, and it adds that the diminishpers were only then found, and who Justus Smith was, and where he is, or where the policeman who made the arrest is—late, in a New York city court. The panever be known. Justice Hogan, however, who indorsed the charge is living, and thinks it a relic of the days when returning soldiers were often arrested for their protection, without any purpose of prosecuting the charges.

The "maligners of our brave American soldiers" happen to be American soldiers themselves. All the testimony in regard to the Philippine atrocities has come from the army. None of it is from civilians or Filipinos. The people of the United States, as the St. Louis Post-Dispatch says, can judge of the value of the testimony without the assistance of politicians.

A news item says: "Dreaming that burin regard to a tract of land in Oklahoma. J. Osborn reached under her pillow, grabbed a revolver and shot herself. The bill providing pensions for members of the life-saving service has been ordered favorably reported by the house committee on commerce in Washington. It is a meritorious measure and should be passed by congress. No people are more deserving of pensions than those who risk their own lives in the work of saving others.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: It is a curious thing about getting fooled at the marriage game, but either everybody has or wants to be.

It is mighty hard these days for the lady of the house to be able to furnish references that are satisfactory to the cook.

No matter how much she thinks of a man, there are mighty few women who would hesitate to trade him off for nice crinkly hair.

The first month he is married he thinks everybody is looking at him in envy; after that a horrible suspicion grows on him that it is in pity.

Married men who don't care for the deserts their wives give them will find it stills a great deal of anguish to say the doctor doesn't want them to eat sweet things.

Why This Brutal Discourtesy?

Atlanta Constitution: The retirement of Lemly has not called out a single resolution of regret from any of the stage conventions or either house of congress.

Cupid's Revenge

By Louis Honig.

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst.)

She seemed out of all harmony with her surroundings. Ill-dressed, wan, weary, she sat upon the park bench as listless and careless of life as the stricken invalid in whom the exhaustion of physical strength is manifestly in mental despair. The early morning horsemen saw her when they started out for their drives, and they saw her in the same place upon their return. Sitting, her elbow on the back of the bench, her head resting on her hand, she made a melancholy figure, indeed. The sours of life rested in that poorly-clad woman. More than that, hunger played its part also, not that kind which produces a fierce gnawing sensation, but the steady unbroken physical misery that comes from poor food and not much even of that.

The spring rains and the first warmth of the season had changed the bleak ungarnished trees from so much dead stemlike wood to the most beautiful park adornments. The brilliant green of the foliage made a splendid contrast with the dark trunks of the trees, a contrast heightened by the recollection of what these same trees were but a few days back. Chirping and flitting about were the birds and squirrels, happy in a revel of revivifying nature. Life and joy and the happiness in things living were in the air.

A short distance down the road came the sound of horses' hoofs and the rumbling of wheels. Then the voices of women and men were heard, merry, laughing and gay. A trumpet sounded. The approach as the leaders were swinging round the turn in the road. She looked up bewildered, but at the same time catching a comprehensive view of the fashionably dressed coaching party. Again her head sank upon her hand. Semi-unconscious of her environment her exhausted body found a temporary surcease from suffering in sleep.

On the coach was one man who was not a fit party to the riot in the joyous pleasure that laid hold of the rest. Running through his mind was an episode of his life that he had tried to blot out of his memory. Long since he had given up the struggle. Forgetfulness had been vanquished and woman and not kept cropping up at the most inconvenient moments leaving him none too satisfactory a person in his own eyes.

What before was an apparition was now a reality. For three years he had wondered and wondered what had become of her. When he left her at the home of her father, the minister, receiving the blessing of the old man and the vows of the young man, he promised to return within a few months and claim her for his bride. This summer spent in long walks over the hills, rowing, sailing and drives had been the happiest of his life. Contrary to all his beliefs and protestations against matrimony, his heart had become ensnared.

Returning to the city he found no joyous welcome at his home. A proud father and a mother filled with social ambition and firm views on the greatness and deserts of her own family ridiculed his betrothal. They even threatened disinheritance if he should persist in his intentions of the alliance with the daughter of an humble minister. The soft pleasures of life meant much to him, and slowly but surely his parents undermined his native resolution, such as it was, and like a dutiful son he finally gratified their wishes. The engagement was broken.

Excusing himself at the stop for the first change of horses he left the coach. Something which must be attended to in town and which he had forgotten demanded his immediate consideration. The coach had not yet reached that part of the country unintersected by car lines, so he boarded a car and was soon on his way to the wretched girl so out of tune with the spring day and the animation of the scene which he had just left.

Again the girl was awakened, but this time by the approach of a man. For some little time neither spoke. Recovering from his embarrassment he began to plead for himself. He told her that he was willing to make all reparation, even at this moment to disobey the dictates of his parents upon whom he laid the brunt of his offending. The girl said nothing. The profound sadness which enveloped her was not to be broken by anything he might offer. She refused each and every condescension of her quondam lover—for such she now held all his protestations.

Little by little he extracted the story told him of her father's death. There she of the last three years of her life. She stopped. Of her poverty and the struggle to keep up life in a big city she said nothing. That was her own story and not for the world.

For a few hours they sat on the park bench, but all his eloquence, the bright pictures of a happy future which he drew for her mental vision, availade him nothing. The girl was proof against his pleadings.

Then there was silence. The girl, suffering far more keenly than he even imagined, determined to put an end to the scene. She rose, and mastering her emotions, left him.

The afternoon sun was throwing its western rays upon the tree tops when the coach that passed in the morning came rumbling along, homeward bound. There was not so much gayety and noise among the merry crowd perched on top, but they were all, nevertheless, taken up with their own affairs. They looked neither to the right nor the left. If they had they would have seen a downcast man, his elbow on the back of the bench and his head resting wearily in his hand.

THE SOWER'S SONG.

Now hands to seed-sheet, boys!
We step and we cast; old Time's on the wing;
And would ye partake of Harvest's joys,
The corn must be sown in spring.
Fall gently and still, good corn,
Lie warm in thy earthly bed;
And stand so yellow some morn,
For beast and man must be fed.

Old earth is a pleasure to see
In sunshiny cloak of red and green;
The furrow lies fresh, this year will be
As years that are past have been.
Fall gently and still, good corn,
Lie warm in thy earthly bed;
And stand so yellow some morn,
For beast and man must be fed.

Old earth, receive this corn,
The son of six thousand golden sires;
All these on thy kindly breast were born;
One more thy poor child requires.
Fall gently and still, good corn,
Lie warm in thy earthly bed;
And stand so yellow some morn,
For beast and man must be fed.

Now steady and sure again,
And measure of stroke and step we keep;
Thus up and down we cast our grain;
Sow well and you will gladly reap.
Fall gently and still, good corn,
Lie warm in thy earthly bed;
And stand so yellow some morn,
For beast and man must be fed.

POINTED REMARKS.

Chicago Post: "Do you believe in heredity?"

"Certainly; I know a barber who has three little shavers!"

The Widow: "Why, Willie," said his teacher, "what makes your hair so red?"

"Aw, I just had scarlet fever and it settled in my head."

New York Sun: Little Girl—Ma! Her Mother—Don't say "ma," my dear, say "mama." What do you want?

Little Girl—Did you see uncle's new Panamama?

Washington Star: "Why don't that romantic star and that emotional actress get a divorce, if they can't become reconciled?"

"They have discussed the idea. But each is afraid the other might get the best of the advertisement."

Philadelphia Press: Raynor—This fortune telling business is all humbug. One of these professors of palmistry told me a little while ago to look out for a 'short, blond man.'

Shyne—I don't know about its being all humbug. I'm blond, and I'm short. Lend me a ten, old fellow, will you?

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "There's a couple o' big coal soots on your face, Weary."

"Don't mind 'em. They're th' badges of a great industry, Limply. I tell you, me boy, there's nothin' like soft coal for puttin' th' human family on an equality."

Chicago Post: "You had some trouble, I believe," remarked the neighbor.

"Niver a bit," retorted Mrs. Clancy, who had proved victor in a disagreement with her husband. "'Twas Clancy had all th' throuble."

Farming Out Homeless Children.

Chicago Tribune: A warning note was sounded at the conference of charities and corrections in Detroit on Friday which ought to receive the attention of the trustees and managers of children's institutions. Dr. Jeffrey R. Brackett, of Baltimore, said that he had found that there were grave dangers to children in the "placing out" system. The system, he said, should be followed with caution, and only in connection with some institution where the children could be cared for indefinitely while the authorities sought homes for them. The conference discussed the question for two days, the tenor of most of the speeches being that in a few years the homes for destitute and neglected children would all be abandoned in favor of a system which would place them in private homes, on the theory that any home is better than an asylum. The evils of an asylum are apparent, but unless there is some place in which the children can be cared for while the authorities are investigating the character of the persons with whom they intend to place them, even greater evils might result from the "placing out" system.

The Westerner and the Rain.

Oh, the dear, sweet, summer rain!
Hear it falling, falling, falling,
Through the darkness softly calling,
"Waken flowers! Lift up each chalice
Drooping from the rude wind's malice.
Lift your buds, so shy and tender,
I will kiss them into splendor!
Humble grasses, creeping slowly,
Beautiful and meek and lowly,
Emerald spear and red-cheeked clover,
Drink my fullness, brimming over,
Stately trees, with arms upreaching,
For my bounty long beseeching,
Let each bow, wind-bent and shaken,
With new life and beauty waken.
Patient grain, grow strong and stronger—
You shall faint and droop no longer!
All things growing, all things living,
Greet my coming with thanksgiving."
So we hear it softly calling,
Through the darkness gently falling,
Tree and bud and blossim blessing,
All the waiting earth caressing—
Oh, the dear, sweet, summer rain!

Strain of High Speed.

Philadelphia Record: The question has been raised whether, if it should be practicable to attain to a speed of 100 miles or more an hour by rail the engineer could sstand the strain. It has been affirmed by a physician that such fearful going would wear out his nerves in a little while. The question has been answered already by one experienced engineer before a meeting of scientists. Asked as to the probable affects, in case of a common accident, of a speed of more than sixty miles an hour, he said: "A smash-up at sixty miles would make splinters of everything; at 100 miles the splinters might be finer, but the destruction could not be more complete." That is to say, when an engineer runs his engine at sixty miles he is under as severe a strain as he would be at any other speed.

Executive Committee of National Council Meets at Copenhagen.

New York, June 27.—Mrs. Susa Young Gates has sailed for Copenhagen, where she will represent the national council at the meeting of the executive committee of the International Council of Women. The executive committee meets every year, and its meetings are only second in interest and importance to the quinquennial meetings of the council.

The Danish women, who are among the most progressive women on the continent, have prepared an attractive program for the convention, which will be from July 9 to 12 inclusive. The first meeting will be held at the home of the president of the Danish women's council, Froken Henni Forchamer.

Aside from the meetings there will be receptions, both at private homes and club houses, and excursions to points of historic and scenic interest in the environs.

It is expected that the subject of the next president of the international council will receive some quiet canvassing. The first two presidents of the international council were Lady Henry Somerset and the countess of Aberdeen. Then at London the presidency went to America in the person of Mrs. May Wright Sewall. This is said not to have been at all to the liking of the English women, who had their candidate. It is also said that they will try to take the presidency back to England.

FIVE DOLLARS A WEEK.

Young Bride Who Will Practice Rigid Economy.

Chicago, June 27.—"I may be from Missouri, but I do not have to be shown," said Mrs. Arthur Curphey, the 17-year-old bride of a young apprentice in a printing establishment in Hammond, who married his wife when his income amounted to only $5 a week. Mrs. Curphey had figured out how she could keep house in South Chicago with this small income, and she said that it was worth the trial, inasmuch as she had cut out one of her rivals and won one of the most popular young men in Eighty-ninth street.

"I intend to show these students of economoy how a woman can make the ledger balance and still live on a small income," said Mrs. Curphey. "My father, Franklin Stewart, 431 Eighty-ninth street, has taken us under his roof for the time being. I was born in Glencoe, Mo., but I know a thing or two."

CANNON OBDURATE.

Will Not Let Indian Treaty Bills Pass.

Washington, June 27.—Friends of the Indian treaties providing for the cession of lands in the Northwestern states have had frequent interviews with Chairman Cannon of the appropriations committee, trying to overcome his opposition to them, but he still remains obdurate. Among the bills are those ratifying the Red Lake treaty affecting Minnesota lands, the Rosebud and Lower Brule treaties in South Dakota and the Devils Lake treaty in North Dakota. Mr. Cannon declares that he will not permit any bill to pass which carries appropriations as large as these carried in the bills and friends of the measures are not sanguine that they will be considered, although they will not relax their efforts.

PICNIC SEASON

Weather Is Here and Merry Parties Are Out Every Evening.

Many Beautiful Spots Around Duluth That Find Much Favor.

Excursion Boats, Dancing Pavilions, Etc., All Have Their Devotees.

Picnic weather is here, and almost every evening merry parties of young people visit one or another of the many pretty spots about Duluth to eat dainty sandwiches, olives and pickles and accumulate the resultant indigestion. The weather has been rapidly growing warmer, and the evenings are ideal for lounging about the parks and beach around a great fire singing songs and telling stories. Neither is it too warm to make dancing uncomfortable, and the pavilions are now almost all open. There are a number of beautiful spots around Duluth, created by nature and art into ideal picnic grounds, which the increased street car facilities have put within easy reach.

Right now Park Point is probably the most popular place. All of the pavilions are opened and dances are held almost every evening. For those who do not care to dance there is the lake shore, with its long stretch of sandy beach, the best place in the world on which to build fires, and the firewood is at hand, cast up by the waves. The bathing season is not yet on, it being a little chilly for comfortable swimming, but it will not be long before the "bathing suit specials" will begin to appear in the clothing store "ads," and the "latest fashions for the beach" in the fashion plates.

The number of campers on Park Point this year is larger than ever before, and picnic parties are almost daily occurrences.

Lester Park is another favorite spot for those who care to spend an evening in "tripping the light fantastic" after a generous luncheon has been disposed of. It is one of the most beautiful places in a city noted for its beautiful scenery, and is very popular with picnicers. The two branches of Lester River have good rocky beds, and a fire out there, with a pot of hot coffee simmering away, is all a person could ask for.

The lake shore, almost anywhere in the East End, furnishes good places for such occasions, and many parties of young people spend some happy hours listening to what the "wild waves are saying."

Lincoln park contains a large number of basket parties every evening, who make the air resound with their songs and laughter. Chamber's grove, at Fond du Lac is pronounced by The Herald newsies, who were there day before yesterday, as the "best wot is," and they ought to know, as they speak from experience.

This year there are a number of new boats built especially for excursions, which are large and roomy, and make a boat ride around the bay an everlasting delight. There is really no more delightful way of putting in an evening than on one of these. They are supplied with music, and dancing can be had if desired.

But taking it all in all, Duluth is a picnic place, and these delightful evenings should not be spent inside when nature has made herself so beautiful and attractive. A good old fashioned picnic rests the mind and tires the body, and you'll go home feeling sleepy and happy and wake up the next morning ready for more and better work.

AT THE HOTELS

R. H. Flaherty, of Port Arthur, who has been conducting exploratting operations for iron on the new westerly end of the Atikokan range in the vicinity of Stoop Rock lake, is at the St. Louis. Mr. Flaherty is supposed to have been exploring in the interest of the steel corporation people. He declares that nothing tangible to prove the existence of workable deposits of hematite ore has been found as yet.

"Plenty of float hematite has been found," said Mr. Flaherty this morning, "but thus far the discoveries have been practically confined to this float ore. Float is generally supposed to indicate the existence of ore beds somewhere in that general locality, but it may be a very elusive indication. The deposit from which the float leads may be only a pocket instead of a vein formation. Thus far, explorations on the western end of the Atikokan range seem to indicate small pocket formations. Some indications point to the belief that the float came from Steep Rock lake itself. However, there is no outcropping on the banks of the lake, as has been said. I considerable that it would be a very grave task to undertake to drain or partially drain Steep Rock lake, as has been contemplated. The lake is merely an extension and expansion between granite of the Seine river. It is 200 to 300 feet deep, and the job of blasting out the mouth sufficiently to make an outlet that would lower the stage of water to a point that would uncover the ore deposit if there was an outcropping would necessitate enlarging the river below for a number of miles, which would be a very expensive job.

"There is plenty of magnetic ore on the old Atikokan range, but as everybody knows magnetic is not sought by the furnaces just now. The float hematite that has been found is of an exceptionally high quality, assaying up to 64 or 65 per cent iron, and it is free from the sulphur and other undesirable constituents that militate against the magnetite found a few miles easterly. Still, explorations seem to have proved so disappointing that all the drills except mine have been withdrawn."

Mr. Flaherty is accompanied by Miss Flaherty and F. Fitzgerald also of Port Arthur.

It has been decided that the two upper floors of the new Frerker building which will add to the lodging accommodations of the Spalding hotel will be devoted to one floor of sample rooms and one floor of parlor rooms with bath. It is said that the Spalding has a great plenty of rooms, but that it is proportionately short of sample rooms and large rooms with bath. It has an ample number of rooms for the demand that is likely to be made for some years for high class accommodations, but could not always furnish enough rooms of the size desired. There will be eight large sample rooms on one of the floors of the Frekrer annex and on the other floor will be twelve rooms, each fitted with bath.

W. T. Bailey and Mike Maxwell Have Matched Their Flyers.

Horsemen are showing great interest in the race that has been arranged for between W. T. Bailey's and Mike Maxwell's fast horses, which will be pulled off at the fair grounds course July 15. Both horses are said to have track records of about 2:19, and something better is looked for on this occasion if track conditions are favorable.

Mr. Maxwell lives at Eveleth, where he is in the livery business. His entry is something of a dark horse here. It was bought last winter somewhere up in the Rat Portage country, and was driven down through the woods to the range. It is said that it has done some exceptionally good speeding, and Mr. Bailey's racer is already well known. The race is for a private purse of $500 a side, though gate money and side bets will likely make the contest worth much more to the winner.

Both horses are now quartered at the fair grounds course and are being placed in training for the race. It will be best three out of five heats.

WILEY WINS MATCH.

Spokane, Wash., June 27.—H. Max Wiley, of New York, and Ernest Maxwell, of Toronto, lightweight champion wrestlers of their respective countries, battled before the Spokane Athletic club for the championship of North America. Wiley won, taking two straight falls, catch-as-catch-can.

WINNIPEG'S WELCOME

To the Minnesota Bankers and Other Visitors.

Winnipeg, Man., June 27.—Although Winnipeg was not celebrating the coronation of the king, the city was en fete yesterday, and her leading citizens extended the best welcome to the visiting bankers and capitalists from adjoining states. For the time being the depressed feeling created by the king's serious illness, so apparent since the first announcement, was almost forgotten.

The first of the two excursion trains on board of which were 261 bankers with lady friends, representing 8 per cent of the banking capital of Minnesota, arrived at 8 o'clock. The train consisted of nine cars, all crowded.

The reception was by government representatives, mayor, council and coronation reception committee. The visitors at once divided in three parties and were taken to the Commercial and Manitoba clubs and Mariaggi's restaurant and entertained at breakfast. Then they visited the bank buildings and many declared the Bank of Commerce, Dominion bank, Bank of Hamilton and Merchants' bank equal to any in the Twin Cities.

The second excursion, with about 200 capitalists on board, arrived at 9:45 a. m., and were met at the station by the first arrivals. The party was then taken in special electric trains over the principal lines of the city, and was greatly impressed with the enormous building operations. No point on the entire route where buildings are not in course of erection could be seen.

The trip occupied until noon, and after an exhibition of speed by the fire brigade the party proceeded to the exhibition grounds, where luncheon was served by the Ladies' Hospital Aid society, youthful fair members attending the wants of the guests at tables. The toast list followed, in which kindly feelings were exchanged, but it was not necessary for such expression to show that the visitors were delighted with their reception and experiences. All appeared delighted beyond measure.

The Saskatchewan Valley Land company's party left last night for Prince Albert and other Alberta points, and the Minnesota bankers' party went out today for a trip over the Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern Southwestern branches.

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines a friend persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave immediate relief. I can eat anything I want now and my digestion is good." Max Wirth.

DANCED

After the Exercises and Atterbein Faculty Was Shocked.

Columbus, Ohio, June 27.—Commencement festivities at Otterbein university, Westerville, Ohio, took quite a sensational aspect as the result of the determined efforts by some of the trustees of the college and members of the clergy to put a stop to dancing.

On commencement day, after the graduating exercises in the chapel, many of the students assembled in the Gymnasium building to witness a reproduction of the famous sextet from the opera, "Florodora," which had been well rehearsed by twelve of Otterbein's most charming young women and young men.

After the pretty drill had been gone through a second time, the son of a Methodist minister sat down at the piano and began playing "The Hum of the Bumble-Bee," from "King Dodo." In less than a minute fifty pairs of feet were maving to the fascinating two-step. But this joy was soon cut short. Rev. Frank Sanders witnessed the scene for several minutes and then loudly clapped his hands three times and exclaimed:

"Young people, this building is dedicated to a higher purpose than this—please stop it." Although the reverend gentleman has no other official connection with the college than being the brother of Dr. T. J. Sanders, ex-president of the college, his manner produced consternation among the students. They at once filed out and took the next trolley car to a summer park, where they enjoyed several hours of dancing.

Another incident of the week, which is regarded in a more serious light by many of the friends of the college, is the action of the faculty committee in refusing to grant Professor Clarence Newman a well-earned increase of salary, because he would not promise to desist from dancing. The opposition of the trustees who brought this pressure to bear was aroused by an item in the local college paper, stating that Professor Newman had given a dance to students in the town hall at the close of the college year. The professor does not deny having assisted in the affair. As a result of his not being retained as vocal instructor, many of the lady students under his instruction announced their intention of not returning to Otterbein.

It was unanimously decided to hold the next convention at Columbus, Ohio.

VIRULENT CANCER CURED.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts, of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklin's Arnica Salve, which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and microbe poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood diseases, skin eruptions ulcers and sores vanish. YALE WINS BIG RACE

Sons of Eli Defeated Harvard In 'Varsity Event.

The Freshmen Race Proved to Be Dead Heat.

Harvard Has Four-Oared Race to Her Credit.

New London, Conn., June 27.—Rowing within ten seconds of recodr time, the Ya.. 'varsity crew yesterday afternoon lowered the colors of the fastest eight that Harvard had yet produced. Yale won by four boat lengths. Yale's time was 20:20, Harvard's 20:33. In the four-oared race the colors of Harvard were borne to the front. The Cambridge four won by two and one-half lengths.

In the freshman race, Yale's crew led over the last mile until within a few feet of the finish, where the Harvard crew by a magnificent spurt jumped their shell up even with the blue. The judges were compelled to deside the race was a draw.

Twenty-five thousand people saw the Ells row to victory.

The presence of President Roosevelt made the crowd unique in the history of Yale-Harvard races. The president saw the finish of all three races from aboard the Dolphin which was anchored just above the finish line. He declined the invitation of the regatta committee to go aboard Corneaus Vanderbilt's launch, Mirage, preferring, he said, to remain aboard the Dolphin where he could be with his family.

The eyes of 25,000 people meanwhile searched yacht after yacht in the hope of a glimpse of the president.

....ter a stormy night and a morning which seemed to mean postponement of the races until Friday, the afternoon finally became a cloudless day of almost perfect weather for shell racing. The wind blew quartering on the course from the nor..west, but with the exception of the 'varsity four-oared race, the crews could not have had much better water. A quarter before 6 o'clock the referee steamed over the course in August Belmont's launch Scout, and blew a long blast of the whistle notifying the crews to get ready. Mighty cheers resounded among ..e green hills of Montville and Gales Ferry as the Harvard eight rowed over to .... start, five minutes before 6 o'clock.

Yale was a trifle slower in leaving her boat house and Referee Meikleham notified the Ells a seco... time. By 6:07 both crews were at their stake boats. At 6:09 the pistol was fired and the two big shells leaped into motion.

Harvard got the best of the start and in ten strokes had the nose of her shell a quarter of a length ahead of the blues. The crimsons had the best water over the first quarter mile. Harvard started at 36 strokes to the minute, Yale at 32. By the end of the first half mile Harvard had dropped her stroke to 34, while Yale still held at 32. At the half mile flag the boats were almost even. The watches on the referee's boat record Yale's time for t..s half mile at 2:29½. Harvard at 2:29¾. Yale had cut down Harvard's lead while rowing from two to four less strokes to the minute. Over the next half mile the race was a desperate struggle between two powerful crews. The boats zigzagged for a minute and a half and then the blue shell began to creep ahead. Yale reached the first mile flg in 5:04, two seconds before Harvard. The Ells were two-thirds of a length ahead.

Yale had dropped her stroke to 31 per minute and Harvard had let her's down to 32. It had been a terrible fight, but Yale had finally gotten the lead. From the end of the first mile to the mile and half flag the boats scarcely changed positions. Harvard raised her stroke and so did Yale. The blue shell finishe.. the mile and a half in 7:37, Harvard in 7:35½. Over this distance Yale had gained but half a second. At the two mile flag Yale was leauing Harvard by four seconds. Yale's time was 10:11, Harvard's 10:15. Whistles and sirens at the navy yard shrieked out a welcome to the oarsmen as they swung down over the next half mile. Yale's time for the two and one-ha.. miles was 12:42, Harvard's 12:47.

Over the next half mile the blues picked up just another second in the struggle for supremacy. At the three-mile Yale led by two good lengths, her time being 15:30, and Harvard's 15:36. Then Yale raised her stroke up to thirty-two and Harvard in a desperate effort to hold her own kept her's at thirty-four. Yale did her work with more ease than Harvard and this was especially true of the beginning of the stroke. Harvard's stroke was more exhausting than Yale's.

The crews entered the long avenue of yachts in grand style. Little by little Yale increased her lead until at the three and a half mile flag she was nine full seconds ahead of Harvard which means practically three full boat lengths. Yale's time was 17:40; Harvard's 17:49.

It was now a spurt for the last half of the race. Yale raised her stroke to thirty-three and then to thirty-four. Harvard held her's at thirty-four for a minute, but had to drop it at last to thirty-two. The Harvard coxswain made a bad mess of his steering over his last mile of the race. Harvard was plucky despite the fact that she was far behind and gradually her men struck their pace again and rowed it out. McGraw was reeling in his seat and Jackson again and again dashed water in his face. It was only a question of how many lengths Yale would have at the finish. Suddenly the flag dropped for Yale. The blues' time was 20:20, just ten seconds slower than the record made by the famous Yale crew of 1885.

Harvard's time was 20:33, which gave to Yale the victory by four good boat lengths.

Just as the finish flag fell and Yale's men stopped rowing, Waterman, the bow in the Yale boat, dropped limp over the side of the shell. It looked as though he would fall overboard, before Daly at No. 2 could throw water on him and revive him. He finally got into his seat and rowed over to the launch with the rest. Harvard's oarsmen were all pumped out at the finish.

The story of the freshmen's race is easily told for the first mile. The Yale eight got away at thirty-three strokes to the minute, Harvard at thirty-six. The Yale boat got the best of the start and held it. Yale finished the first half mile in 1:55, Harvard in 1:57. The New Haven freshmen finished the mile in 4:39, just one length ahead of Harvard, who finished in 4:22.

Just beyond the mile flag, the Harvard boys began to spurt. Little by little they cut down Yale's lead until at the mile and a half flag they were leading Yale. Harvard's time for the mile and a half was 7:27 and Yale's 7:28. Harvard was now almost a length ahead.

The crimson eight put their stroke up to thirty-four, but the Yale boys still held theirs at thirty. The boats zigzagged between the strokes for the next minute until they were almost even. Then Yale weakened a little, but soon she regained control of her boat and once more the shells were practically even. The Harvard boys put their stroke up to thirty-six and aYle raised hers to thirty-two in the grandest fight ever seen on any river between freshmen crews. The flags at the finish dropped and no one could tell which had dropped first. The watches made it a dead heat in 10:13 and a moment later the judges announced that the race was ad raw.

The freshmen had rowed the two miles in just two seconds slower time than the Yale 'varsity.

The four-oared race was a victory for Harvard from the very start. The Harvard four got the lead at the crack of the pistol and never lost it. Harvard's time was 11:19½; Yale's, 11:25½.

EXPENSE IS HEAVY

Imperialism Has In the Past Year Cost $187,000,000.

This Is Equal to Per Capita Tax of $2.15.

Philippine War Will Drain the Treasury of $250,000,000.

Washington, June 27.—Imperialism is costing the people of the United States an enormous sum annually. The war department is expending a sum equal to the entire cost of the civil and miscellaneous expenses of the government.

Despite the claims of the administration that the war is over in the Philippines and that there had been a general reduction of of expenses, the treasury department statement shows that before the expiration of the fiscal year, ending June 30, the war department will have expended $117,000,000. The entire civil expenses of the government, including the pay of the president, senators and representatives, courts, clerks in the various departments and all other expenses, will be in excess of this amount only a few hundred thousand dollars. Since 1897, the year before the outbreak of hostilities with Spain, the war expenses of the war department have grown to a sum which was never dreamed of at that time. The following comparison shows this rapid increase:

1898	91,992,000
1899	229,841,254
1900	134,774,767
1901	144,615,687
1902	117,000,000

During the same period the cost of the navy has grown from $34,000,000 annually to $70,000,000—more than doubling in cost.

The combined cost of the army and navy of the United States is equal to a per capita tax of $2.15 on every man, woman and child in the United States. These sums do not include the enormous amounts expended on the army and navy by officers in the Philippines and in Cuba, which were paid out of the insular treasuries.

To the present time neither the Philippines, Porto Rico, Guam or Cuba has netted anything to the government. The colony possessions have been a constant drain upon the national treasury, and through it upon the taxpayers of the country.

Four years after the close of the civil war—the most disastrous the world has ever known—the war expenses of the government amounted to but $78,501,900, and that of the navy $20,000,000, a total of $98,501,900, as against $187,000,000 four years after the close of the war with Spain.

Secretary Root, in a report to the senate, places the cost of the war in the Philippines alone at $170,326,586, which does not include the $20,000,000 Spain as an indemnity. The secretary argues that much of the expense in the Philippines was not properly chargeable to military operations, as the pay and maintenance of the army would have gone on whether in the United States or elsewhere. He makes no reference to the fact that it was because of the exigencies in these islands that the army was increased to 100,000.

The total cost of the war in the Philippines, including navy and other expenses, will be in the neighborhood of $250,000,000, without the chance for the return of a single dollar. In addition to this the pension rolls will be largely augmented by reason of soldiers incurring disabilities in the tropical service and through deaths and wounds. Thousands of soldiers have been killed in battle or by disease. The army alone requires about one-half of the total receipts from customs for its support. The customs receipts average about $800,000 a day. The internal revenue receipts average about $1,000,000 a day.

Despite these enormous expenditures for the army and navy the treasury today has an available cash balance of $202,195,146, which is the largest in years. The surplus, as shown by the statement of the treasury, is $80,210,728, but there is outstanding against this liabilities sufficient to bring the sum down to a considerable extent.

AN OLD SORE

Will sour the sweetest disposition and transform the most even tempered, lovable nature into a cross-grained and irritable individual.

If impatience or fault-finding are ever excusable it is when the body is tortured by an eating and painful sore. It is truly discouraging to find after months of diligent and faithful use of external remedies that the place remains as defiant, angry and offensive as ever. Every chronic sore, no matter on what part of the body it comes, is an evidence of some previous constitutional or organic trouble, and that the dregs of these diseases remain in the system; or, it may be that some long hidden poison—perhaps Cancer—has come to the surface and begun its destructive work.

The blood must be purified before the sore will fill up with healthy flesh and the skin regains its natural color. It is through the circulation that the acrid, corroding fluids are carried to the sore or ulcer and keep it irritated and inflamed. S. S. S. will purify and invigorate the stagnant blood when all sediment or other hurtful materials are washed out, fresh rich blood is carried to the diseased parts, new tissues form, and the decaying flesh begins to have a healthy and natural look; the discharge ceases and the sore heals.

COWHIDE

Was Used By Judge to Whip a Virginia Pastor.

Richmond, Va., June 26.—Just when scores of citizens of Amherst Courthouse, Va., were congratulating themselves upon the final discharge of Rev. C. H. Crawford, charged with being in contempt of court, an assault was made by Judge Clarence H. Campbell upon the Richmond minister, and a rough cowhiding of the latter followed.

Crawford, who is the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league of the state, in the organization, had criticised Judge Campbell severely for his course in the matter of liquor licenses.

Probably 100 ladies were present at his trial, and no more interested spectators than they were in the place. The judge discharged the prisoner, declaring that Mr. Crawford was not in contempt of the court, and that in declining to obey the court summons issued against him in the shape of a rule he did no more than was his right. During the process of the trial Judge Campbell had given Rev. Mr. Crawford an opportunity to withdraw the language he had used in the Christian Federation, referring to the phase, "Which had been doctored the most, the doctor or the liquor?" And he had declined to do so on the ground that the construction which he placed upon it, the criticism, was to the best of his knowledge and belief just.

When he announced his decision Judge Campbell referred to this fact, and regretted that Mr. Crawford had refused to withdraw a statement which, in suggesting that the Amherst court, as represented by its judge, had been bribed with whisky, was false and would be held so by the people of the community. He discharged the prisoner, but held in strong disapproval the language he had used.

Mr. Crawford and his friends had retired from the courtroom and were standing on the green talking over the affair. Judge Campbell had also left, but after a few moments returned to the neighborhood.

Approaching Rev. Mr. Crawford he entered into conversation with him apparently in a friendly manner, and then suddenly raised a cowhide which he held in his hand and lashed the minister unmercifully. Mr. Crawford was taken completely by surprise and made no effort to defend himself. Before he had time to get his wits together the affair was over, and Judge Campbell, accompanied by a few friends, had hurried from the field.

MARY WALKER

In a Shirtwaist But Will Wear a Panama Hat.

Oswego, N. Y., June 27.—Mary Walker, the trousered exponent of women's rights and the apostle of dress reform, is about to discard the conventional silk hat, high collar and Prince Albert coat, the attire she has worn for forty years, for the Panama hat, stock collar and shirt waist. The stiff-front shirt dress, so she says.

Dr. Walker was indignant when it was gossiped about that, by donning the shirt waist, she had receded from her original stand against feminine frills and had become effeminate.

"No, sir; no, sir," she repeated emphatically. "The shirt waist does not lower man's dignity. On the contrary, it is manly and the correct dress for the up-to-date man during the summer months. I would prefer the shirt waist to having my waist confined in steel traps."

Dr. Walker is skeptical with regard to the Panama hats. Nothing but the genuine article will do the doctor, and she fears lest the imitation be foisted upon her instead of the real thing.

The doctor will be particular about the cut of her waist, and unless it is made in the latest mode the misfit parlor will have an extra garment. "Just a plain, ordinary shirt waist, with no frills and ornaments, is what I want," said the doctor. "I shall leave those things to the silly women to wear."

TOOK REVENGE

On Brother-in-Law By Giving Family Smallpox.

Marion, Ind., June 27.—Wade Murphy, an oil well driller, learned he had the smallpox, escaped quarantine, and went to the home of his brother-in-law, Noah Kreps, near Bluffton, against whom he had a grievance, inoculated the family, and then went to Van Buren, where he was cared for by the health officer. Six of the Kreps family and three members of the family of James Murphy, a neighbor, now have the disease and are in quarantine. Murphy, it is said, wrote a letter to his brother-in-law, telling him of his scheme for revenge, when he learned the family were sick.

International Sunday School Lesson For June 29, 1902.

Golden text: "A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel." Luke 2:32.

The greatest person of this quarter's lesson has been Paul. He was educated as a strict Pharisee, and early in his life became a leader of that sect. He conscientiously thought that he was doing God service in persecuting the church of Christ, for he supposed that the church was subverting the law of Moses as well as the traditions of the people. He was very zealous in his religious faith and in his pursuit of righteousness. The church suffered terribly at his hands both in Jerusalem and in Judea. He even obtained permission to go to Damascus and force the believers there to renounce their faith or suffer the deprivation of their liberties.

It was while in en route to the Syrian capital that the Lord appeared to Saul and convinced him of the reality of the resurrection, and revealed himself as the spiritual power whereby Saul could attain the righteousness he had vainly sought so long through his own efforts. A genuine transformation was wrought in Saul's life, and yet he did not give up the spiritual part of his Jewish faith; that remained as the foundation of his Christian life. He realized that God had chosen him for a great work, which he at once faced with the full zest of his enthusiastic nature. Without the conversion of this one man the course of early Christianity would doubtless have been very different from what it actually was.

Before the church could become an efficient evangelizing agency it had to learn that the gospel was meant for a universal sway unlimited by any boundaries except the forbidding line of unbelief. The scattering of the disciples on the persecution of Stephen marked the beginning of the dissemination of the truth among the Gentiles. There then followed some systematic preaching, and Peter went down to Lydda and Joppa, where by his words and his works of healing and the miracle of raising Dorcas from the dead he won large numbers to faith in Jesus Christ.

While Peter was at Joppa in the home of Simon the tanner, he saw the strange vision of the sheet let down from heaven containing all manner of four-footed beasts, and heard the voice which taught him that God had accounted all men worthy to receive the gospel message and its salvation if they would only accept it. Immediately men from Caesarea came for him, sent by Cornelius, a Roman centurion, who also had seen a vision from God telling him to send for Peter, who would make known to him the way of God. Peter went with the messengers and preached to Cornelius and to all who were gathered in his home. Before the discourse was ended the blessing of the Holy spirit was evident, and Peter exclaimed, "Can any man forbid water that these should not be baptized, which have received the Holy Ghost as well as we?"

But this was only the beginning of the incident. Peter was admonished by the church at Jerusalem for associating with the Gentiles. He, in defense, related the whole story, concluding with the pointed query, "Who was I, that I could withstand God?" It is noticeable that Peter was not reproved because he had preached to the Gentiles, but because he had eaten with them. The barrier which the church had to overcome between the Jews and the Gentiles was as much social as religious. Cornelius was a man of piety who had fulfilled that Scripture which says, "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God." There could have been no possible objection to him on personal grounds, only that he was a Gentile. The church assented to Peter's conduct in that case and thus put the seal of approval upon the reception of Gentiles into the church. But that fact was destined to open a more difficult question a little later on.

Even in Phoenice and Cyprus the believers, who had fled from the fury of Saul and his co-partners, preached the gospel. The metropolitan city of Antioch was not without witnesses. For the most part, the message was limited to the Jews, but there were some Cypriotes and Cyrenians who at Antioch ventured to invite Greeks to accept the message, and the Greeks were blessed as much as the believing Jews had been. So the work among the Gentiles in the North began almost simultaneously with Peter's ministry in Caesarea, and the church in Jerusalem hearing of it sent Barnabas to the Antiochenes the good will of the Jerusalem Christians. He tarried there for over a year, encouraging the converts and gaining new ones, going meanwhile to Tarsus and bringing his old friend Saul to help him. The believers in Christ were called "Christians" first in Antioch, perhaps because in that city the Gentile element was predominant and the use of the name, Christ, was more unusual there than it was among the Jews, all of whom believed in an expected Christ. As a final and indubitable evidence of the genuineness of the faith of the Gentiles, the Antioch church sent by the hands of Barnabas and Saul a contribution to help out the poor Christians in Jerusalem. Thus was the new phase of the work linked to the old.

About this time Herod put forth his futile effort to crush out the church. He killed James the apostle, and in his bloodthirsty fashion obsequiously tried to please the Jews still more by taking Peter, with the intention of offering his head to the people at the first convenient moment. But, by the ministry of an angel of God, Peter was delivered and the work of the gospel went on more gloriously than ever before, for the believers were undaunted, and their courage was rewarded by the blessings of the spirit of God.

The rest of the lessons in acts for the quarter related the story of Paul's early missionary career. Under the guidance of the Holy Spirit he and Barnabas were set apart and sent out by the church to spread the good tidings of Christ in the regions next beyond toward the West. They went first to the old home of Barnabas in the island of Cyprus. They easily found a hearing among the people and also from the Roman Proconsul at Paphos. The gospel won none of its early triumphs without opposition. Paul's missionary efforts from beginning to end were carried out in spite of dangers that would have terrorized a man of weak nerve. So at Paphos the sorcercer opposed him andLuke records the remarkable miracle that caused consternation to fall upon the Proconsul.

Onto new conquests Paul led the way. It was only a short sail to the coast of Pamphylia, affording Paul and Barnabas opportunity to journey inland to Antioch, where they preached in the synagogue and taught the people until the Jews became jealous of their influence and contradicted what they said; whereupon they turned to the Gentiles. Their efforts with the Gentiles were very successful until the Jews actually drove them from the city and they shook off the dust of the ungrateful city from their feet and went on to Lystra, and Iconium and Derbe, doing faithfully the work of the ministry and suffering many things in each place except Herbe, where they were well received. They then retraced their steps, homeward bound, revisiting the churches they had already established to encourage the converts.

On their arrival at Antioch in Syria they reported the results of their journey and rejoiced with the church at the wonderful progress of the grace of God. Soon the peace of their community was disturbed by a self-constituted committee from Jerusalem that declared to them that they could not be saved unless they were circumcised "after the custom of Moses." The question was at once appealed to the Jerusalem church. Paul and Barnabas contending strenuously for the freedom of the Gentile converts from subservience to the Mosaic law. Thus was launched the second great question concerning the admission of the Gentiles to the church. The first question—that the Gentiles should be received—was decided immediately after the conversion of Cornelius. The second question—on what terms should the Gentiles be received—was gravely discussed in the council at Jerusalem, and Paul won his point. Neither circumcision, nor any other part of the ceremonial law was to be accounted binding on the new converts, only it was recommended that, out of deference, the Gentile converts should abstain from certain things that were especially obnoxious to the Jews. And so the threatened disruption in the church was averted and unity was once more assured.

Paul and Barnabus returned to Antioch with the news of the findings of the council. The event gave great joy to the church, and the two evangelists further delighted and edified the church with their preaching until the old mission hunger once more seized them and they began to make preparations to revisit the churches they had planted and to further extend their evangelizing efforts. But an unfortunate quarrel arose between them over Barnabas' proposition to take along Mark, who had turned back from them at a critical stage of the first journey. Paul opposed it. So the two former yokefellows parted company in a friendly spirit. At this point Barnabas drops out of authentic history except for a single mention of him in one of Paul's epistles. Paul's star thenceforth grew brighter and brighter. He went northwards to Derbe, Lystra and the other cities of that region which he had before visited, spent a large time with the Galatian churches, and would have gone into the province of Asia and into Bithynia, but the Spirit forbade him, and he went down to Troas, the Roman city near the site of Troy of classic renown, and, in response to a divinely-given vision, sailed for Philippi, where he began the great work of Christianizing Europe. Westward the star of Christian empire was taking its way, with Paul as its great prophet. At the beginning of this new epoch for Europe and for Christianity our Sunday school lessons break away from the study of the book of Acts to return for a few months to the study of sacred history as it is recorded in the earlier books of the Old Testament.

SHE FELL IN LOVE

With Louie Sing Lot, and Both Were Placed In Jail.

Chinaman Who Was Kind to Nellie Mershon, a Waitress.

Mob Led Him From Town With Rope Around Neck.

Denver, Col., June 27.—Nellie Mershon, of Idaho Springs, waitress in the fashionable Beebe hotel, fell in love with the genteel almond-eyed Louie Sing Lat. Louie made soft eyes at her when she came into his kitchen for orders to serve the guests, and she smiled. He was never insulting. He was always deferential and polite. When some low-souled men at the tables in the great dining room ade insulting remarks to the pretty waitress with the pink cheeks and she walked away to the kitchen to escape them, it was a relief to see Louie Sing Lat looking kindly and deferential.

The crisis came when both cook and waitress asked for the money due them and it was whispered that they meant to leave the town together and get married in Denver. That night a mob captured Louie Sing Lat, put a rope around his neck, and led him to the outskirts of the town and told him that if he ever showed his face there again the rope would be tied to a tree and drawn tight and left so.

On being released by the mob, Louie Sing Lat came on the next train to Denver. Nellie Mershon left on the next train, and was met at the Union station in Denver by her yellow lover. They went to the Columbia notel, where she registered the two under the name of "N. Mershon and wife," and were assigned to room 320. They intended to be married this morning and leave for Portland, but Charles Thorp had read that his sister-in-law was about to marry a Chinaman and caused the arrest of Lat.

"Yes, sir, I am 32 years old," said she, "and I never saw a better gentleman. I have had to swallow lots and lots of insults from white men, but that Chinaman was a true man and never once insulted me. He was so kind and good that I just loved him. If I want to marry a Chinaman it's my own affair."

"That alle light," that alle light," was Louie Sing Lat's response when asked whether he would marry the girl when he gets out of jail. "I neva leave poor gal. She wantee me mallee an' takee care her. She goodee gal, quiet an' neva havee much say, goodee gal as in world.

"But me, I neva in plison allee my life befo. Dis makee me damn sad. I velly solly for gal, for she goodee gal. I gettee so mad when allest me an' puttee in plison I don't know what to do."

Louie Sing Lat is a rich Chinaman. He owns stock in the Six Companies store in San Francisco, and while he was in Omaha he owned a large restaurant. He is very much in love with the girl and says that he will marry her if he has to go to New York to do it. He has a cousin in Omaha who married a white woman and is very happy with her. They have bright little children and have a good home.

The young lady persists that nothing as trifling as color shall hinder her from marrying the first real gentleman she has ever met. Her brother-in-law says she shall not, and that if the law does not interfere, he and his friends will interfere in a way that will make the moon-faced Oriental look like 50 cents.

Trenton Falls, N. Y.

For a great many years Trenton Falls has been known as a summer resort with more than usual attractions. At this point the West Canada creek, which drains a large area of the Southern Adirondacks, descends about 300 feet through a picturesque gorge, forming a series of wonderfully beautiful falls and cascades, called by the Indians Kauya-hoo-ra, "Leaping Water." For several years the surroundings have been undergoing extensive improvements; an electric plant has been installed, and the falls, gorge and woods are illuminated by night, presenting a picture of rare beauty. Trenton Falls is eighteen miles north of Utica, N. Y., and is reached via the New York Central. You may read all about it in the New York Central's "Four-Track Series" No. 6, entitled "In the Adirondack Mountains." Sent free on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, Grand Central station, New York.

No need to fear sudden attacks of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, or summer complaint, if you have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the medicine chest.

COWHIDE

Was Used By Judge to Whip a Virginia Pastor.

Richmond, Va., June 26.—Just when scores of citizens of Amherst Courthouse, Va., were congratulating themselves upon the final discharge of Rev. C. H. Crawford, charged with being in contempt of court, an assault was made by Judge Clarence H. Campbell upon the Richmond minister, and a rough cowhiding of the latter followed.

Crawford, who is the superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league of the state, in the organization, had criticised Judge Campbell severely for his course in the matter of liquor licenses.

Probably 100 ladies were present at his trial, and no more interested spectators than they were in the place. The judge discharged the prisoner, declaring that Mr. Crawford was not in contempt of the court, and that in declining to obey the court summons issued against him in the shape of a rule he did no more than was his right. During the process of the trial Judge Campbell had given Rev. Mr. Crawford an opportunity to withdraw the language he had used in the Christian Federation, referring to the phase, "Which had been doctored the most, the doctor or the liquor?" And he had declined to do so on the ground that the construction which he placed upon it, the criticism, was to be the best of his knowledge and belief just.

When he announced his decision Judge Campbell referred to this fact, and regretted that Mr. Crawford had refused to withdraw a statement which, in suggesting that the Amherst court, as represented by its judge, had been bribed with whisky, was false and would be held so by the people of the community. He discharged the prisoner, but held in strong disapproval the language he had used.

Mr. Crawford and his friends had retired from the courtroom and were standing on the green talking over the affair. Judge Campbell had also left, but after a few moments returned to the neighborhood.

Approaching Rev. Mr. Crawford he entered into conversation with him apparently in a friendly manner, and then suddenly raised a cowhide which he held in his hand and lashed the minister unmercifully. Mr. Crawford was taken completely by surprise and made no effort to defend himself. Before he had time to get his wits together the affair was over, and Judge Campbell, accompanied by a few friends, had hurried from the field.

MARY WALKER

In a Shirtwaist But Will Wear a Panama Hat.

Oswego, N. Y., June 27.—Mary Walker, the trousered exponent of women's rights and the apostle of dress reform, is about to discard the conventional silk hat, high collar and Prince Albert coat, the attire she has worn for forty years, for the Panama hat, stock collar and shirt waist. The stiff-front shirt dress, so she says.

Dr. Walker was indignant when it was gossiped about that, by donning the shirt waist, she had receded from her original stand against feminine frills and had become effeminate.

"No, sir; no, sir," she repeated emphatically. "The shirt waist does not lower man's dignity. On the contrary, it is manly and the correct dress for the up-to-date man during the summer months. I would prefer the shirt waist to having my waist confined in steel traps."

Dr. Walker is skeptical with regard to the Panama hats. Nothing but the genuine article will do the doctor, and she fears lest the imitation be foisted upon her instead of the real thing.

The doctor will be particular about the cut of her waist, and unless it is made in the latest mode the misfit parlor will have an extra garment. "Just a plain, ordinary shirt waist, with no frills and ornaments, is what I want," said the doctor. "I shall leave those things to the silly women to wear."

TOOK REVENGE

On Brother-in-Law By Giving Family Smallpox.

Marion, Ind., June 27.—Wade Murphy, an oil well driller, learned he had the smallpox, escaped quarantine, and went to the home of his brother-in-law, Noah Kreps, near Bluffton, against whom he had a grievance, inoculated the family, and then went to Van Buren, where he was cared for by the health officer. Six of the Kreps family and three members of the family of James Murphy, a neighbor, now have the disease and are in quarantine. Murphy, it is said, wrote a letter to his brother-in-law, telling him of his scheme for revenge, when he learned the family were sick.

So the two former yokefellows parted company in a friendly spirit. At this point Barnabas drops out of authentic history except for a single mention of him in one of Paul's epistles. Paul's star thenceforth grew brighter and brighter. He went northwards to Derbe, Lystra and the other cities of that region which he had before visited, spent a large time with the Galatian churches, and would have gone into the province of Asia and into Bithynia, but the Spirit forbade him, and he was shown to Troas, the Roman city near the site of Troy of classic renown, and, in response to a divinely-given vision, sailed for Philippi, where he began the great work of Christianizing Europe. Westward the star of Christian empire was taking its way, with Paul as its great prophet. At the beginning of this new epoch for Europe and for Christianity our Sunday school lessons break away from the study of the book of Acts to return for a few months to the study of sacred history as it is recorded in the earlier books of the Old Testament.

SHE FELL IN LOVE

With Louie Sing Lot, and Both Were Placed In Jail.

Chinaman Who Was Kind to Nellie Mershon, a Waitress.

Mob Led Him From Town With Rope Around Neck.

Denver, Col., June 27.—Nellie Mershon, of Idaho Springs, waitress in the fashionable Beebe hotel, fell in love with the genteel almond-eyed Louie Sing Lat. Louie made soft eyes at her when she came into his kitchen for orders to serve the guests, and she smiled. He was never insulting. He was always deferential and polite. When some low-souled men at the tables in the great dining room ade insulting remarks to the pretty waitress with the pink cheeks and she walked away to the kitchen to escape them, it was a relief to see Louie Sing Lat looking kindly and deferential.

The crisis came when both cook and waitress asked for the money due them and it was whispered that they meant to leave the town together and get married in Denver. That night a mob captured Louie Sing Lat, put a rope around his neck, and led him to the outskirts of the town and told him that if he ever showed his face there again the rope would be tied to a tree and drawn tight and left so.

On being released by the mob, Louie Sing Lat came on the next train to Denver. Nellie Mershon left on the next train, and was met at the Union station in Denver by her yellow lover. They went to the Columbia notel, where she registered the two under the name of "N. Mershon and wife," and were assigned to room 320. They intended to be married this morning and leave for Portland, but Charles Thorp had read that his sister-in-law was about to marry a Chinaman and caused the arrest of Lat.

"Yes, sir, I am 32 years old," said she, "and I never saw a better gentleman. I have had to swallow lots and lots of insults from white men, but that Chinaman was a true man and never once insulted me. He was so kind and good that I just loved him. If I want to marry a Chinaman it's my own affair."

"That alle light. That alle light," was Louie Sing Lat's response when asked whether he would marry the girl when he gets out of jail. "I neva leave poor gal. She wantee me mallee an' takee care her. She goodee gal, quiet an' neva havee much say, goodee gal as in world.

"But me, I neva in pilson allee my life befo. Dis makee me damn sad. I yelly solly for gal, for she goodee gal. I gettee so mad when allest me an' puttee in pison I don't know what to do."

Louie Sing Lat is a rich Chinaman. He owns stock in the Six Companies store in San Francisco, and while he was in Omaha he owned a large restaurant. He is very much in love with the girl and says that he will marry her if he has to go to New York to do it. He has a cousin in Omaha who married a white woman and is very happy with her. They have bright little children and have a good home.

The young lady persists that nothing as trifling as color shall hinder her from marrying the first real gentleman she has ever met. Her brother-in-law says she shall not, and that if the law does not interfere, he and his friends will interfere in a way that will make the moon-faced Oriental look like 30 cents.

Trenton Falls, N. Y.

For a great many years Trenton Falls has been known as a summer resort with more than usual attractions. At this point the West Canada creek, which drains a large area of the Southern Adirondacks, descends about 300 feet through a picturesque gorge, forming a series of wonderfully beautiful falls and cascades, called by the Indians Kauya-hoo-ra, "Leaping Water." For several years the surroundings have been undergoing extensive improvements; an electric plant has been installed, and the falls, gorge and woods are illuminated by night, presenting a picture of rare beauty. Trenton Falls is eighteen miles north of Utica, N. Y., and is reached via the New York Central. You may read all about it in the New York Central's "Four-Track Series" No. 6, entitled "In the Adirondack Mountains." Sent free on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, Grand Central station, New York.

No need to fear sudden attacks of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, or summer complaint, if you have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the medicine chest.

EXPERT THEORY

Prof. Curtis Discusses Handwriting In the Mueller Case.

Attorney Severance Subjects Him to Close Cross-Examination.

Judge S. F. White One of the Important Witnesses.

A great deal of interest was manifested in the Mueller case in district court yesterday afternoon when Professor C. C. Curtis, the handwriting expert from Minneapolis, was on the stand and testified that the same person who signed Johann Mueller's name to the mortgage, note and timber deeds, admitted to be genuine, did not sign the name of Johann Mueller to the Schweitzer deed. While Professor Curtis was pointing out to the court wherein, in his opinion, the letters of the signature of Mueller on the Schweitzer deed differed from the signatures on the other documents, the several attorneys and others interested in the case gathered about him and followed his explanation with close interest.

Professor Curtis began with the first letter in Johann Mueller's alleged signature to the Schweitzer deed, and analyzed every letter and its connection with its following letter, through the signature. He said he found the capital letter "J" on the Schweitzer deed not identical with the same letter on the other admitted signatures; that it began with a different kind of line, had a different curve and stroke, and the distance of the letter below the base line differed from the other "J's." The same combination, he said, was not similar in the other signatures. The pen, he said, had been lifted from the paper before the line from the letter "J" reached the next letter "o."

Continuing, he said that the sweep of the line in the base of the letter "J" was a change in direction from that in the other signatures, that in the latter the combination was angular. The combination of the letters "o" and "h" in the Schweitzer deed were said to be different in the admitted signatures in that it was angular and indicated a stoppage of the pen in making the downward stroke. In the Schweitzer deed the second downward stroke in the letter "h" was curved and in all the admitted signatures it was an angular. He said the small "a" in the Schweitzer deed had a downward broad stroke showing both points of the pen, while in the admitted signatures the lines were straighter and curved at the base. In the two concluding letters "n" in the first name on the Schweitzer deed witness said that the turns at the top were rounding and graceful and the downward strokes were broad, showing both points of the pen, very different than the combinations in similar parts of the admitted signature, the latter being angular and indicating nervousness in making. He also indicated a different kind of combination in the base of the two letters "n" as compared with the other signatures.

Professor Curtis said the capital letter "M" in Mueller on the Schweitzer deed differed from the other signatures in the first downward stroke of the flourish, which was straight and made by the hand of a person in his prime, rather than by that of an old man. The same he said was true of the two heavy downward strokes in the letter "M." The letter "u" on the Schweitzer deed, the witness add, was strong, square at the top, made with a firm hand while in the admitted signatures the same lines were wavering and faltering and of a different quality at the base turns. The downward stroke in the letter "e" was said to end abruptly, the points of the pen coming together and the line passing to the first letter "l" was disconnected, differing from corresponding combinations in the other signatures. Witness said the downward strokes with the two letters "l" were strong, made with a free hand and with the marks of the pen well shown, while those of the admitted signatures were wavering, showing a nervous hand. The letter "r" in Mueller was said to have been made with an extra stroke and the original "r" was connected by another stroke.

After analyzing the letters, Professor Curtis said that to his mind it would be a physical impossibility for the writer of the admitted signatures to have written the signature to the Schweitzer deed.

In his direct examination Professor Curtis said there were individualities about a person's handwriting that always stayed by him, though they might be modified by age or sickness or other physical conditions.

When shown the alleged signature of Johann Mueller in the old song book that Mrs. Mueller is said to have brought with her from the old country Professor Curtis said that in his opinion the signature was made by the same person that signed the admitted signatures.

Cross-examined by Mr. Severance, the witness said he could sometimes tell approximately the age of the signature by the ink, but could not in the case of the Schweitzer deed. After an examination of the initials on the revenue stamp, he said he could not distinguish the second initial, but that the letter "J" on the stamp was not made by the same hand that wrote the signature to the deed.

Mr. Severance then gave the witness other papers bearing on signatures, and asked him to make comparisons with those of the admitted signatures, but this the witness refused to do until he had made a careful examination.

This process was a slow one and while he was making the examination the deposition of A. P. LeSage, of West Superior, the undertaker that disinterred the remains of Johann Mueller for Mrs. Mueller and her son, was read.

New testimony, claimed by the defense in the Mueller case to be important, in that it tends to show that Johann Mueller, owner of the lands in dispute was formerly in the German army, was introduced this morning.

Judge S. F. White, of this city, who was called as a witness, said he had known Mueller quite well previous to 1896, and up to the time of his death. He testified that Mueller frequently came to his office, and the conversation generally turned to army life; that Mueller, discovering that he was a veteran of the civil war, told him that he had served in the German army. Judge White said that he got the impression that Mueller did not see active service, so far as any battles were concerned, but that he served in the reserve in the Franco-Prussian war. Witness said that he got the impression from Mueller's talk that he came from the southern part of Germany and at one time attended some military maneuvers at Carlsruhe, Germany.

A dramatic feature of Judge White's testimony was his selection out of the audience in the court room of August Mueller as a person very much resembling Johann Mueller. August Mueller is the youngest of the four sons of Kathrina Mueller, and sat beside his mother. Judge White was asked by Attorney Briggs if he knew any of the Mueller family, or had seen any of them before, and he answered in the negative. He was then asked to pick out from the audience any person whom he thought bore a close resemblance to Johann Mueller, and without hesitation he designated the young man. Questioned further as to the points of resemblance, he said that the young man had the same shaped forehead, sunken eyes, prominent ears, same shaped nose, but that his hair was much lighter and came farther down the fore part of his head than Johann Mueller's.

Cross-examined by Mr. Severance, Judge White said Mueller never told him when he came to this country, never said a word about his family, if he had one. When shown the photograph of Mueller he identified it as a good likeness of the Mueller he had known, though not quite sure that Mueller wore a mustache when he knew him.

When cross-examined by Mr. Kellogg, Judge White said Mueller had prominent ears, narrow forehead, that he talked broken English, and was quite talkative on the subject of army service. He never heard Mueller say anything about killing a man, and thought Mueller looked more like a cadaverous invalid than a murderer.

The rest of the forenoon and this afternoon was given up to the cross-examination of Professor Curtis, the handwriting expert from Minneapolis. It was mainly of a technical nature throughout, Mr. Severance calling the witness' attention to each detail of the letters in the old song book and comparing them with letters in the admitted signatures.

Professor Curtis admitted many differences, but he claimed that the other signatures were made when Mueller was a young man and when he first began making the Roman letters, and his handwriting was not matured.

When asked by Mr. Severance why he was able to decide at once that the signature in the old book was made by the same person that made the admitted signatures, witness said that he made up his mind about the signatures that the plaintiff's counsel showed him yesterday afternoon for comparison almost as soon as he saw them, but that he took time to make a careful examination to prepare himself for cross-examination.

When questioned sharply by Mr. Severance as to what he meant by the individuality of a writer, that he claimed never changed. Professor Curtis said it was something about the writing that could not be defined any more than a person can define the similarity that remains in a person's face as he grows older. Mr. Severance insisted on a more definite answer, but witness said he could not give one.

Professor Curtis said he had no other general principle to go by in detecting spurious from genuine handwriting other than a careful study to detect individualities. By a person's characteristics in his handwriting, he said he meant the proportion, the quality, the weight, direction of the lines and the movement of the hand. Mr. Severance then took up each characteristic and applied it to the letters in Mueller's alleged signature in the old song book, and questioned witness closely as to the differences that he had admitted existed in each characteristic as compared with those in the admitted signatures, and asking, if there was not a general similarity of characteristics, the witness' judgment would be at fault.

Professor Curtis, however, stuck to the statement that a man never writes his name twice exactly alike, and that there was a general similarity that convinced him the signatures were made by the same person, though at different periods in his life.

In view of the length of time that will be required to finish the case, the court, with the consent of the counsel of both sides, lengthened the morning session to 12:30 o'clock and the afternoon session to 5:30 o'clock.

TO GET SPENCE.

Deputy Sheriff Bates Gets a Nice Trip.

Deputy Sheriff Bates left this afternoon for San Francisco to get James C. Spence, formerly of the United States Installment Realty company of this city.

Mr. Spence was arrested in that city yesterday as the result of messages sent out to Chief Troyer.

Spence is short in his accounts about $1400 with the local office. He was headed for Los Angeles and the police expected to capture him easily but the morning paper announced their intentions and friends warned the fleeing embezzler.

The Los Angeles police yesterday learned that Spence was in San Francisco and wired Chief Troyer to that effect. He wired San Francisco and the arrest was the result.

HIS OWN ATTORNEY

William Henderson Conducts His Own Defense at Hearing.

Tries to Besmirch the Character of a Reputable Witness.

Is Bound Over to the September Term of Court.

William Henderson, murderer of Ida McCormack, was bound over to the grand jury this morning. The charge is murder in the first degree.

During his somewhat spectacular preliminary examination this morning the negro conducted his own defense. He did it in a manner that showed him familiar with court proceedings and perfectly sane.

He tried desperately, on cross-examination, to belittle the character of the colored women that testified against him, but in this he fell down completely.

At the conclusion of the evidence introduced by the prosecution Judge Gearhart asked the prisoner if he had any statement he cared to make.

Henderson replied that relatives were on their way from Kansas that would employ an attorney for him and until those relatives arrived he would decline to make any statement of his case.

There was a big crowd around the courtroom and corridor, mostly colored. A delegation of friends met the patrol wagon bringing the prisoner from the county jail. Some of the crowd waved to Henderson, but he showed no sign of recognition. He seemed rather to enjoy his position of notoriety. As the officers were removing the handcuffs he seemed particularly proud of his unpitasant distinction.

During the examination the colored man that Ida McCormack preferred to Henderson sat near the prisoner, but nothing transpired between the two.

Mrs. Winnifred Rivers, colored, was the first witness called by the state. She is the woman that sat in the room with Ida McCormack last Saturday evening when Henderson sprang out of the closet and proceeded to slash her.

At that time Mrs. Rivers performed a flying leap out through a second-story side window of the flat at 119 West First street, and judging from the circumstances of that jump and the testimony she gave on the stand this morning, she must have been a much terrified person.

She could remember nothing, except that after chasing Ida McCormack into the other room and stabbing her, Henderson returned to the room in which she was and murmured, "You too; I'm after you too." That was enough for Mrs. Rivers. She got out through the window without lingering anywhere.

Mrs. W. D. Jones, a white woman living across the hallway from the room in which the murder was committed, testified about the wild chase through the various apartments by Henderson and his victim.

Mrs. May Miller testified that Henderson chased the McCormack woman through her apartments, stabbing her with a large knife and saying: "You will run away, will you? Well, you won't run away any more."

Mrs. Emma Miller positively identified Henderson as the man that murdered the McCarmack woman. She also sand that last Saturday afternoon Henderson met her in the hall and made particular inquiries about the room in which the McCormack woman lived. Mrs. Miller told him he would have to ask the landlord; that she did not know anything about the apartments.

Mrs. Susan Smothers, a rather good looking and well dressed colored woman, was next called. She is an eminently respectable person, but the murderer made a ridiculuos attempt to reflect on her character. Mrs. Smothers, vexed by this rude questioning, turned on him with a few words and Henderson was glad to drop the matter then and there.

Timothy O'Flaherty identified Henderson as the man he saw immediately after the murder.

Chief Troyer testified as to the confession Henderson made shortly after his arrest.

The negro questioned the chief, something on the following order:

"Officer, what was my condition when I was turned over to you?"

"You seemed a little chilly."

"Did I talk all right?"

"Yes, you did."

"Now, didn't I act a little crazy? Didn't some person say I acted crazy."

"I didn't hear any person say you were."

William Wall, of Ashland, was then called. He is the man that traced Henderson from the house where he committed the murder to the place where Officer Gillon arrested him.

Henderson accused Wall of trying to start a movement to lynch him, but this Mr. Wall denied.

The judge then announced that Henderson would be bound over to the grand jury, which meets in September.

SCANDAL

In Indiana State Prison Is Being Investigated.

Michigan City, Ind., June 27.—Officers of the Indiana state prison at Michigan City are investigating a scheme to bleed prisoners of money under pretense of securing paroles for them. Three or four persons at Michigan City and several at Indianapolis are under suspicion.

The method followed is for the schemer to call on relatives of convicts and tell them he has a friend on the parole board, but it is necessary to have a little cash. The relatives often furnish money, and in many instances the money has come from the prisoner, who has saved funds received from contractors for overwork.

One instance is cited where a prisoner gave up all he had saved for three years and never heard from the "influential persons" afterward. One contractor said that in a month he paid the men working for him nearly $400 for overtime, and $300 of it had been paid to persons outside the walls who pretended to have influence with members of the parole board in a position to secure a parole for the prisoner.

The prison authorities say they hope to make cases against a number of persons for obtaining money under false

AFFIRMED.

Supreme Court Sustains Decision In the Salverson Case.

St. Paul, June 27.—Justice Brown, of the supreme court today filed a decision affirming the conviction of B. K. Salverson, former cashier of the Citizens' bank, of Appleton, of grand larceny in the first degree.

The specific charge covered the misappropriation of $925 belonging to the bank. This, however, was only one of many defalcations charged against Salverson who, it is alleged, wrecked the bank. He was indicted on several counts and convicted on this one in the Swift county court. Stay of sentence was secured while an appeal was made to the supreme court. The appeal was based on several alleged errors in the rulings of the trial court, but on the chief ground that the jury had been released for four hours to attend Memorial day exercises and that one of the jurors became drunk. The attorneys for the defense did not complain of this or mention it until after the verdict had been rendered, when they made it the basis of an application for a new trial. The application was denied and an appeal was taken to the supreme court.

Justice Brown rules that if a party against whom a verdict is rendered is instrumental in causing the intoxication of a juror or being aware of the fact before the verdict is rendered, fails to bring it to the attention of the court he waives the misconduct.

Whether a new trial should be granted for misconduct of this character rests with the sound discretion of the trial court, and the determination thereof is not reviewable except in a clear case of abuse of discretion. No reversible error is found in the rulings of the trial court.

Salverson will now go before the trial court for sentence.

AMUSEMENTS.

GARRICK'S IMMORTAL COMEDY.

The announcement that Miss Kathryn Kidder will appear in this city at the Lyceum on Monday, June 30, in her revival of David Garrick's immortal comedy "The Country Girl" has already awakened much interest among all classes to theater goers. "The Country Girl" is one of the oldest of English comedies and one of the best as well. It has been accepted as a pattern of stage workmanship and the richness of its humor has never been excelled. The role of Peggy the heroine of the play should receive excellent teratment in the hands of Miss Kidder whose remarkable talent as a comedienne was so well displayed in "Madame Sans Gene." She is well remembered in this city. An especially strong company has been engaged to support Miss Kidder in this revival. Some of the principals are Norman Hackett, Robert V. Ferguson, Marion Ashworth, Seymour Stratton and T. C. O'Brien.

GROSSMAN ARRESTED.

New York, June 27.—Rudolph Grossman was arrested in this city today by detectives of New York and Paterson, who had been following him and who held a warrant charging him with riot. He was taken to the tombs police court and remanded to the tombs without bail for examination next Sunday morning. The prisoner said he was the editor of the Austro-Hungarian Gazette.

COL. WARE

"Enlisted" as Pension Commissioner to Avoid "Draft."

Washington, June 27.—Col. Ware, the newly appointed commissioner of pensions, is already telling his friends in confidence that he is not "stuck on his new job." He says he is required to listen to all kinds of heart-rending tales, and is confronted with schemes and questionable propositions from claimants, who assume a stand-and-deliver attitude in applying for pension allowances. Commissioner Ware dined with the president a few nights ago, and the president, it is said, asked the new commissioner how he liked his new position up to date.

"It is less tempting now than it was when I consented to take the place," he replied, "but I have hopes that it will become less disagreeable as I become better acquainted with the class of customers I have to deal with."

"That is a very encouraging way to look at it," said the president. "The chances are, however, that the longer you serve the more difficulties you will have to encounter."

It is said that the president's reply somewhat puzzled the commissioner, and the latter was confused as to whether it was an indirect request for his resignation. All doubt on that subject was removed a moment later when the president recalled an incident of the first interview they had, when the place was tendered to Col. Ware.

"You are in for it now, and you must stick it out," said the president. "You will remember," he added, "our previous conversation?"

On that occasion Col. Ware hesitated a long while before consenting to serve. He was on the verge of an emphatic declination. The president, who is filled with military zeal on all occasions, appealed to the soldierly instincts of Col. Ware in this way:

"Now, colonel," he said, "this is a problem which appeals directly to soldiers. You are a soldier. You served in the war. Did you enlist or were you drafted?"

"I enlisted," replied Col. Ware, somewhat indignantly at this implied doubt as to his loyalty and courage.

"Why, of course, you did. I am well aware of that fact. Now," continued the president, in his most persuasive manner, "your country again needs your service in the pension office, and the question now is, will you enlist or must you be drafted?"

"When you put it to me in that way," replied Col. Ware, "I cheerfully enlist."

THEY ARE KICKING

Railroads Not Entering Here Displeased With Northern Lines.

Claim That the Burlington Line Is Favored By Them.

Result May Be to Force Other Roads to Build.

Impromptu indignation meetings are being held by agents of railroads that solicit business in Duluth, though they have no direct entrance to the city, but a notable exception to this class is the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. And thereby hangs a tale.

The trouble is no more nor less than that the two Northern lines are finding it an easy matter to furnish cars for shipments to points on the Burlington road, but none for shipments consigned to points on other roads, on which routing they would presumably draw as large a proportional as they would from turning the business over to the Q.

The people that are on the outside declare that this is a direct result of the combination of the Q. and the two Northern lines—the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern—into the Northern Securities company.

"If our roads don't build into Duluth pretty soon," said one of a group of outsiders this morning, and the prophecy was acquiesced in by others present, "I guess we might as well stop soliciting business up here."

Though the general supposition has been that there has been no car stringency since early last winter, it appears it is not often when there is an overplus of cars for business consigned to other roads. The Milwaukee, Wisconsin Central, Chicago Great Western, Minneapolis & St. Louis and some other lines having termini in the Twin Cities or Ashland, so that a short haul connects them with this city, get much business here, and it is claimed that if the two Northern lines pursued the same liberal policy toward them that they do toward the Q., they would be able to get a great deal more business out of Duluth.

"How is that?" echoed one of the outsiders this morning. "Well, the two Northern lines always have plenty of Burlington cars, and they seldom have any or enough of other lines running south, southwest and east. It's a strange thing, but almost always true. No, I don't pretend to say that they always have Burlington cars to furnish, but they always manage to take care of that business. The Great Northern and Northern Pacific are said as a result of the Northern Securities company deal to freely furnish their own equipment if necessary to take care of freight consigned to points reached by the Q. They refuse to let their cars go off their own lines to other connections reaching the same territory. That's what we are kicking about. I don't say that this agreement goes beyond the mere equipment exchange agreement referred to, which is entered into as freely by the Burlington at the other end, so that it takes all the freight it can get in its own cars which is destined to points on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific, but declines to extend the same favor to other competing roads."

It is said that though the Northern Pacific has a close traffic alliance with the Milwaukee road which, before the Northern Securities alliance, resulted in the Northern Pacific throwing all possible business to that road, it now treats the Milwaukee about the same as other connections. In other words the Milwaukee's close agreement seems to give it no particular call on business originating on the Northern Pacific line.

"Well, I don't see the public gets any the worst of it," commented another railroad man this morning. "As a matter of fact the equipment-exchange arrangement between the Q. and the Northern lines at this time, when cars are scarce, is a positive benefit to the shipping public. It enables the latter to move commodities when serious delays, or possibly complete blockade might result for want of cars to pass the traffic along from the originating road to connecting lines. If that is the worst you have heard about the Northern Securities company it looks to me as if you are finding blessings instead of burdens."

Shippers who have been approached on the subect say that no particular inconvenience has been suffered as a result of the trouble complained of above. In fact, they declare that the Great Northern and Northern Pacific are able as a result to furnish cars for southern, western and eastern business, whereas they would be unable to get enough if this arrangement had not been made by the Hill roads. They also are inclined to think that the experience of the other roads may be a good thing in spurring them to build into Duluth.

WHEAT IS WEAKER

Market Firm After the Opening But Sags Off Later.

Showers In the Harvesting Country Caused Early Strength.

Shippers Sell Considerable Wheat In East ---Flax Is Quiet.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 27.—A fair degree of strength was exhibited in the wheat pit this morning, although an advance in prices during the early part of the session was almost wiped out before the noon hour. There were no English cables, the markets at Liverpool and London being closed, while Paris was irregular. Showers in the wheat harvesting country were largely responsible for the opening strength. Argentine shipments for the week showed a falling off, amounting to 240,000 bus against 736,000 bus last year.

The Duluth shippers worked some wheat for Eastern shipment today, mostly to Eastern millers. One firm placed 100,000 bus. Not much export business is done, the English market being closed. Three boats were worked to the continent today, however. Stocks of wheat at Duluth are estimated to decrease 400,000 bus this week.

Primary receipts were 525,000 bus last year, 485,000 bus. Shipments, 172,000 bus; last year, 551,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 258,000 bus.

The "new" oats in the Chicago market had a sharp bulge today selling 2½c above the closing price of yesterday, but settled back and closed 1¼@1¾c up. Corn closed ½c higher, but at one time was up 1¾c. Primary receipts of corn were 290,000 bus, last year, 273,000 bus. Shipments, 222,000 bus, last year, 130,000 bus. Clearances, 336,000 bus.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 260 cars, and at Chicago, 25, a total of 285 cars, against 318 last week and 288 last year.

Trading in wheat on the Duluth board was fairly active and the market slightly stronger. July opened ½c up at 72¼c, sold up to 73¼@73⅝c at 9:43, reacted to 73¼c at 10, continuing to 73⅝c at noon, and closing on sales at 73c, a decline of ⅛c. Chicago fell ¼c and Minneapolis ¼@⅜c.

Cash prices were unchanged at ½c over July for No. 1 northern, 1c under for No. 2 and 3c under for No. 3. Sales were 15,000 bus.

There was nothing doing in the flax market. Cash seed fell 5c, September advanced 5c, and October 5c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat: Cash—No. 1 hard, 69½c; No. 1 northern, 74c; No. 2 spring, 72c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 58½c; No. 1 northern, 75½c; July, 75c; September, 72c. Manitoba—No. 1 northern, cash, 75c; No. 2 northern, 75½c. Oats—Cash, 46c; September, 32½c. Rye—Cash, 56c; September, 53½c. Flax—Cash, $1.60; on track, $1.60; June, $1.60; September, $1.42; October, $1.37½; cash No. 1 northwestern, $1.75.

Cars inspected in: Wheat, 85; last year, 38; rye, 1; barley, 1; flax, 5.

Receipts—Wheat, 25,186 bus; rye, 628 bus; flax, 3106 bus. Shipments—Wheat, 12,900 bus; corn, 44,360 bus.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

A Fair Demand Started July Wheat Upward.

Chicago, June 27.—A showery weather map in the harvesting country inducing some short covering and a fair demand started July wheat unchanged to ¼c up at 73¼c to 73⅝c. There were no English cables and Paris was irregular. There seemed to be fear of the buying by the corn bulls yesterday and July sold to 75¾c. Receipts were fair, bringing a steady tone for July around 73⅝c. September sold early between 72¼c and 72½c. Local receipts were 25 cars, 4 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 290 cars, making a total for the three points of 295 against 318 last week and 288 a year ago. Argentine shipments were small at 240,000 bus against 736,000 bus last year.

Professional selling and liquidation later in the day took all the strength out of wheat and July closed weak, ¼c down at 73c and September easy a shade lower at 72⅝c.

Small receipts of corn, wet weather for growth and little contract making by private elevators induced a very good tone in July corn and held prices steady in September. There was still free selling of September by the professional who is supposed to be heavily short of July. July opened unchanged to ⅜c higher at 68⅝c to 69c and sold to 69½c, the top price of the option. September sold between 66⅜@67⅜c and 67¼c and steadied near the close. Receipts were 109 cars, 26 of contract grade. Private elevators turned out only 22 cars.

July corn was bought by shorts at 69½c, the record price of the crop. On this bulge September went to 67⅜c. Persistent selling of the later option, however, took off much of the gain. July closed firm, ½c up at 68⅞c and September ⅜c higher at 67@67⅜c.

Oats were exceedingly strong. The nearness of delivery day, with cash stuff selling as high as 53c and not a car of new oats arriving today pushed July oats up rapidly. Trade early was not excited, the influence of the bulge being simply the great scarcity of oats and the good cash demand. July opened ¾c to ⅞c up at 48¾c to 49⅜c and jumped to 49c. September held firmly around 33¾c.

Shorts were excited in oats as the session advanced and bid the price up to 47, a remarkable advance of 5c in two days. Profit taking brought a reaction to 45¾c but the close was strong, 1⅛@1¼c up at 45¾@46c.

Provisions were somewhat weaker early on a weak hog market and a dull trade. September pork opened 5c down at $18.50, sold at $18.57½ and dipped to its lowest price, September lard opened 2½@5c higher at $9.65 and sold back to $10.60@10.62½, and September ribs unchanged at $10.05 advanced a trifle and yielded again.

Close, wheat, June, 73½c; July, 73c; September, 72@72½c; December, 72¾c. Corn, June, 68⅝c; July, 68¾c; September, 61@61½c; December, 47½c; May, 42¾@43c. Oats, June, 45½c; July, 49c; new, 40¾@43c; September, 30½c; new, 34½c; December, 30c; new, 32¾@33c. Pork, June, $18.20; July, $18.20; September, $18.45; January, $16.60. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The market here continues rather dull. There was some strength early in sympathy with the advance in corn, but the advance was lost before the close. Snow's report is moderately bearish and the Modern Miller is neutral. Our own reports indicate that while there is nothing startlingly bearish in threshing reports, the yield is on the whole rather disappointing. The Southwest reports an increasing country movement and the cash demand is poor. The tendency of the weather continues unfavorable, but has not so far interfered with operations. The outlook seems dull.

Corn—While the receipts of corn, considering the premium and price, are disappointing to the bears, there is nothing else in the cash situation of interest. Prices are controlled by muscle, the market the past few days presents something of a puzzle. The surface appearances would indicate liberal selling of September corn by the Gates party and by other prominent local interests, while the market continues steadily advancing. It is not easy to locate the buying. The deferred futures keep strong. Weather continues wet and cold and the season rapidly becoming unfavorable for long as these conditions last we are inclined to think December corn and May corn will work higher.

Crookston, Minn.: Millions of grasshoppers are attacking grain in the Hill river district. McIntosh, state entomologist, is assisting farmers in combating the pest. Unplowed stubble is the cause of the trouble.

Broomhall: The visible supply of wheat in the chief ports of Argentine today is 81,000 bus; last week, 736,000 bus; last year, 2,100,000 bus. Corn today, 1,136,000 bus; last week, 1,176,000 bus; last year, 1,064,000 bus. The tone of the Argentine wheat market is firm, with a big demand for export. Arrivals from the interior are small and the quality is giving satisfaction. The corn market is teady with a moderate export demand. Arrivals from the interior are good and improving as regards condition.

• • •

Mooern Miller: Threshing returns from the winter wheat harvest show that most of the disappointing yields are in the Southwest, and the best returns are in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana, the weight of the soft winter wheat is less than last year, but the milling quality is excellent. A steady increase in the movement of wheat to market is looked for.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, June 27.—There was a fairly large trade in wheat today, but mostly all of a professional character. The market ruled firm early on unfavorable weather throughout the winter wheat belt. On the advance there was a good deal of realizing, which caused a reaction, also more or less selling on prospects of larger receipts in the Northwest. The market closed quiet. There were no cables from England on account of the holiday there. Paris market was lower on continued favorable weather. Cash demand was rather quiet and the seaboard reported very little demand there for export. Estimated receipts tomorrow, 35 cars.

There was a large and active trade in corn today and the market ruled the greater part of the session strong, but realizing on the advance caused reaction and the close was quiet. The principal trade in September was said to be for the account of the same parties as yesterday. The bull clique selling, while a prominent elevator firm were are principal buyers. Country movement was very light, but cash demand was quiet. The weather was not very favorable. These seems to be decidedly too much rain. The English markets were closed on account of holiday. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 205 cars.

There was an active trade in oats today and the shorts are liberal buyers and caused a sharp upturn, on the advance there was more or less realizing which caused a reaction. Country movement continues very light. Cash demand was very good, No. 3 whites selling on track at 53½@54c. There is too much rain and complaints are coming in. As we said before, the movement of new crop will be late. Receipts during the month of July likely to be light. The general situation continues strong with the demand exceeding supply. We still believe in higher prices. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 200 cars.

Provisions opened irregular, but generally lower on decline in hogs and liberal receipts everywhere. There was selling later of January product by packers and outsiders and all day there was plenty of stuff for sale, closing with material decline on the whole. Business was light and confined mostly to local traders. Outsiders seem to have bought to their limit and are again on the defensive. It is current gossip that there is considerably loosely held pork on the market that could be easily dislodged, and any determined raid would bring it out. Cash trade reported as fairly good, but we are getting hogs enough to meet the demand, also to accumulate stocks. Estimated receipts tomorrow, 18,000 hogs.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Lower Sales of Colorado Fuel and American Ice.

Dividend on Colorado Fuel Common Stock Was Passed.

A Sharp Demand For St. Paul For a Short Time.

New York, June 27.—Two thousand shares of Colorado Fuel sold at the opening at 86 to 87, compared with 89 last on account of the passing of the dividend and the American Ice stock showed sharp fractional losses on the same account. Otherwise the market was intensely dull and the changes very narrow. St. Paul and Missouri Pacific hardened a shade and Amalgamated declined a fraction.

Colorado Fuel was bought on the decline and rallied to 87½. Liquidation was renewed and it broke to 85, a loss of 4 points. Amalgamated Copper and Anaconda became heavy and lost a point, but other specialties were quiet except for the sickle stocks, the preferred dropping to 43. Railroad stocks ignored these special points of weakness and held firm, particularly St. Paul, which advanced over a point to 176¾. Business was on a small scale. Des Moines & Fort Dodge gained 1¾, while New York, Chicago & St. Louis preferred lost 2.

When the demand for St. Paul slackened the movement halted. Amalgamated declined to 63 and Anaconda lost ½ in all. Colorado Fuel, on the other hand, recovered to 86. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred rose 4 and Louisville, Cincinnati & St. Louis, 2¾. Westinghouse Electric declined ¾ and rallied a point. Bonds were irregular.

There was a rise of 1⅜ in Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo and a decline of 1¼ in Colorado Fuel, on the other hand, recovered to 86. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred rose 4 and Louisville, Cincinnati & St. Louis, 2¾. Westinghouse Electric declined ¾ and rallied a point. Bonds were irregular.

There was a rise of over 2 points in Illinois Central. Missouri Pacific crossed 100 and Detroit Gas gained a point. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred reacted 1½ and Ice preferred fell an extreme 3⅝. Prices eased off in the late dealings, Illinois Central reacting about a point. The close was dull and heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Indications point very strongly to an active buoyant market and that very soon. Nor is it likely that we will get reactions worthy of the name for some days at least. The trend should be distinctly upward until July 3. People who have followed my advice about buying rails must have some very fair profits. I expect to see St. Paul above 190 before the summer. I am in favor of buying on weak spots today. If the market should go up all day today would take profits tomorrow morning.

• • •

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.—While the market views expressed tonight are anything but pessimistic and while stocks are stronger than some of the most sanguine observers expected, there is a feeling that the attempt to bring about general activity and advancing prices will prove unsuccessful, and that on any further rally sales for a turn would be in order. This opinion is held by people who are very bullish for the pull but who take the position that a temporary sharp setback in values is pretty sure to be recodred between now and the end of the month. They contend that crop uncertainties will increase in July, that the supply of loanable funds will be decreased, that railroad statements will then begin to reflect the heavy losses the roads have suffered by the strike and that good exports are likely to prove large enough within the coming month to exert a depressing influence on sentiment. To none of these things, however, do the big men who are putting up St. Paul and Missouri Pacific pay any attention. The Moore interest continues to absorb St. Paul and there is a report in circulation tonight that Clark, Dodge & Co. have bought this week for these western capitalists some 50,000 shares of stock. A prominent broker being asked tonight if the Rockefellers were the big buyers of St. Paul, replied: "They are either buying it or losing control of it." The latter belief is there is a well founded suspicion that control is being lost to the Western capitalists who are said to have a most comprehensive plan for the unification of St. Paul and Chicago & Northwestern interests. It is estimated the Rockefellers own about 140,000 out of the 552,000 of the common stock of the St. Paul company. With this and the aid of the proxies they have been able till now to dominate the management of the road. But since J. P. Morgan offered more than a year ago $200 a share for St. Paul to complete his Northern Pacific merger, St. Paul stock has been steadily accumulated by monied men of the West.

• • •

Dow Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.—At the meeting of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company directors yesterday the dividend on the common stock was passed and declared 4 per cent on the preferred. Chairman Osgood gave as the cause of this delays in completing improvements. He denied the report that he had sold any stock short for stock jobbing purposes and says he has not sold a share of stock in the last sixty days.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Little more activity in copper today than for some time past. General indication seems to be for higher prices throughout the general list in the near future and would advise the purchase of copper on any slight recessions.

• • •

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.—The reaction in Amalgamated caused coppers to be dull today at prices slightly below those of yesterday. In the metal market lake copper was offered at 12¾c and was made to look weak. We do not believe the metal market is as weak as it appears, but think lake copper will sell at 13c. Lawson put out a strong letter today advising the purchase of coppers. There is a good market for all the coppers of any intrinsic value. We look for a revival of interest and higher prices later.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 27.—The cotton market opened easy with prices 3 points higher to several points lower and it developed intense weakness under heavy selling of long cotton and som bear pressure. The break after the call forced August down to 8.22 and other options in proportion. While there was slight rally later the market continued to reflect weakness and scattering lines of long cotton continued to come on the market. The selling was active in all quarters today. The chief factor of depression consisted of rain reports from Texas. Sentiment was very bearish as a rule in professional circles and very little cotton was bought on the break for a turn.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 9¼; middling gulf, 9½; sales, 1027 bales. Close, cotton futures—June, 8.35; July, 8.55; August, 8.21; September, 7.89; October, 7.75; November, 7.40; December, January and February, 7.69; May, 7.71.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 27.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $286,056,467; gold, $90,577,575; silver, $4,331,949; United States notes, $10,805,183; treasury notes of 1890, $119,603; national bank notes, $10,259,450; total receipts this day, $1,985,506; total receipts this month, $43,514,069; total receipts this year, $557,241,786; total expenditures this day, $2,000,000; total expenditures this month, $42,250,000; total expenditures this year, $469,651,197; deposits in national banks, $127,289,534.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 27.—Close: Money steady, at 3@4 per cent, closed 3 per cent; prime mercantile paper, 4½@5 per cent; sterling exchange easier, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.87¾ for demand and $4.85@¾ for 60 days; posted rates, $4.86@¼ and $4.88@4.88½; commercial bills, $4.84@4.85; bar silver, 52¾c; Mexican dollars, 42½c. Government bonds weak; state bonds heavy; railroad bonds irregular.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

Proceedings of International Convention at Denver.

Denver, June 27.—The sessions today of the tenth International Sunday School convention began in Trinity M. E. church with praise and prayer service conducted by Rev. D. N. Beach, D. D., of Denver, and Rev. E. S. Lewis, D. D., of Columbus, Ohio.

Vice President A. B. McCrillis presided in the absence of President Hoke Smith. On motion Chairman McCrillis named committees on resolutions and treasurer's and auditor's report. A proposition to have the chairman of the executive committee selected by that committee and not as heretofore by the nominating committee caused much discussion. A standing vote on the resolution was taken and resulted in its passage overwhelmingly.

General Secretary Martin, of Toledo, read his report.

REPUBLICAN LEAGUE.

President and Other Officers Call Upon Roosevelt.

Washington, June 27.—President Roosevelt today had among his callers Isaac Miller Hamilton, president; William L. Rohrer, secretary, and James Sheridan, all of Chicago, and members of the National Republican League of the United States. They conferred with him briefly regarding the national convention of the league to be held this autumn at a place yet to be decided upon as well as regarding the work to be done in connection with the coming campaign. The president will see them again later in the day.

Although the convention will be held in the west some time in August, Philadelphia is making a strong bid to have it held there.

NEGROES ARE QUIET.

No Truth In Startling Rumors From Santiago.

Santiago, Cuba, June 27.—The reports circulated in the United States by a news agency of great agitation here among the negro element who were said to be demanding that the revolutionary army be paid and approving of Gen. Bandera's plan of taking to the woods, are incorrect. The city and the province of Santiago are absolutely quiet. The press of both parties advocate paying the soldiers, but there is little discussion of the matter.

YELLOW FEVER RAGES.

Laredo, Texas, June 27.—A Contzacoalcos, Mex., special says: The yellow fever epidemic which has been raging here since early spring shows no signs of abatement.

DE SAMSPER SUCCESSFUL.

Rome, June 27.—Mgr. Sanches De Samsper, the member of the pope's household who was sent to Mexico three months ago with instructions to endeavor to reestablish diplomatic relations between the republic and the vatican, reports that he has been successful.

TO CLOSE INSTITUTIONS.

Paris, June 27.—At a cabinet meeting held at the Elysee Palace this morning, President Loubet signed a decree closing the religious institutions which have not complied with the provisions of the law of associations. One hundred and thirty establishments are involved. Instructions on the subject were sent to the various prefectures this afternoon.

MOORE DIES.

Failed to Survive the Severing of His Spinal Cord.

John Moore died at St. Mary's hospital shortly before noon today.

He was accidentally shot through the spine near Hibbing, last Monday evening.

Mr. Moore is said to have been a man of the most robust health. After eating a hearty meal in Power & Simpson's camp, Monday, he stepped outside the door with several companions to enjoy a quiet smoke.

Moore sat on a bench close to the cabin. Half a mile away two men were practicing with a rifle. A stray ball struck Mr. Moore in the center of the back, completely severing the spinal cord. The bullet lodged in the spinal cavity.

The injured man was in the greatest of pain. The lower part of his body was paralyzed. He was brought to this city the day following the accident.

Mrs. Benedict, of Ishpeming, a sister of the unfortunate man, was with him when he died. No arrangements have been made for the funeral. The body is at Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms.

J. W. Nesbitt Learns of Collection For His Benefit.

J. W. Nesbitt, conductor on the Northern Pacific railway, who has been ill for several months, learned yesterday that certain persons had some time ago solicited subscriptions to a fund for his benefit. He has never received a cent from anyone since his illness and is not desirous of receiving any aid.

He wishes it known for the benefit of those who may have subscribed that their money has not gone where they intended that it should and that they evidently gave under false pretenses.

FIGURES ARE READY

Real and Personal Assessments of the City Are Complete.

Decrease on Lands and Increase on Personal Property.

Some Tall Lying as to the Ownership of Dogs.

The real and personal property assessment of the city of Duluth is now made.

The assessment on lands is reduced $1,444,083 from the last assessment.

The valuation of structures under the new assessment has been raised $750,-652.

These figures are as left by the city assessor and are subject to readjustment by the county and state boards of equalization.

The list of exempt property has grown during the past two years. In 1900 the real estate exemption was $2,-636,014, while this year it will be $2,-809,300.

In net totals the assessor's records show a decrease of $865,717 from the totals of 1900. The net total for real estate in that year was $22,737,462, while this year the net total is $21,-880,745.

It is a useless matter to attempt a prediction what the figures will be when the state board gets through with them. In 1900 the state board made a reduction of 10 per cent on all real estate in this city.

The total personal property assessment this year is $5,167,375, against $4,-599,623 for last year. These figures, however, do not show the exemption which every tax payer is entitled to.

The value of Duluth's goods and merchandise has increased over $400,-000 within the year. This year this item is assessed at $1,417,140, while a year ago it was $1,002,110.

Evidently some person did considerable lying to the personal property assessors. For instance, the assessors' books show but 284 dogs in the city, as compared with 502 of a year ago. The city clerk's books show that there were fully 2,000 dogs in the city that were licensed last season.

The assessment just completed shows that the city has 2,205 horses and mules valued in assessment fasion at $84,442. Last year there were 2,227 horses valued on the assessors' books at $79,442.

There are 2,120 bicycles, carriages, and other vehicles that the deputy assessors ran acrors. These are valued at $71,933.

There was a big increase in sewing machines in use in Duluth during the last year. There are 3,015, as against 2,088 for a year ago.

Pianos also seem to be on the increase—2,158 for the present year, as against 1,906 for a year ago.

DELIGHTED.

Frank F. McIver Pleased With the Growth of Duluth.

Frank F. McIver, of New York, formerly of Duluth, is visiting in the city today. Mr. McIver was the originator of the Duluth Dry Goods company, the first wholesale dry goods house at the head of the lakes, and was identified with the jobbing trade here for several years. He began the movement which resulted in the organization of the jobbers' union, which existed up to a couple of years ago. He is now associated with the Merchants' National bank in New York city, and looks after the bank's outside business in different parts of the country.

"This is my first visit to Duluth in six or seven years," said Mr. McIver this morning. "I am pleased at the growth and the general air of prosperity which the city has. Duluth is blooming. The growth of the jobbing trade especially is enormous. It seems simply marvellous to see such a house as the Marshall-Wells Hardware company in Duluth and doing such a great business. Fifth avenue west, too, has developed at a wonderful rate. There is no doubt as to Duluth's future.

Mr. McIver is an enthusiastic member of the Minnesota club in New York city. It now has 200 members, and he says will soon grow to from 300 to 500. Minnesotans in and out of New York belong to it. The club will give two affairs every winter, giving thirty days' notice of each. This will enable Minnesota people to time their Eastern visits so as to be able to attend the dinners and meet the Minnesota people in New York.

EXCURSION.

Omaha Road to Bring One In This Evening.

The Omaha road is scheduled to bring an excursion into Duluth late this evening. It is supposed the train will arrive about 9 a. m., though the general offices have been incomprehensively slow about furnishing any information for the benefit of people here who for various reasons feel an interest in the excursion.

It is said that such a heavy rain is falling in the territory drawn upon by the excursion train that the road would have been glad to declare it off altogether in the belief that not enough people would care to start under such disappointing conditions to make it a success. However, it was found that quite a bunch still insisted on coming along at some points and so the road carried out its original program.

The cheap rates are made from points on the Nebraska and Wisconsin and Minnesota divisions, which will make them apply to points as remote as just north and west of Omaha. With favorable weather, the train would probably have brought people from farther distant than any excursion that has yet been brought here.

The South Shore will carry a great lot of people to Detroit this evening on its cheap rates. General Agent Adson said this afternoon that an extra sleeper and an extra coach would be put on, and that the whole night train equipment would be taxed to its utmost.

"People are coming from as far distant as North Dakota to take advantage of these rates," said Mr. Adson. "However, we shall have about fifty people out of Duluth alone."

EXPLORING.

Lands Adjoining the Mueller Tract Are Being Prospected.

Explorations are going on on a large scale in the territory adjoining the Mueller tract on the Mesaba range. The Mueller tract is the property that is at stake in the celebrated case of that name now on trial in district court. The property consists of 160 acres located in town 58-19, which in a general way is near Buhl. Some iron men declare their doubt of the probability of a large deposit of iron on the Mueller property. Others declare that the surface indications on one forty in particular are exceptionally promising, and it is expected by this authority that a good find will be made on this piece.

The Mueller property is well hedged in with exploratory parties. The Oliver people are said to have two drills at work just north of the Mueller location, the Great Northern people, two to the northeast; another party, two to the northwest; C. A. Congdon, two on the west, and some unknown party is said to be drilling in section 14, just to the east of the Mueller land.

Several iron men who read an interview in yesterday's Herald on J. J. Hill's iron properties on the Mesaba range declare that the iron man quoted yesterday is a good guesser of proportions, even if as some intimate he may have gotten his quantities too large.

"He's a good guesser," said one well-posted iron man this morning, "whoever he is. I don't believe Mr. Hill has quite 300,000,000 tons of ore in sight on his lands, but I am certain that he controls one-third of the ore that has been shown up on the Mesaba range. The only thing that puzzles me is how the man that was quoted came to get his information or who he is."

Amendment of Articles of Association
—OF—

OLEAN LAND COMPANY.

It is hereby certified that at the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Olean Land Company held at the office of said company in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the second day of June, A. D. 1902, at which were present in person or represented by duly executed proxies, the holders of more than two-thirds of the capital stock of said company, it was duly and unanimously

Resolved as follows: "That article third and article seventh of the articles of incorporation of the Olean Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00), of which amount one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) having been heretofore paid in, the remainder thereof, to-wit: Fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) shall be paid in at not less than par and at such time or times and in such manner as the Board of Directors may require.

Seventh—The number and amount of shares in the capital stock of said corporation shall be two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each."

It is further certified, that at a regular meeting of the directors of said corporation, held at the office of said company in the City of Duluth, in the State of Minnesota on the second day of June, 1902, subsequent to the aforesaid action of the stockholders of said corporation, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, viz:

That article third and article seventh of the articles of incorporation of the Olean Land Company be amended so as to read as follows respectively:

Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00) of which amount one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) having been heretofore paid in, the remainder thereof, to-wit: fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) shall be paid in at not less than par and at such time or times and in such manner as the board of directors may require.

Seventh—The number and amount of shares in the capital stock of said corporation shall be two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each.

In witness whereof said Olean Land Company has caused these presents to be subscribed by its president and its secretary and has caused its corporate seal to be hereby affixed this second day of June, A. D. 1902.

IS GUILTY OF MURDER

Verdict In Third Trial of Jessie Morrison.

She Killed Mrs. Castle In Frightful Quarrel.

Eldorado, Kan., June 28.—Jessie Morrison, on trial here for the third time for the murder of Mrs. Olin Castle at her home in this city in June, 1900, was found guilty of murder in the second degree today. The jury was out twelve hours. The case may be appealed again.

The first trial resulted in a disagreement. At the second trial Miss Morrison was found guilty of manslaughter and given a five years' sentence. She spent but two months in prison, being released on bond on the day her case was taken up by the supreme court. She was granted a new trial last February.

Jessie Morrison and Clara Wiley Castle fought with a razor. Mrs. Castle was slashed in a horrible manner, gashes being cut in her arms and breast, while her windpipe was almost severed. Jessie Morrison was also cut about the arms and breast. The quarrel took place eight days after Mrs. Castle had been married to Olin Castle, with whom both women had been in love.

In a deathbed statement Mrs. Castle said that Miss Morrison had first attacked her, and the theory of the state has been that Miss Morrison, in a spirit of revenge, armed herself with a razor and went to Mrs. Castle's home intent on killing her.

The defense pleaded self-defense and Miss Morrison in the three times that she has gone over the details of the bloody fight has insisted that her antagonist called her into the house, accused her of writing to Castle and opened the fight. The Wileys, the Castles and the Morrisons are leading families in the community and Miss Morrison is the daughter of H. H. Morrison, formerly a circuit judge.

The present trial has been on for ten days. The case was given to the jury last night. They announced this morning that a verdict had been reached, and Miss Morrison, accompanied by her father and brother, Hayward, soon entered the courtroom. As the foreman finished reading the verdict Miss Morrison turned pale, threw her arms around her aged father's neck and hid her head on his shoulder and both wept bitterly. Later, in the cell, Miss Morrison refused to talk other than to say that she had not expected a conviction, adding: "The judge was against me from first to last."

Half a dozen ballots were taken. One stood for first degree murder, five for second degree murder, and one for third degree manslaughter.

The jury made no suggestion of punishment. The matter of appeal will be taken up early next week, when it is believed Miss Morrison will be sentenced.

A TRUST OR NOT A TRUST

President Instructs Attorney General Knox to Render an Opinion on the Combination Controlling Output of Anthracite Coal.

New York, June 28.—President Roosevelt has requested Attorney General Knox to submit an opinion, says a Washington dispatch to the World, as to whether the combination controlling the anthracite coal output constitutes a trust within the meaning of the Sherman anti-trust act, and the decision of the United States supreme court theron.

In making his request, the president gave Attorney General Knox the report recently prepared by Carroll D. Wright, commissioner of labor, after a careful investigation of the differences existing between the operators and miners, the facts forwarded by President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers' association, and all other data in his possession bearing on the subect. It will be the duty of Attorney General Knox to formulate an opinion for the president, making a definite declaration that the anthracite combination does or does not constitute a trust. His present instructions do not require him to go further and express an opinion as to the probability of successful prsecution under the Sherman anti-trust act.

The president will, it is believed, determine upon his subsequent line of actino after Attorney General Knox has rendered his opinion.

SWINDLERS SECURE VICTIMS

New York, June 28.—Twenty of the cleverest and most dangerous swindlers from America and the continent have been in London for the purpose of fleecing fashionable coronation visitors, cables the London correspondent of the Herald. Recently a group of five American sharpers entered a well-known West End restaurant, and one of them renewed acquaintance with a gentleman whom he thought he had met years ago. Later, they entered a card game in their apartments, in which the victim lost $5000. His supposed friend also lost heavily, but paid in checks, while the victim contributed cash. He notified the police, but the gang had fled. The police learned the entire party had separated into parties, one of which proceeded to Paris, where wealthy visitors were buncoed to the extent of $35,000.

IMMENSE DAMAGE BY WATER

Philadelphia, June 28.—A slight fire in the big upholstery mill of Stead & Miller, at Second and Cambria streets, today, resulted in $100,000 damage by water. As soon as the fire was discovered the automatic fire extinguishing apparatus was turned on, and before it could be stopped practically the entire stock was damaged.

The 300 girls employed by the firm became panic stricken, but were finally gotten out in safety.

QUARREL ENDS IN TRAGEDY

Chicago, June 28.—Armed with two revolvers, Charles W. Gale, an insurance and real estate dealer, made two ineffectual attempts to kill Albert McMullen, a barber, last night; then he locked himself in his office and used one of the revolvers on himself. He fell dead as the police battered their way through the barred entrance and reached his side. A quarrel about a woman was responsible for the tragedy, it is said.

A "QUIET" RUN ON A BANK

Buffalo, June 28.—As the result of a quiet run on the Empire State Savings bank yesterday, the officials of the institution have decided to require thirty days' notice from depositors wishing to withdraw funds. In a public statement the officers say the run was caused by false rumors, and declare the bank is solvent and there is no cause for alarm.

ONE CELEBRATION CAME OFF

New York, June 28.—The Cunard liner Lucania, which arrived early today from Liverpool and Queenstown, held festivities on June 26 to celebrate the crowning of King Edward, not knowing of his illness. In the forenoon much merriment was indulged in all quarters of the ship. At noon the ship's crew were mustered, a salute of twenty-one guns was fired and all united in singing "God Save the King." Games, races and athletic competitions filled up the afternoon entertainment. In a tug of war between the teams representing England and America, America won. In the evening the usual concert was held. The next day, June 27, at 9 o'clock in the morning, the Lucania got in communication by wireless telegraphy with the French liner La Savoie from New York for Havre, and learned of the king's illness.

DEWEY STANDS PAT

Defends His Actions at Manila and Makes No Excuses to the Committee.

Washington, June 28.—The third day's testimony given by Admiral Dewey before the senate committee on the Philippines began with a reference to the statement made by the admiral at the first day's proceedings concerning the proffer made by the Spanish governor general to surrender to him. Senator Carmack called attention to the fact that the press reports made it appear tha the had said that during the next twenty-four hours after the destruction of the Spanish fleet on May 1 there had been several proffers of surrender on the part of the governor. The admiral replied that he had said that between May 1 and Aug. 13 the governor general had sent word to him more than once that he would be pleased to surrender to the navy. The first proffer, he said, was made in May, through the English consul, and subsequent proffers were made through the Belgian consul. At the time the admiral admitted Aguinaldo had begun operations around Manila, and was working towards the city.

Taking up the thread of the investigation where it was dropped yesterday, Senator Carmack asked the witness if all the trouble in the Philippines had been due to Aguinaldo?

"I won't say that," the admiral relied, "but," he continued, "I will repeat that if we had had 5000 troops at Manila on May 1 the city could have been taken possession of, and we would have had at least for the time no trouble with the natives. They were our friends then."

In reply to other questions put by Senator Carmack, concerning Aguinaldo, the admiral said:

"I think you are making too much of Aguinaldo. He was a mere figurehead, and was surrounded by stronger men than himself. Mabini was one of these ,and Gen. Luna, whom he killed, was another."

Replying to another question, the admiral said it was the general report throughout the east that in 1897 Aguinaldo had betrayed his people to the Spanish for money.

Nor did he remember that this report had been denied by American officers in the Philippines. Among other officers quoted in this connection was Gen. Green, and the admiral called attention to the fact that Gen. Green had not given his authority. "If," he said, "Agoncillo told him I don't think the authority was good."

"Why do you say that Aguinaldo took the lion's share of the property gathered by the insurgents?"

"Because he was living at Malolos like a prince. He had nothing when he landed at Manila, and he could have procured the means for this ostentation in no other way. He began immediately after arrival to take every dollar in sight. It may be ungrateful in me to state the fact, but it is true that he sent cattle to me—herds of them—for the ships. The stock was taken from the Philippine people."

"Was any statement made of this circumstance at the time?"

"No; that is war, as you know."

Continuing his reply to this question, the admiral said the Philippine army was then only a mob and without organization, and had to be fed and clothed. He did as many have done—he made the country support him.

"Did you regard that proceeding as pillage and loot?"

"Well, we did not do that way. For instance, I took all the coal in sight, but I paid for it."

Senator Patterson—Do you refer to Aguinaldo taking property for the support of the army as loot and pillage?

Admiral Dewey—That is one part of it.

Senator Carmack—You did not object at that time?

Admiral Dewey—No, but he soon got beyond me.

A number of questions were asked in regard to statements made by Gens. Greene, Bell and others, but the witness asked to be excused from criticizing officers of the army, and the chair (Senator Beveridge) said that he was not required to answer any questions the replies to which would involve such criticism. Thereupon the admiral said he was "very glad," and Senator Carmack said he knew of no such rule, but he supposed he would have to submit. The admiral added that no opinions by others would change his own opinions of Aguinaldo.

Senator Carmack—Then is it a fact that you took a man to Manila to be a leader of the native people who had but recently betrayed those people for a bribe?

Admiral Dewey—I think that would have made no difference: the country was under a reign of terror.

"Then you wanted a man who could organize the natives?"

"No, I did not want anyone. Aguinaldo and his people were forced upon me by Consul Pratt and others."

"Did the consul and others have any power to force these people upon you?"

"Yes, by constant pressure. I did not want the Filippino refugees, because I did not believe that half a dozen of them would do any good in view of the report that thousands would rise up in insurrection upon our arrival at Manila. I thought they would play a very small part."

"Then you placed the country at the mercy of a man who would plunder and rob notwithstanding you had no need of his services?"

This question the admiral declined to answer and Senator Patterson took the witness, asking if Aguinaldo had ever talked to him on the basis of selling out to the Americans. The admiral replied in the negative, and Mr. Patterson then asked if the Filipino leader had ever asked him for money. The reply was that Aguinaldo had asked him to exchange gold for Mexican dollars.

"I was pretty sure as to where he had gotten the dollars, as he had not brought them with him," said the admiral, "and I thought that the fact tha the wanted gold was pretty good indication that he was getting ready to leave. That was ne thing that made me think that the man was feathering his own nest, but it was only a suspicion."

Here the admiral again referred to Aguinaldo's style at Malolos, and Senator Patterson asked if that style had not served the purpose of inspiring the admiration of his followers and holding their allegiance. To this inquiry the witness replied that the style was probably more inspiring to them than to those from whom the property had been taken."

"Do you think that is proper testimony?" asked Mr. Patterson, and Chairman Beveridge interfered with a strong protest against inuendos against the admiral. He considered the question as discourteous.

Mr. Patterson, however, disclaimed any intention to be otherwise than respectful, and he continued his questions.

THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES

Who Would Be King and Queen of Great Britain If King Edward Died.

GENERAL REJOICING

In London Over Improvement of King Edward.

Some of Coronation Festivities Will Occur.

London, June 28.—The following bulletin was posted at Buckingham palace at 6 a. m.:

"The king passed a very comfortable day and his progress continues to be satisfactory."

Signed by Doctors Treves, Laking and Barlow.

London, June 28, 4:50 p. m.—The king was removed from his bed to a couch this afternoon, earlier than was expected, and was placed in a sitting position. He was feeling decidedly better.

London, June 28.—At 2:35 p. m. it was officially stated at Buckingham palace that the king's progress was fully maintained, that his majesty was quite comfortable, and that he had seen several members of the royal family during the day.

London, June 28, 10:53 a. m.—At 10:45 oclock this morning the following official bulletin was issued by the physicians from Buckingham palace on the condition of King Edward:

"The king had a good night and his improved condition is maintained. We are happy that we are able to state that we consider his majesty to be now out of immediate danger and the general condition is satisfactory.

"The operation wound, however, still needs constant attention and such concern as attaches to his majesty's condition is connected with the wound.

"Under the most favorable conditions his majesty's recovery must, of necessity, be protracted. The 2 p. m. bulletin will be discontinued."

"The king is now out of immediate danger."

This announcement spread quickly throughout the metropolis and caused rejoicing. The verdict upon which the nation had so anxiously waited caused a longer consultation than usual. Lord Lister, Sir Frederick Treves and the other doctors discussed the patient's condition for nearly an hour before they committed themselves to the important pronouncement. It was read at Buckingham palace by only a small crowd, the public being practically assured by yesterday evening's reports that everything was well. Yet to use the words of the Westminster Gazette, the bulletin was "full of intense relief." The underlying suspicion that the doctors might fear more than they wrote, the sensational rumors of his majesty's death, which continued even so late yesterday, and the lack of definite unofficial news, all combined to create intense nervousness. Such hopeful statements as the Associated Press had been able to make were not available to the British public, who, however, weer spared the sensational reports, now so palpably absurd, which were cabled to America.

The reference to the wound in this morning's bulletin, as authoritatively set forth, can be regarded without any disquietude. By June 30 the doctors are expected to announce that all danger of any complications has passed.

The king was very cheerful this morning, after four or five hours' sleep, and his temperature was normal. On Sunday his majesty will probably be transferred from his bed to a couch, where he will be able to recline. He is already able to slightly raise himself by the aid of a pulley. When he first made an attempt to do so the queen adjusted the pillows so as to form a back rest, and with a sigh of intense relief the king exclaimed:

"Ah, that is better."

The Lancet in its comments today says: "No immediate septic absorption has taken place, as shown by the complete absence of disquieting symptoms. We hope that rumor is ceasing to be busy with the origin and pathology of his majesty's illness, since the very plain statement of facts in the case which we were able to publish June 25, and since the absolute accuracy of the bulletins has been justified."

In view of the king's rapid recovery it is small wonder that the group of members of the royal family which gathered at Victoria station this morning were happy and cheerful. The prince of Wales wa sthere to bid farewell to his cousin, Prince Henry of Prussia, and to the Crown Prince Louis of Portugal and others who were leaving London, including the grand duke of Mecklenburg-Schwerin, Frederick Francis and the Egyptian and Moorish envoys. The chief of staff of the last named said to a reporter:

"I am smitten to death with sorrow for King Edward. England is a great country, but I'm glad to be going back to civilization."

A week which has witnessed emotions of such conflicting and intense character as to be without parallel in the nation's history is ending as it began, in rejoicing. Englishmen themselves can scarcely realize that in the brief space of five days the country has gone through the most acute stages of jubilation, fear, doubt and hope. Now they are all talking of the festivities, many of which will take place as planned.

The Crystal palace, July 2, will be the scene of the brilliant hosuital ball, in which so many Americans are taking part. On July 4 the India office will be transformed with Oriental decorations, plants and flowers for the Atlantic reception, when the Prince of Wales is expected to welcome the visitors, and London's poor are eagerly looking forward to their free coronation dinner.

Among the disappointed stand owners and other sections of the public, there is a strong desire to have a war parade with Lord Kitchener as the central figure. Such an arrangement would doubtless attract many thousands to London. The metropolis and the country are quite ready to go wild over Kitchener, but he is likely to endeavor to dodge any public shows. Failing Kitchener, the stand proprietors have to rely on the king's first public reappearance, which is likely to be a drive through the streets to the national thanksgiving service. That, however, must be some time hence, as a man in his 61st year, in spite of his wonderfully quick recovery from the immediate results of the operation, will probably have to submit to a lengthy convalescence.

What at first sight was one of the most pathetic features of the postponement of the coronation with the universal financial embarrassment on every hand, was the utter demoralization of the street fakirs, who had been counting for months on a rich harvest. In portions of the Fleet, Strand and other sections were street urchins apparently weeping over trays of cheap medals, pins and other out-of-date and inappropriate souvenirs. Their wailing pleas were almost always aimed at well dressed pedestrians. "Only a penny; stuck wif me medals;" "Please buy something."

These appeals frequently succeeded. A noticeable fact, however, was that these "tears" and "grief" among the sharp street arabs only seem to have developed today. The symptoms spread rapidly. Among scores of clever little plagarists in other walks of life the same keen disappointment was visible.

Had the coronation occurred American women would have constituted one of the most brilliant features. The duchess of Marlborough had a new coronet, even more magnificent than the big pearl typed tiara she had hitherto worn at court. Her unworn acquisition rivalled that of the duchess of Portland, in which the great Portland, itself worth $12,000, has been reset. Mrs. Arthur Paget, who would have had a seat in the king's box at Westminster abbey, would have worn an emerald and diamond tiara, collar and pendant and brooches formerly belonging to her mother, Mrs. Paran Stevens. Mrs. Paget's dress was embroidered with diamonds and pearls.

Lady Abinger, who was a Miss Magruder, daughter of the late Commodore Magruder, U. S. N., and widow of the third Baron Abinger, had her peeress robes embroidered with gold, and besides her diamond coronet, would have worn a four-row pearl necklace, clasped with a huge sapphire and surrounded with diamonds, once the property of Marie Antoinette.

Cora, Lady Strafford (formerly Miss Samuel Colgate, of New York,) would certainly have made a sensation, as she had a very high diamond tiara, and instead of a necklace, would have had rubies and pearls, draped like an aguilette on her left shoulder.

Lady Dufferin (formerly Miss Florence Davis, of New York), intended to wear all the heirlooms of the Dufferin family, which she recently inherited.

Lady Grey Edgerton (who was Miss May Culyer, daughter of the late Maj. Wayne Culyer, U. S. A.), was going to dress in white, embroidered with gold lilies with diamond tiara, a diamond and pearl collar and two necklaces, one of rubies and diamonds and one all diamonds. Lady Deerhurst (step daughter of Charles Boyning, of San Francisco), was to wear beautiful black pearls, a diamond necklace and a diamond tiara.

DEPEW HAS DOUBTS

As to the Recovery of King Edward.

New York, June 28.—Senator Depew, who has followed the history of King Edward's case very carefully, does not entertain the most optimistic view of the outcome, cables the London correspondent of the Herald.

"If you will notice the bulletins that have been issued," said the senator, "you will see that they have all been worded with the utmost care. To anyone reading between the lines, it is apparent that those in charge of the case are not at all sanguine as to the king's recovery. This convinces me that the royal patient's condition is far more serious than people in general appreciate."

IMPERIAL CONFERENCE

Looming Up as Remnant of Coronation Fetes.

New York, June 28.—While King Edward's health remains the paramount subject of conversation, the imperial conference is looming up as a remnant of the coronation fetes, cables the London correspondent of the Tribune. The colonial statesmen are discussing among themselves the work of the conference and are not disposed to commit themselves to any premature statements of policy. Neither Premier Laurier nor Mr. Paterson nor Mr. Ross nor any other influential Canadian minister, will allow himself to be drawn into an interview. They frankly assert that they are looking over the ground and are unprepared to discuss the probable results of the conference. An impression prevails that the colonial statesmen will avoid putting themselves in an attitude of coming before the United Kingdom and asking for concessions or privileges at the expense of the British taxpayer. They, it is argued, will consider it unworthy the dignity of self-governing commonwealths to appeal for tariff preferences when the British government in order to comply with their demands, will be compelled to raise the cost of living in the United Kingdom. What is more likely is a general agreement among the Canadian, Australian, New Zealand and South African statesmen attending the conference to confine their tariff discussion to existing fiscal arrangements with a view to relaxation of the present system. As ong as Sir Michael Hicks-Beach is chancellor of the exchequer an imperial zollverein is believed to be impracticable, and there is no evidence that any influential representative of Canada or Australia, favors it.

CLERKS WIN OUT

Injunction Against Patroling Van Guard Store Is Dissolved.

Can Use Peaceable Means to Prevent Trading There.

Judge Dibell Discusses Right of Union Organizations.

Judge Dibell of the district court holds that the Retail Clerks' union of this city has a right to patrol the streets in front of the Van Guard clothing store, and seek by argument and peaceable means to have the public and prospective customers trade at other and union stores.

The court filed an order this morning in the case of I. Lieberman of the Van Guard Clothing company, against the Retail Clerks' union, discharging the order to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be issued against the defendants to keep them from patrolling the streets in front of and in the vicinity of the plaintiff's store and persuading prospective customers to go elsewhere. The temporary injunction enjoining the defendants, as prayed in the plaintiff's complaint, which came on for a hearing June 7.

In making the order, the court says the order to show cause is discharged without prejudice to the right of the plaintiff to make another application for a temporary injunction, if he should be so advised. The court appends a memorandum to the order in which it says the facts on which the application rests are substantially as follows:

The plaintiff owns a general clothing store at 407 West Michigan street, and does not observe union hours, but keeps the store open in the evening as late as he sees fit. About May 10, the plaintiff entered into an agreement with the Retail Clerks' union to employ union clerks and observe union hours, including the six recognized holidays. There has been no wage controversy or trouble between the plaintiff and his clerks. The court says that to make the early closing movement permanently effective, it is necessary that substantially all the competing merchants abide by it, otherwise one violation causes a monopoly on the evening trade.

Furthermore, says the memorandus, after making the agreement with the union, the plaintiff declined to abide by it and it probably matters not whether the reasons assigned by him were valid. The officers of the union had a conference with him and on his refusal to treat with them, they stated that they would advertise his place as a non-union store, and that an effort would be made to boycott him. In the fulfillment of this promise they caused the street in front of the plaintiff's store to be patrolled by men who gave out to passers-by and prospective customers cards, and urged them to trade elsewhere. One side of the card was an appeal to the public to aid union labor by patronizing union stores and characterized the plaintiff's place of business as a "scab" store, asking people not to patronize it. The reverse side of the card contained a directory of the union stores of the city. The court noted that the card was couched in moderate and unobjectionable language with the possible exception of the word "scab," which might have offended the ears of union sympathizers as much as it aggravated the plaintiff.

The court finds that the men patrolling the streets in front of the plaintiff's store did not use force, threats or intimidation of any kind, and that, in the only instance when there was any violence displayed, it was brought on by the wrong doing of an employe of the store, who was fined in municipal court.

The plaintiff, said the court, has a constitutional right to conduct his business as he pleases, providing he does it in a lawful way, and may hire such men as he pleases, whether union or non-union, has a right to refuse to treat with any union, and may keep his store open as early or late as he chooses. If there are any invasions of these rights he will be afforded protection and redress by the law.

But, says the court, the plaintiff has no right to complain if those in sympathy with the early closing movement refuse to trade with him, nor if arguments are made to the public either through the press or through the medium of public meetings that an early closing movement is conducive to the welfare of a considerable portion of the community and that early closing houses should be patronized.

Further, the court said that upon the motion for a temporary injunction, the general scope of the controversy was suggested by the following two questions:

1. Should an injunction issue merely because the defendants patrol the street in front of the plaintiff's store?

2. Should an injunction issue prohibiting the distribution of cards such as the defendants used, and forbidding the use of persuasion and arguments in favor of patronizing union stores and against patronizing the plaintiff's store, all being done in a peaceable manner?

The court held that the cases answered the first question in the negative—that the patrolling of streets is not in itself unlawful. It is true that the courts have repeatedly, and justly enjoined patrolling, but it has been in cases where it created a private nuisance or prevented ingress and egress to the store or was attended by acts of violence or by threats and intimidation, but that nothing of the nature is suggested in this case.

The court expressed little hesitancy in answering the second question in the negative. The law recognizes the legality of the labor organizations, the constitution gives every person the right of free speech and in some form and to some extent the defendants have a right to make themselves heard.

The law, said the court, also recognizes such a thing as an unlawful conspiracy to injure one in his property rights and a combination so doing cannot hide behind a claim of free speech. The union has at all times the right to argue for union stores and seek to induce the public to trade exclusively at union stores, but it must at the same time recognize the right of others to conduct their business as they choose. The court expressed a doubt whether under the peculiar circumstances of this case, the union could be charged with an unlawful conspiracy to destroy the plaintiff's business, no overt act of violence or of intimidation being shown.

In closing the court again referred to the matter of patrolling and emphasized the position that the order filed today would not prejudice the plaintiff's right in case it became a private nuisance to apply for protection, and no court of equity would refuse to hear his grievance or hesitate to protect him against unlawful invasion.

THE CAUSES.

Diseases That Brought Deaths In Month of May.

The health department report just issued shows that during the month of May there were seventy-five deaths in Duluth and 100 births.

Twelve of those dying were non-residents and seven were stillbirths, so that only fifty-six deaths are taken into consideration in estimates of the Duluth death rate.

Thirty of those that died were born in Duluth. Eighteen were from other parts of the United States and thirty-two were foreign born. The nativity of two was unknown.

Forty-two of the deaths were males and thirty-three females. Twenty-four were married; forty-three single and eight widowed. The following causes of death are given:

Accidents, 1; acute bronchitis, 3; acute alcoholism, 2; acute gastritis, 1; anaemia, 1; apoplexy, 3; Bright's disease, 2; cerebal apoplexy, 2; carcinoma of liver, 1; cardiac paralysis, 1; cirrhosis of liver, 2; cerebal meningitis, 1; cardiac insufficiency, 1; capillary bronchitis, 1; congestion of lungs, 1; consumption, 8; convulsions, 2; diabetis millitis, 1; diphtheria, 1; embolus, 1; enteritis (scrofula), 1; fatty degeneration of heart, 1; hemorrhage, 1; heart failure (la grippe), 1; heart disease, 1; inanition, 3; meningitis, 2; marasmus, 1; mitral insufficiency, 1; Nephritis, 1; old age, 2; organic heart disease, 1; pneumonia, 1; payemia preperal fever, 1; scarlet fever, 2; septumicia erysipelas, 1; syphilitic abcess, 1; septic meningitis, 1; tuberculosis, 4; tubercular meningitis, 1; tubercular peritonitis, 1; tuberculosis (hereditory), 1; typhoid fever, 1; uraemia, 1.

OMAHA EXCURSION.

Sioux City and Nebraska People Arrive Here.

The excursion train from Sioux City and Nebraska pulled in the Omaha depot ten cars strong at 11:30 last night, with the remnants of the original starters on board—about two hundred all told. Three carloads were left behind at St. Paul and about as many more got off at West Superior, fearing, it is said, the alleged crowded condition of the Duluth hotels.

Most of these latter people came over here during the day. One cause of the smallness of this usually crowded excursion was the inclement weather that prevailed at the starting points, and when St. Paul was reached, in fine cool weather, many of the excursionists decided to leave well enough alone and stop off there. All those arriving here who wished for hotel accommodation easily secured it, and within two hours not a tourist was to be seen on the streets. Today the tally-ho coaches make trips around the boulevard and the various excursion boats were moderately patronized. The excursionists leave for home tonight.

IRON COMING.

Much of That For Aerial Bridge Has Been Shipped.

City Engineer Patton has received word from the American Bridge company that much of the structural steel to be used in the aerial ferry has been shipped to Duluth.

The steel was made in Pennsylvania and Chicago and some of it will be made in Minneapolis. Mr. Patton has been urging the company to get to work on the Duluth bridge as soon as possible and the American managers distributed the work among the various plants in order to have the work done as quickly as possible.

PARKS INSPECTED.

City Officials View Lester and Fairmont Parks.

Lester and Fairmount parks were inspected yesterday afternoon by a party of city officers.

As a result of this tour of inspection, Mayor Hugo says that Fairmount park at West Duluth, acquired by the city last year, promises to be one of the most famous beauty spots in the entire system.

Every person in the party expressed surprise at the beauty of the improvements in Lester Park.

Those making the trip were: Mayor Hugo, Bishop McGolrick, B. Silberstein, L. Mendenhall and Secretary Heim, of the board of park commissioners; Charles Wilson, C. H. Martz and W. W. Butchart, of the board of public works; City Clerk Cheadle and City Comptroller McCormick.

Anxious For Bodies.

Scarcely a day passes but inquiry is made at the city hall as to the recovery of bodies of the men drowned on the steamer Wilson three weeks ago.

Letters are received from relatives in all parts of the country urging the city officers to send without delay or regard to expense the latest news regarding the work of recovery, but so far the city officers have not been able to give those inquiring any consoling information.

DULUTH'S FINEST

C. A. Congdon's New Residence Will Easily Deserve That Name.

Of Italian Renaissance Style and Built of Stone.

Will Front On Fifteenth Avenue East---Plans Being Prepared.

Plans for a magnificent residence to be erected by Chester A. Congdon, of this city, are in the hands of contractors for figures. It is to be the most beautiful and most costly home in Duluth, in fact it will compare favorably with any of the very handsome homes of the Northwest.

Mr. Congdon owns 100 feet of ground on East Superior street at the corner of Fifteenth avenue east, and the same amount on First street at the junction with that avenue. It is upon this 100 feet of ground, running from Superior to First street, that this elegant home will be built.

The house will face on the avenue. It will be of the Italian Renaissance style, built of stone, with tile roof, and two stories high, with basement and attic finished off into rooms, making, in fact, four floors. The stone of which it will be built has not been definitely decided upon, but it is practically certain that it will be either Bedford, Ohio, or Portage Entry stone. The former is a gray stone, the same as that in the federal building, while the latter is on the reddish order, the same as that in the Lyceum, Board of Trade, and Wolvin buildings.

The main body of the house extending from wall to wall will have a width of 96 feet and 6 inches. Between the outer wall of the porches on each side there will be a distance of 117 feet and 6 inches, that, therefore, being the extreme length over all. The extreme depth will be about 75 feet.

The main entrance will be on the avenue and broad stone steps will lead to the vestibule. Beyond the vestibule will be a wide hall that leads to the main corridor, which runs lengthwise o fthe house. This corridor will be 14 feet wide and upwards of 30 feet long. The main stairway will lead up from one end.

At the left of the entrance hall is a reception room, and beyond that on the Superior street and avenue corner the living room, a handsome room 16 by 31 feet in size. In the rear of that, partly on the street, is the library, also a very large room, 16 by 28 feet.

At the right of the entrance hall will be the dining room, on the corner of the avenue. It is to be a large room, about 16x30 feet and will be well lighted. In the rear adjoining the library will be a den and next to that a sewing room.

The kitchen, servants' dining room, pantry, etc., will be on the northeast corner of the house. Above them will be three servants' rooms, servants' sitting room, bath, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Congdon's rooms will occupy Superior street side of the second floor, Mrs. Congdon's on the southwest corner and Mr. Congdon's on the southeast, with a handsome bath room between. Their three daughters will have rooms across the front of the house on the avenue. In the rear will be a guest's room, with bath, also linen closets, etc.

The third floor will have three bedrooms on the avenue side and Superior street corner, in the rear will be a work, and adjoining that and well isolated from the balance of the house, a sick rm.

In the basement on the avenue side will be a large work room and gymnasium, 14½ by 29 feet. In the rear will be a milk room, wine room, coal bins, boiler room, laundry, etc. In the center there will be a large corridor. On the Superior street corner will be the main cellar, and adjoining it the vegetable cellars, two in number.

It is impossible in an ordinary description to convey a proper idea of the completeness of the house, the admirable arrangement and the excellence of all its appointments.

The cost of the house is estimated at from $60,000 to $100,000, with the latter figure the nearest to the mark in the off-hand opinion of contractors. It was designed by Clarence H. Johnston, of Minneapolis.

TO MONDAY.

Mueller Case Adjourned to Next Week--- Special Term.

The Mueller case in district court was adjourned yesterday afternoon until Monday morning. The cross-examination of Professor Curtis has not yet been completed, but owing to a temporary illness of the witness, further proceedings were postponed until the first of the week.

In the special term of court this morning, in the case of Charles Elston et al. vs. A. M. Marshall et al., a decree was granted in answer to the petition of the plaintiffs, ordering that the premises be sold and the proceeds be divided among all parties, according to their rights. The property involved includes thirty-one lots in New York pier, Oneota, and of which a partition has been desired. The property constitutes one entire tract on the shore and under water, and is intended for a pier or for docks where vessels or cars can be unloaded. Its value is stated at $5000.

An order was granted vacating Rice's Point and plats thereof. The parties interested in the proceedings to vacate were the Great Eastern Elevator company, Pioneer Steel Elevator company, McCarthy Bros. company, Duluth Transfer Railway company, Alger, Smith & Co., Peavey-Duluth Terminal company, George C. Howe and Giles Gilbert, all parties acquiescing. The vacating order affects about seventy-five blocks at the lower end of Rice's Point. The vacation proceedings are understood to be another step toward the consummation of the Northern Pacific company's immense improvements on the Point.

An order to discharge the order to show cause why the city should not be garnished was issued in the case of F. B. Meyers against M. Fitzgerald.

WINNERS

Of Prizes at Firemen's Tournament at Cass Lake.

Cass Lake, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The eighth annual tournament of the Northern Minnesota firemen began in earnest yesterday afternoon. In the parade Grand Rapids received first prize for the largest number of men in line, and Bemidji received second. For the best appearing company Stephen was first and Grand Rapids second. The races for the association championship were run. In the hose race Bemidji again won the banner for their time and the first cash prize; Park Rapids, second; Stephen, third. Cass Lake had an accident. In the ladder climbing contest, Goodman, of Bemidji, and Bisari, of Park Rapids, divide first money. Gell, of Bemidji, second; Mandel, of Cass Lake, third. In the association combination hook and ladder and service test, Bemidji won first; Park Rapids, second; Cass Lake and Stephen divide third.

The business of the association was held last night, Park Rapids was designated as the place for holding the tournament in 1903. The following officers were elected: President, M. C. Schonenberger; first vice president, George Riddle, Grand Rapids; second vice president, P. V. Murray, East Grand Forks; treasurer, C. H. Martin, Bemidji. This forenoon the hook and ladder service test and the firemen's foot race and coupling contest took place.

LURING THE DEER.

Artificial Licks to Attrack Deer to Slaughter.

Madison, Wis., June 28.—Artificial deer licks are one species of device which the illegal deer hunters use to get deer during the closed season. They are made by putting out salt on the ground or in a hollow log, and then waiting nearby until the deer come, when they are easily shot. Deputy game wardens have destroyed about forty such deer licks in Vilas, Florence and Oneida counties within the past two weeks, by pouring kerosene over the salt.

Deputy Warden Hibbard is afraid of trouble with the Indians as soon as the big medicine dance now in progress on the Yellow river, in Taylor county, is over. He expects the Indians will go on a deer hunt as soon as the dance is over, and has written State Warden Overbeck asking if he will have to look after them alone. He has been promised assistance.

Oscar Lindberg, contractor on the new railroad being built in Vilas county, was arrested a day or two ago for having deer in his possession in the closed season. It seems he had been buying venison from the Indians and furnishing it to his employes in the boarding camp. He paid a fine of $25 and costs.

Deputy Wardens Knudson and Carpenter have seized about two miles of set lines on the Wolf river, near Gill's landing.

BEAR-PROOF WAGONS

Used For the Transportation of Fresh Meat.

Mammoth Hot Springs, Wyo., June 28.—Bands of elk have strayed from the Yellowstone Park and are roaming the hills around the little mining town of Jardine. Some time ago the people desired Maj. Pitcher, superintendent of the park, to have them driven back into the park, but they are to be left alone and will be protected by the people. Maj. Pitcher suggested to them that the elk were as well off where they weer, and that their absence from the park ranges would leave the winter range in better condition, as well as give the settlers an opportunity to obtain legitimate hunting during the open season. The logic of this was at once apparent, and the settlers will observe the law and protect the elk as the law directs.

Bears are more numerous in the park this year than ever before. Among the objects of interest the bear-proof meat-wagons, used to transport meat over the mountain roads to the park hotels, occasion no little comment. On first sight they are taken for government ammunition wagons, as they are built along bomb-proof lines. The wagon beds are about three feet high and covered with heavy sheet iron, iron gratings on the ends, to provide ventilation. The bears are so numerous that those wagns have become a necessity. An ordinary wagon-bed with a wooden box would be torn to pieces in a single night and the meat eaten or carried away. It is doubtful if even these bear-proof wagons would withstand the test if exposed too long, owing to the ingenuity and great strength of the animals.

While they are mischievous, they are really becoming quite tame, coming down to the garbage piles back of the hotels, in large numbers for their evening meal. Here the tourists can get near enough to take snap shots with their cameras. The bears do not encourage trespassers, however, and a low growl is generally warning enough to the too venturesome.

IT SNOWED.

Very Cold and Disagreeable Weather In Central Illinois.

Bloomington, Ill., June 28.—All weather records in Central Illinois are being broken this year. Rain has been falling steadily for twenty-four hours, approaching a cloud-burst in extent at times. At intervals last night snow fell, while the temperature dropped to 45 degrees. Excess of moisture this summer has given all crops a serious setback. The oats harvest is past due, but the heads are blighted by long-continued rain, and the crop will be seriously curtailed. The hay crop also will be light. Corn is hardly far enough advanced to determine the damage, but it will be affected somewhat.

Decatur, Ill., June 28.—Two inches of rain fell in the last twenty-four hours, causing serious damage to wheat and oats ready for harvest.

CABALISTIC SIGNS.

That Furnish Valuable Information to Tramps.

The hobo is not the ingenuous and gullible creature the cartoonists represent him. Existing knowledge of the genus, gleaned principally from the comic weeklies, stands in imperative need of revision, for the tramp of today is a progressive and enterprising individual, says the Philadelphia Times.

The spirit of the time has stirred even his sluggish brain. He hasn't organized a trust yet, but he and his fellows have perfected a system which enables them to pursue their work-hating profession with practical immunity from hard crusts, sogy pies, woodpiles, irate house-wives, dogs, shotguns and kindred evils.

In fact the tramp army is organized offense and defense. The method is simple. Every member leaves on the gate of each house he visits a hieroglyphic sign which records the kind of reception he met; thus the next arrival takes no chances, for he knows to a certainty whether or not it is safe to approach the portal.

The most serious libel of all the tramp jokes is the one which represents Weary Willie pursued by a wide-jawed bulldog. No up-to-date tramp would run such risk. The presence of the bulldog would have been brought to his notice long before he reached the vicinity of the kennel. The joke about the stony-hearted woman who offers to barter a section of pie for work done on the woodpile is also absurd. Somewhere near the woodpile there is sure to be a cabalistic mark, meaningless to the ordinary person, but clear as print to the tramp. He reads it and avoids the woodpile.

How the tramps came to adopt this method of lessening the hardships of their wandering lives it is impossible to tell. Question any member of the fraternity, and he will explain that it grew out of the stern necessity of a bulldog-goaded existence. Just as prisoners in a jail, where talking is forbidden, manage to communicate with each other in some strange and inexplicable manner, so the members of the Hobo society, in traversing the country, leave word of their successes or failures for the guidance of those who follow.

The first thing a tramp does on approaching a house whose occupants are not on his calling list is to stoop down at the gate and examine it closely for "signs." If he finds none he explores on his own account.

If the woman of the house listens sympathetically to the oft-told story of a blighted life, and hands out cold veal, pie and steaming coffee, the joyful wanderer straightway informs the next tramp by chalking or cutting a cross upon the fence or pickets of the gate.

Perchance the soft-hearted housewife considers a piece of ordinary fruit pie a sufficient donation. In this case the next visitor who is of the fraternity learns the likelihood of similar treatment by the sight of a triangular mark somewhere near the entrance to the grounds. A triangle, it is to be supposed, was adopted by the simple-minded hobo because a section of pie is usually cut in triangular shape.

Sometimes the rare blessing of a bed in an outbuilding, with plenty of warm straw and the assurance of freedom from annoyance by man or beast, falls to the lot of the happy hobo. It is then his duty to add an arrow to the signs on the wall, the barb of the arrow pointing in the direction of the lodging place.

When the next tramp limps up to the entrance he reads in the signs on the gate post that he has only to play his cards correctly to win a supper and a bed.

It is not intended to imply that there are no bulldogs, hay forks or shotguns to agitate the hobo. The comic papers have the abstract idea correctly pictured. They merely overlook the fact of the tramp's clever method of avoiding such pitfalls. It has puzzled many a householder to know why tramps walked haughtily past his abode after punishment had been dealt out to the casual caller, who in too impertinent a tone put in his plea for broken victuals.

The householder could not be expected to know that his residence was marked out as a place to be shunned by the wanderers as is a pesthouse. A Maltese cross is the sign. It may not be marked on the front door, but the sharp eyes of the hobo will find it and pass on without favoring the ene-my with a visit. If the Maltest cross be encircled, then the hungry hobo knows that, though his predecessor met with no very loving reception, there is hope for one with a smooth tongue or a more plausible story to tell. In other words, the bulldog will not be let loose except as a final means of ridding the place of the intruder. The Maltese cross with the circle around it is the tramps' "Beware of the dog."

The glaring mistake of begging at the house of a local judge was committed by one unfortunate hobo in northern New Jersey the other day. This misguided Individual must either have been a non-union hobo or a very careless man, for such a danger spot is always marked by a rough representation of a pair of handcuffs formed of two circles and a straight line. Any member of the Society of United Hoboes who ignores this warning deserves his fate.

There are many other signs to prevent the wayfarer repeating the mistakes of those who have preceded him. Th dangers of an inhospitable town, where the stoneyard awaits the professional tramp, are indicated by a rough representation of a hammer cut on a fence or tree by the roadside; roads where a "lift" is likely to be had are known by the sign of a wagon carved on the finger posts at the cross-corners; places of rendezvous in the woods are pointed out by marks shaped like the letter X, with a dagger beneath it pointing toward the spot where the camp is formed; an abandoned hut, where shelter may be had without the asking in wet or stormy weather, may frequently be found by the tramp who knows the signs. A circle with an arrow beneath it is his guide.

In neighborhoods where the members of the hobo order hold their sidewalk gatherings grizzled veterans may be seen any fine day instructing novices in the mystery of the signs. In the spring, when these novices take the road, they will find the way made easy by reason of the careful and methodical work of the colleagues who have gone before.

TANDEM TEAM OF LLAMAS.

The oddest outfit ever seen in San Francisco is driven by Miss Ella Burt. Seven South American llamas harnessed tandem to a gig, with a vivacious young woman handling the ribbons is a spectacle so extraordinary that nobody but a blind man could refrain from turning to start curiously at it until it trots out of sight, says the Minneapolis Times.

Fancy the responsibility of rounding a city corner with seven of these curious beasts in a string! It reminds one of that old-fashioned sport of school days called "crack the whip"—with a gig to "crack" instead of a breathless youngster at the tail of the line.

Miss Burt astonishes the boulevard in this unique manner, "just for fun and a new sensation." And it cannot be disputed that llama teams are something new under the sun, here and everywhere. It is a change from "shooting the Chutes" on a bicycle, which is Miss Burt's professional specialty. That, she says, is hard work, while driving llamas by the bunch is mere play.

The animals were brought here on the Hamburg-American steamer Nicaria, which goes from London to all the principal ports along the South American coast. Llamas are so very valuable on account of their wool that the Peruvian government has phohibited their exportation. But Capt. Brunst of the Nicaria was so anxious to obtain some fine specimens that he prevailed upon the governor of the province in which they grew to allow their departure.

Llamas on their native heath are not useful as wool producers only. They are great burden carriers, and for many years have been invaluable in transporting ore from the silver mines of the Andes.

The seven woolly wanderers from Peru possess the extremely thick coats that go into the manufacture of the finest blankets, textiles and woolly fabrics made. Their color varies from white to black. In disposition they are stubborn and tricky, but their virtues as burden bearers and wool producers more than repay for these faults.

Some naturalists claim that the llamas' remotest ancestors were the wild guanacos, now found only in domestication. But neither their doubtful pedigree nor their present exile affect the equanimity of these llamas. They chew their cud in quiet content at the Chutes, and trot obediently at Miss Burt's command.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

AN EXPLANATION OF THE CREDIT

System Recently Adopted By the Retail Grocers Association.

A great many people have the idea that after Aug. 1, 1902, the grocers are going to inaugurate a strictly cash system, but such is not the case.

The grocers have a good many credit customers that pay their bills promptly every month, and such customers will be extended credit the same as heretofore, but there are a good many people that only pay part of their account and leave a balance, and the next month there is another balance, and it goes on that way from month to month until the grocer has a large balance to carry, and when he asks the customer to pay the balance, and will not let him have any more groceries until the old balance is paid or some provision made to pay it, nine cases out of ten the customer will stop trading with the grocer and go to some other grocer and run up a balance there, and so on until half a dozen or more grocers have an account against the man that they cannot collect. These are the class of people that the credit system is for, and after Aug. 1 they will not be given credit in any grocery store in the city until all the old balances are paid in full or some satisfactory agreement made with the grocer whereby he can get his money.

The grocers are compelled to pay their bills every week, and failure to do so means that they cannot get any more supplies only for cash, so how can they meet their obligations and pay their bills promptly unless the customers that they extend credit to do the same?

There are a great many evils that exist among the grocers, and the greatest is the giving of too much credit, and they are going to try and remedy this as much as possible.

There is no line of commercial enterprises that work harder, or have longer hours than the grocer, and there is no line that receives so small a profit.

It is a well-known fact that a great many people will go to a grocer and order groceries and have them charged that will take their cash and go to the dry goods, boot and shoe, hardware, drug store or any other line of trade and pay cash for what they buy, and the grocer has to wait 30, 60 or 90 days and a good many times longer before he can get his money.

This is another evil that the association is trying to abolish.

Then there is another that will come up later on for adoption, and that is making people that buy their teas, coffees, spices, baking powder and extracts of the tea and coffee stores and pay cash, pay cash for their groceries.

The grocer can sell a much better tea or coffee for the same price than the tea and coffee store, because he does not give a premium, but gives the very best article to be had for the price, while the consumer is always paying for premiums at a tea and coffee store and therefore cannot get as good value for his money.

I make this explanation in justice to the Retail Grocers' association of the city because there are a great many people under the impression that they are a trust or combine to raise the prices on certain articles and rob the people, but such is not the case, for they only get a fair, living profit out of the business, and they are entitled to it.

Yours respectfully,
BERT HOLCOMB,
Secretary.

FUN WITH POLITICIAN.

Some one played a bold, bad trick on Senator George W. Plunkitt at the county court house, and Mr. Plunkitt, who is a big Tammany sachem, has, so to speak, donned his war paint for the particular sinner, whose identity as yet is unrevealed, says the New York Tribune.

A notice was served on Senator Plunkitt, purporting to be signed by Francis Mangin, clerk of the second municipal court, requiring him to vacate the lower corridor of the county court house, where for many years he has been in the habit of occupying one of the chairs on the bootblack's stand and of meeting his many friends, political and social. The notice was in the form of the ordinary dispossess serve by landlords upon tenants who are not longer wanted. It directed the senator either to give up possession of the corridor held by him, or show cause, on June 4, before Justice Bolte, why an order to eject him from the building should not be issued.

It is understood that the grounds on which teh notice was served are that it is illegal for any person to use any part of a public building for the transaction of private business. The proceeding is brought in the name of the city of New York.

"Heh," said the senator as a meek looking young man sidled up to him and placed a legal document in his hand, "wot's all this; wot's all this?" "Say," continued Mr. Plunkitt, getting red in the face as he began to read the notice, "this is an outrage. I've got a right to meet my friends in this corridor and talk with them if I want to. No one can stop me from doing that. Ain't I a good American citizen? Don't I keep the law? What the——. Oh, wot's the use of making any rumpus about it. I guess this is a kiddin' game. It's a midsummer joke, and a foolish one at that. Some guy has put the seal of the court on this dispossess notice, and now it looks like the real thing. Say, if they've used the seal of the court without warrant of law, they've committed a felony themselves. I'll soak 'em if they try to monkey with me. Returnable on June 4, eh? Will I be there? Well, I guess yes. I'll see Justice Bolte about this. I see it's from his court. I'd like to see him or any one else put me out of this corridor. I have a perfect right to stay in here as long as I wish, and I shall do so."

HONEST PEOPLE

Are Not Hard to Find In the City of Duluth.

Large Amounts of Money Recovered Through Herald Want Ads.

Two Cases Last Week--- Man Recovers His False Teeth.

FOUND—ON JUNE 25, A POCKETBOOK containing a sum of money. Loser may obtain same by giving an accurate description of lost property at No. 319 East Fourth street and paying expenses of advertising.

LOST—$5 IN BANK NOTES BETween Nineteenth street, Park Point, and Fifth avenue to Superior street, or on Superior street. Suitable reward to the finder if returned to Herald office.

These two Ads. appeared in the want columns of The Herald during the past week. Many people have seen and noticed them, wished for a moment that they might have been the fortunate finders and then went through the rest of the paper not thinking of the story or the lessons they might contain.

But they do contain a lesson and one that is well worth thinking about. These two Ads, six-line ones, it is true, have been the means of making four people happy and show that there is more honesty in Duluth than most people imagine. The first one appeared in The Herald last Tuesday afternoon. An honest man put it in and his son, an honest boy found the money. It represented a sum of more than $200 and was picked up on the street by the son of E. Olson, of 409 East Fourth street. Young Olson went with his find to his father and he in turn came down to The Herald office where he inserted the advertisement. The next day an Italian, who had not put his faith in banks, called at the house, proved his property, and received it. The man bought young Olson a suit of clothes and gave him $5 for his honesty.

The second Ad appeared last night for the first time, and this morning E. S. Radcliffe, the architect, walked into the business office of The Herald with a wad of bills amounting to $75. Mr. Radcliffe said that he had picked them up on the street, and wished to return them to the owner.

When one thinks of such sums of money being dropped where any passer-by could find them and keep them without the least fear of detection it restores his confidence in the human race.

In the advertising department of The Herald are seen more varied sides of life than one would imagine. Some of them are very amusing. Some time ago an advertisement was sent in by a man who had lost an expensive set of false teeth. A great many people who saw the notice thought it was a hoax of some sort, but two days later a young lad came into the office with a carefully done-up package. When it was opened it proved to be the lost teeth in excellent condition.

A young lady who is employed in one of the big down-town dry goods establishments recently lost $50 and had no idea of ever finding it again. She had lost it in a public place, and with but little hope of recovering it, placed an Ad. in The Herald, announcing the loss. Two days later she was in possession of the money again and left the office with a more cheerful face than she had hoped to wear for weeks to come.

Every day watches, pocketbooks, nose glasses and chatelaine bags, etc., are returned by people who have found them on the street, and it seems that Duluth honesty is very plentiful about the streets.

CAN COMPETE.

Duluth Young Woman May Be Superior Carnival's Queen.

Duluth young women will be eligible to the position of queen of the summer carnival that will be given by the West Superior Elks. The management of the carnival has placed ballot boxes in some of the Duluth stores, where the people may vote for their favorite candidate for the honor. The voting has been in progress for a few days in West Superior and great interest is being taken in outcome of the contest. Votes will be received at Boyce's drug store, the Great Eastern and Schiller's and Swain's cigar stores. It is likely that the first count will be made this evening and the result announced tomorrow.

The idea of the contest is to stimulate a rivalry between the young ladies of Duluth and West Superior and an interest created in both cities.

AN EXCITING GAME.

Freimuths and the Plumbers Will Meet Sunday.

The Freimuths will meet the Plumbers at the West Superior Driving park tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The game will be for $50 a side and promises to be an exciting one. The Plumbers seem to think that they will have an easy time of it, but Butler, the Freimuth south paw, is expected to keep them guessing. The Freimuth baseball aggregation will go to Tower on the Fourth for three games. The two teams will line up tomorrow afternoon as follows:

Freimuths.		Plumbers.
Butler	pitcher	Sturm
Campbell	catcher	Balmer
Webber	first base	Walsh
Lauerman	second base	McCoy
Carroll	shortstop	G. Kreiger
Irwin	third base	J. Kreiger
Rocklin	left field	Armstead
Medley	center field	Bardeymeir
Dennis	right field	Berheen

Temperance Meeting.

Tomorrow afternoon the temperance meeting arranged by the Scandinavian Christian Temperance union will be held at Lincoln park. Rev. A. F. Elmquist, of Bethany Lutheran church, will be the speaker. His address will be in English. The Orpheus choir will sing. It consists of thirty male voices, and is under the direction of Prof. Lindholm.

Parlor theater—A show for the people.

J. R. Quigley has the contract for the erection of the residence to be built by A. D. Davidson on East Superior street between Fifteenth and Sixteenth avenues and began work on it yesterday. It will cost about $15,000.

The Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic sent out about 100 passengers from the head of the lakes last evening on its popular priced excurs. n to Detroit. Most of these had round trip tickets but some will take advantage of the low rates to make a more extended visit to Eastern friends.

Attend the grand opening at 10 Lake avenue south, Saturday, June 28. Fine free lunch. Fhaten's orchestra. Everybody cordially invited. Louis Anderson.

Always! Always! Kelly's dye works the best and cheapest. Both 'phones.

The steamer Newsboy took a large picnic party to Fond du Lac this morning. It was composed of the members of the Congregational church and their friends. A schedule of three round trips was arranged for the boat during the day.

The White Line steamship Iroquois this morning took a large party of excursionists and others for an all day trip through the Apostle Islands to Bayfield and Ashland.

Redmen and Foresters attend the benefit dance given under the auspices of Wa-Wa-Tay-See D. of P. and court Eastern Star at Elks' hall Monday evening, June 30.

Two very fine new road rollers were received by the department of public works this morning. The machines were manufactured in Springfield, Ohio, by the O. S. Kelley company and are said to be especially adapted for the kind of work required of them in this city. The largest of the machines weighs thirteen tons and the smaller weighs six tons.

Albert Dolinsky was served with a warrant this morning, charging him with practicing pawnbroking without a license. His attorney appeared in court for him and the case was set for a hearing on July 1.

The Bethel association has opened one of its tents on Lake avenue south, where gospel meetings will be held every evening during the next few months. The place is well equipped with musical instruments and other facilities for the work.

The trustees of the First Methodist church paid the last dollar of the mortgage today and received the satisfaction of the instruments. Tomorrow evening it will be burned at the evening service as has been announced.

W. J. Gardner will leave this evening for his home in Minneapolis. Mr. Gordon will go next week to Central Illinois.

Mrs. Richard Little, of 702 East Second street, has returned from a visit with friends in Ashland.

Mrs. E. J. Nettella and daughter, of Soudan, were the guests of Miss Mahar this week.

Mrs. John Thompson, of West Duluth, left this afternoon for Ely, Minn., to visit until after July 4.

JULY WEATHER.

Data For Month In Duluth Weather Office.

The records compiled at the local weather bureau for the past thirty years for the month of July have been arranged by Forecaster Richardson and may indicate something of the weather that the people of the head of the lakes may expect the coming month.

The normal temperature of July has been 66 degrees. The warmest month was in 1878, with an average of 71 degrees; the coldest month in 1871 with an average of 61 degrees. The highest temperature for the month of July was recorded on the first day of the month, 1883, the maximum being 99 degrees. On July 2, 1895, the minimum temperature was 45 degrees. The average precipitation for the month during the past thirty years is 3.72 inches, the average number of clear days is 9, partly cloudy 15 and cloudy 7 days. The prevailing winds for July have been from the northeast.

A Handsome Booklet.

The Northern Pacific road has issued a sportsman's manual of hunting and fishing in the Northwest that is wonderful.

The book is published with typographical dignity, cohesion and beauty. It is splendidly illustrated with handsomely executed half-tones. A number of the pictures are from Ernest Thompson-Seton's collection.

The book, among other things, deals with particulars about Duluth's great hunting territory and the advantages the city offers in outfitting. It also contains a very complete digest of the game laws of all the Northwestern states.

Its First Director.

Professor Ch. Trautvetter has returned from Pretoria, Ill., where he attended the meeting of the Northwestern American Sangerbund which was held from June 19 to 22. It was an immense affair, 2000 people singing at one time in some of the choruses. The first meeting of the Sangerbund was held in 1876, and Mr. Trautvetter was the conductor. In recognition of that fact he was honored with a special invitation to be present on this occasion.

A LARGE ESTIMATE

Fire Board Wants $96,922 For Coming Year's Expenses.

Also Wants $50,000 For Fire Tug and $7000 For Hall.

Conference Committee Will Now Take a Whack at Estimate.

In fixing an estimate for the fire department appropriation for the year of 1903, the board of fire commissioners last night decided to recommend an appropriation of $50,000 for a fire tug and $7000 for a new fire hall in the East End.

Both are necessities of long standing but it is difficult to tell what will become of the estimates and recommendations after they come out the far end of the municipal channel of red tape.

The growth of the city and the demand for increased fire protection has caused a somewhat larger estimate for fire department expenses for the year of 1902. However, this estimate is likely to be cut down somewhat by the conference committee and the council before the final appropriation is made. The estimate adopts the following items of expense:

Salaries	$77,300
Horse feed	4,700
Fuel	4,500
Four new horses	1,000
Store room	1,200
Four thousand feet of hose	4,000
Supplies	500
Repairs to apparatus	300
Harness repairs	200
Plumbing	200
Fire engine repairs	400
Fire alarm supplies	400
Oil	300
Laundry	150
Painting houses	150
Rent of telephones	82
Building repairs	100
Total	$96,922

In addition to this the commissioners will recommend the following appropriations:

Eight additional men	$ 5,760
Twelve Pompier ladders	360
New house for No. 4	7,000
New house for No. 6	7,000
Fire tug	50,000
Total	$70,120

NO REHEARING

Will Be Given Counsel In the Hahn Case.

Columbus, Ohio, June 28.—The attorneys in the William M. Hahn case who were called to the governor's office last night, did not reach Columbus Saturday morning on account of washouts and the general delay of trains. Governor Nash stated that there would be no re-hearing of the Hahn case and as far as he new no new matter would be presented for consideration. He simply called in the counsel on both sides of the case for consultation. The object seems to be to bring about a compromise that the case might be settled satisfactorily on both sides without a long legal fight.

BANK CLERK HELD.

New York, June 28.—Frank Jones, clerk in the National Commercial bank here, was today held for the grand jury, charged with the misappropriation of $50,500 of the bank's funds.

"GENE" FIELD

Made Never-to-Be Forgotten History For Denver.

Some Mad Pranks of the Beloved Children's Poet.

The brief three years he spent here, from 1881 to '83, have left a record in the memory of everyone who lived here in those busy days. Wherever one may meet a group of old newspaper men or Bohemians of that well-night prehistoric day of Denver, the mention of the name of Field will bring up a host of anecdotes of his quaint, impulsive humor, says the Denver Post.

Denver was in 1881 much what San Francisco was in the '50s, save that the situation here was complicated by the struggles of the rival railroad companies. It was a time of vast speculation, of desire to get rich quickly, of battles of corporations. Scarcely emerged from a village, only ten years gone from the time of the first railroad, life had not yet crystallized into conventional forms. Everyone lived at high speed and high tension. The stage of civilization of the mining camp and smelter was just giving way to that of the railway and financial center of a vast extent of territory. It was a day of colossal fortunes quickly made and as quickly spent. It was yet seething with the primeval energy of the newly-settled West.

Such was the town to which Gene Field came to take a position as managing editor of the old Tribune. The Tribune was in the hands of large corporate interests, which subordinated its legitimate newspaper functions to service as a financial and political ally. It was run on a most extravagant scale, and when Field came he was given carte blanche to surround himself with a staff of writers and newsgatherers that should make the Tribune fairly "zip." Zip it did, and the zipping thereof was heard far beyond the borders of the state and the West. It did not take long for the paper to acquire a national reputation.

Field came from Kansas City, which had already settled down to a town almost staid and demure. Denver was overflowing with riotous life, and into the midst of it Field flung himself. His life was a strange mixture of work and play. His duties as editor of his paper would have taxed the strength and resources of the strongest man, and yet his days and nights—were filled with the wildest merriment. It was a rare week in which he did not see the sun rise three or four times, and yet he would go to his desk with undiminished energy, mapping out the work of the staff, projecting new schemes to puncture reputations or sensations, and in writing his column of "Odds and Ends." He had a wonderful sense of news, and accomplished in admirable fashion the difficult task of pleasing at once the public and the interests which employed him.

His "Odds and Ends" column ran in the first winter of 1881-82. As soon as his skits began to appear they were widely copied, and the imitations which followed the copying so disgusted Field that he stopped the column. It is declared that the first of these quaint oddities appeared after a Sunday, when a copy boy was sent post haste to Field's house to get "copy" which his happy-go-lucky methods of work had failed to bring forth. Field was amusing his children at the time by writing nursery rhymes to them, and when "copy" was demanded, the whimsical idea struck him of writing some comic newspaper squibs in the same style. The first he wrote, it is said, and which was intended to express his annoyance at having to stop his play for work, was "The Reporter on Sunday." It follows:

"Is this Sunday? Yes, it is Sunday. How peaceful and quiet it is. But who is the man? He does not look peaceful. He is a reporter and he is Swearing. What makes him Swear? Because he has to work on Sunday? Oh, no! He is Swearing because he has to break the Fourth Commandment. It is a sad thing to be a Reporter."

According to another friend, however, the origin of the "Primer" was a libel suit which Field's daring had brought from Governor Evans against the Tribune. He used this old primer style in ridiculing the governor, and the success of the idea caused him to carry it to other lines of work.

Most of these were a reflection of his household life, where every member of the family was kept wondering what he would do next. He took no more delight than in making his wife and children laugh, and he would often tell the droll story or play one practical joke after another, till they all collapsed with mirth, weak and helpless. He took a whimsical delight in warning the children against being good, telling them: "If you are good, beware of the Bugaboo." This fearful animal, he was wont to declare, laid in wait for good children, and was several degrees worse than any Bogie man. He describes the Bugaboo:

"There was an awful Bugaboo,
Whose Eyes were Red and Hair was Blue;
His Teeth were Long and Sharp and White.
And he went prowling 'round at Night."

Field was the inventor of the sign, "This is my busy day," which hung over his desk. By its side, in the Tribune office, was the motto, "God Bless our Proofreader, He Can't Call for Him Too Soon." And under the motto was the piece of apparatus with which he used to quash incipient libel suits. It was nothing but a chair of black walnut, lacking a bottom. Its yawning seat was always carefully concealed by a few papers carelessly thrown there. This was the only chair in the room, save Field's own, and the visitor was told to sit therein. This broke the back of outraged dignity, and made anger a pretty ineffectual thing.

Bill Nye fell through this famous chair into a lifelong friendship with Field, when he first came to the Tribune office. Nye had been working without recognition on the Laramie Boomerang, when his writings attracted the attention of Field. He offered Nye $5 a week for a weekly letter. This was raised to $15, and when another $5 was added, Nye packed his grip and determined to come to Denver to see what sort of mingled chump and Croesus was signing the pay checks of the Tribune. Nye looked like a farmer of the kind one sees in the comic papers when he appeared at the Tribune office, and unlike the shorn and shaven humorist of the later days. After he had fallen through the chair, nothing would do but that there should be a newspaper banquet at the St. James hotel in honor of Nye. The affair lasted till dawn, and when Nye had retired, and a sufficient time had elapsed for him to go to bed, the company below sent up their cards and requested his immediate presence on most important business. Nye, however, was equal to the occasion and sent back a shotgun by the bell boy, with the message that it would speak for him.

Legislative "grafting" was then a fine science in Colorado. Two thirds of the business of the state legislature was a fight over hold-up measures against the large corporation, from which vociferously sanctimonious statesmen made comfortable fortunes. The railroads doing business in Colorado spent hundreds of thousands of dollars through their secret funds, to kill sandbagging measures. The ways in which they were strangled or smothered, by the aid of annual passes, champagne and cold coin, would fill volumes. And there came to Colorado, in the interest of the Pullman company, a man whom we shall refer to as Bilkins, for the good and sufficient reason that this was not his name. Every session of the Colorado legislature in these days had its anti-Pullman rate reduction bill, and it was to take care of these that Bilkins came to Denver.

Field was a special friend of his, in a personal way, though Bilkins was given to understand that this did not mean the friendship of the paper beyond what was strictly legitimate. Field always introduced Bilkins to his Bohemian friends as "a good fellow and a thoroughbred." And his comings to Denver were made the occasions of nights that left aching heads behind them.

But finally Field determined that Denver was being scandalized by these little trips, and ordered his subordinates to "let Bilkins play a lone hand in his game." And so it was that when Bilkins next came to Denver, not a man of the Tribune staff would drink with him, accept a cigar from his hands, or associate with him in their usual merry way. The frigid reception gave Bilkins a thirst for revenge, and for "Bourbon beer." So he looked on the whisky when it was red, and got most gloriously tight. In this state he went to the Tribune office for an explanation.

He arrived there at a time when all hands were out for dinner. And this, of course, he looked on as a further affront and challenge. So he started in for revenge. He went through every desk, tore up every scrap of copy for the morrow's paper, smashed tables, broke pens and pencils, and wherever the wreckage over the floor. Then he fixed the job by pouring gallons of ink over the scene of desolation. And he went off in glee.

At first there was nothing in the office but wreckage and consternation. Then Field returned, and comforted the staff by promises of revenge, and all hands set to work to repair the damage. The stories were rewritten, and lucky was that reporter who had taken his notes with him, instead of leaving them in his desk.

Then came Bilkins' second assault. He took his stand in the alley below and began a bombardment. He hurled brickbats and sticks and stones, and staves from ash barrels through the windows of the office. Through all that hail of missiles that devoted force of reporters and editors wrote on steadily. They trusted implicitly that Field would find a way of vengeance. When he had expended his last brickbat on the windows of the office, Bilkins retreated in bad order to his rooms at the St. James hotel.

The story of the vengeance of Gene Field is epic. It was planned with deliberation and executed with malicious care. First, he sent for "Possum Jim," an aged negro, and then for a sergeant of police whom he could depend on. The negro owned what was ostensibly an express wagon, strung together with wire, and what passed for a horse. When they had gone, and the paper had been "put to bed" in the care of the night editor, Field went the round of all the night haunts and collected the choicest lot of drunks and potential drunks that ever made the revels of gay Paris look like an Epworth league meeting. He installed them in a resort opposite the St. James, long since closed. Then he supplied them with the amber milk of the Blue Grass cow, and went across the street for Bilkins. After a while he appeared with Bilkins on his arm. The night was ever remembered by those who were there. As the Bourbon beer disappeared the party became more and more hilarious. They sang and danced and shouted. Windows went up in the hotel across the way and voices warned them that they would appeal to the police.

When the uproar and the merriment was at its highest the old ramshackle cart of "Possum Jim" appeared around the corner. The old man played his part well, and seemed to bargain for the cart, which Field had asked for, with the greatest earnestness. It was finally procured for an hour, for $2.50, the owner to present no claim for possible damages. They unharnessed the horse and put Bilkins into the shafts. The novelty of the position seemed to delight him, and he fell into the plan with al the zest that could be desired. He pranced and snorted, and pawed the ground, and played the horse for all he was worth. Field held the reins and cracked the whip. The rest of the motley crowd pushed.

In this merry wise they twice made the circuit of the block, yelling like Commanches. Just as they reached the front of the St. James hotel on the last turn the police hove in sight, according to careful prearrangement. The crown broke and ran, leaving the unfortunate Bilkins to the tender mercies of the sergeant. The more he protested, the more inexorable were the police. When, at last, he sank limp and helpless into the arms of his captors, they carried him into the cafe where the rest of the party had fled. A quarter of an hour later the police made their exit by the back door, and his special was bearing Bilkins to Texas as fast as steam could carry him.

But that was not the end of Field's revenge. He caused another Pullman rate bill, making the tremendous reduction of 60 per cent, to be introduced into the state legislature. The news was flashed East. Bilkins came back to Denver with the worst fright he had ever had. When he arrived the Tribune had something to say of him and his "nefarious mission," in every department, with biting irony and accusation. For the six remaining weeks of the session Bilkins did not dare look at the Tribune till after breakfast. He gave a Pullman annual pass to every member of the legislature and champagne flowed, not by the bottle or the case, but by the carload. He did not find that the whole affair was a put up job till the end of the session.

Wolfe Londoner was one of the best friends Field had in Denver, and is full of recollections of him. He declares that "never in all the run of his merry, joyous career, was he known to wake up with a cent. The course of one short day was ever long enough to drain his open purse, and his boon companions were as welcome to the contents, while it could stand the strain, as its careless, happy owner. The bright side of life attracted his laughing fancy, and with stern and unavoidable determination all seriousness and shadow. There was no room in his happy composition for aught of sorrow or sadness, and a quick and merry wit always extricated him from every embarrassing position and perplexing dilemma."

And one of the best practical jokes Field ever played in his life was upon Londoner. Londoner was chairman of the county committee of one of the political parties, and was delegated to work up enthusiasm among the colored vote. The next morning the Tribune printed the following advertisement, with all the heavy heads it could muster:

WANTED!
EVERY COLORED MAN IN THE CITY TO Call at Wolfe Londoner's Store.
A Carload of Georgia Watermelons Just Received for a Special Distribution
AMONG HIS COLORED FRIENDS.
Call Early and Get Your Melon.

When the store opened in the morning it was besieged with negroes. Every mouth watered with anticipation, and every eye was on the watch for the time of opening, when those melons should appear.

Business in the street was forced to stop, and traffic was blocked. No explanation would go down. It was melons or a riot, and the loss of the colored vote. Mr. Londoner was at his wits' end. There were no melons in the market and none were expected. Just as he was about to abandon all in despair a car loaded with melons pulled in on one of the freight sidings, and Londoner and the party were saved. The price was exorbitant, but that was no matter. The committee chairman paid it with the air of a man who was indignant that they had not come before. There was not a break in the column of the black vote on election day.

Field clinched the joke after election day. The colored voters held a rally to rejoice over the victory, and Londoner was invited. The chairman had been drilled with care by Field, and he introduced Mr. Londoner with a memorable sentence: "Although he has a white skin, his heart is as black as any of yours."

A FIGHT FOR LIFE

THE STORY OF A MINISTER'S WIFE IN COLORADO.

She Had Almost Abandoned Hope When Her Sister Came to Her Aid —Mrs. Huston's Account of the Struggle.

How often does it fall to the lot of woman to struggle hand to hand with death as did Mrs. Huston, the wife of the Rev. H. J. Huston, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church in Elizabeth, Elbert county, Colorado. It was her grit in keeping up the fight against the frightful odds which brought her through. She relates the story of it:

"To tell you about my awful struggle," she says, "I must go back a little. When I was a young girl I had spinal trouble and this together with a throat and lung difficulty made great inroads on my constitution, so that I never have been real strong. I became generally run down and suffered many years with stomach trouble and extreme nervousness. Doctors did not help me and I was in a desperate state of health, struggling constantly for life. Oftentimes I was confined to my bed, but I never gave up until I found I could not keep upon my feet without fainting.

"It was a continual fight for existence with but little to encourage me until, upon my sister's suggestion, I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. About six years ago she was in very poor health, suffering especially from an excruciating pain in her head which the doctors could not relieve. She tried Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and found so remarkable and prompt relief that I thought I would see what these wonderful pills would do for me.

"I did not take them a week before a marked improvement was manifest. I continued taking them and they made me feel better and stronger than in a long while. I have had no return of the stomach or nervous trouble and have no hesitancy in saying that if it were not for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, instead of being up and about the house at my work, I would now be confined to my bed."

Mrs. Huston took a medicine that attacked the trouble at the seat—the blood and nerves. Poor blood and disordered nerves are at the seat of nearly all the ailments which afflict mankind, and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People have been proven to be a certain remedy for all diseases arising from this cause. They will cure locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after-effects of the grip, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions and all forms of weakness, either in male or female. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are sold by all dealers or will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, fifty cents a box; six boxes for two dollars and a half, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine company, Schenectady, N. Y. Send for free booklet of medical advice.

MAKING PINE BOUGH BED.

Rubber mattresses are good and sleeping bags are excellent, but in all my experiences as a camper I have found nothing so satisfactory or so comfortable as the bed built of fresh pine boughs, says a writer in The Outlook. When these beds are carefully constructed there isn't, to my mind, a hair mattress in the universe that can compare with this primitive but deliciously comfortable affair. If you are stopping only two or three nights in one spot and then going on in your search for game or scenery, your guide will not take the trouble to make your bed in a very thorough manner. He will simply heap up some freshly cut pine boughs and arrange them with the soft green needles for the top layer of the bed. The truly satisfactory bed of pine boughs requires some time and some skill to construct, and not every guide who inhabits the Quebec or Aroostook pine jungles knows how or is willing to bother with making one properly. In the first place, long logs are cut out for the length of the bed, and short ones are put across the ends. Into this low box are piled, first, large freshly hewn boughs to build the bed up to the height of the box sides. On top of these boughs softer ones are laid, with the new green parts on top to form a covering for the springy moss. When plenty of the soft green needles are put over the other boughs, you have a bed that is at once deliciously soft and comfortable. The best part of it is that the aromatic pine balsam is a remedy in itself, and the elasticity of the bed lasts for days.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGED.

St. Paul, June 28.—An Eau Claire, Wis., special to the Dispatch says: John Krautzieder, former secretary of Eau Claire Cigarmakers, union No. 85, is under arrest in Milwaukee on complaint filed in Eau Claire of embezzling $125. He will be brought to this city by Sheriff Reinhard, who has gone to Milwaukee.

MISS LAURA FRANKENFIELD,

The Duluth Playwright, Who Will Play the Leading Part In "An Arkansas Romance."

An unusual theatrical event of much interest to Duluth people will be the presentation of Opie Read's most popular novel, "Len Gansitt," at the Lyceum theater Thursday evening, July 10, for the benefit of St. Luke's hospital, under the direction of Miss Laura Frankenfield and James H. Morrison, Jr., assisted by Charles Gay, a member of Henry Miller's company, and ten well known young Duluth people.

Miss Frankenfield made the adaptation of the novel, and for the performance to be given in Duluth, which will be the copyright performance. The piece is to be called "An Arkansas Romance." Miss Frankenfield made the first dramatization of "Quo Vadis," which has been successfully produced for three seasons, and this, her later work, is said by those who have read the piece to be a splendid play.

W. Morrison, who is a personal friend of Richard Mansfield's, dined with the great actor Monday, and together they read the manuscript, Mr. Mansfield making some fine suggestions. Opie Read is one of Mansfield's favorite authors, and "Len Gansitt," his especial favorite of Read's works, and he was greatly interested in the young Duluth's girl's work, sending her many compliments and congratulations, and predicting a great future for the piece.

Mr. Read will be an honored guest at the Lyceum on the evening of July 10, coming from Chicago especially to witness the first performance of his own favorite work.

Miss Frankenfield and Mr. Morrison will play the leading characters, the same roles they will interpret on the road next season. They will begin their tour in September, opening in St. Paul or Minneapolis.

The piece is in four acts and calls for elaborate mounting, properties, etc. Several horses are used in the last act, and as Mr. Mansfield said: "The last act alone makes the play a success." It is a dramatic comedy.

MISS ADELE McCLARAN.

A welcome addition to the literary and dramatic circles of Duluth is found in Miss Adele McClaran, who has recently come to this city from Minneapolis to reside. She is the daughter of Dr. W. A. McClaran, who has purchased a residence at Lakeside and brought his family to this city.

Miss McClaran is a very talented young lady who has just passed her 17th birthday, and has made rapid strides in the field of dramatic reading. She is a pupil of Clayton D. Gilbert, of Minneapolis, and has been studying for the past two years at the Johnson School of Oratory. She graduated a few weeks ago and the Minneapolis Journal said of the event: "Miss Adele McClaran appeared last evening at the Johnson school in the series of graduating recitals being given by the pupils of Clayton D. Gilbert, of the oratory and dramatic department. She had chosen for her evening's work the revolutionary drama, "Nathan Hale." It was a venture in a new field, as hitherto Miss McClaran's work has been wholly in comedy, and her handling of the strong scenes was altogether creditable. She sustained the interest well, and her real gift for comedy brightened the rendition agreeably. She differentiated the numerous characters very well and her reading showed intellect and careful work."

New Champion Team.

Another fast baseball team sprang into the arena of amateur athletics this week. It represents the Eagle Clothing company, and is considered one of the best teams in town. Four of the team are former college players.

The Eagles have issued a challenge to all teams in Duluth and Superior. All communications should be addressed to E. P. Sheehan, 321 West Superior street. He will captain the team for the season and arrange for all games.

BOXING BILL DEFEATED.

New Orleans, June 28.—The bill allowing boxing contests of twenty-five rounds in New Orleans, which had passed the lower house of the state legislature, has been defeated in the senate by a large vote.

NOT YET ORDERED

But Rise In Hard Coal Price Is Expected July 1.

Soft Coal Situation Somewhat Unsettled In Certain Sections.

Youghigheny Soft Coal Scarce a Feature of Importance.

The coal situation is approaching an emergency stage. Locally, conditions are satisfactory enough, if it were not for the troubled situation in the mining districts and in other distributing centers that have been more vitally affected thus far than has been Duluth.

The approach of the new month brings with it concern as to what may be expected of the effect of its arrival on the price situation on both hard and soft coal, but particularly of anthracite. According to schedule, there will be an advance of 10 cents July 1 in the price of hard coal.

"That is all we have any information about now, either official or unofficial," said a sales agent this afternoon. "We don't even know, after the visit of all the big wigs the other day, that even this advance will be made, but we look for it. This is according to the schedule laid out at the beginning of the season. It would not be surprising if an additional advance were to be made at that time, but my judgment as to that is not much better than the average man's."

The soft coal situation is somewhat unsettled down in Ohio and Indiana. Telegraphic reports from there indicate that the railroads are confiscating supplies in anticipation of a strike in the bituminous mines, and fearing that they may be left short of supplies for operating their locomotives. How serlously this has gone or what especial portent it may have on the immediate future trend of prices can only be conjectured, though local coal trade men are inclined as a result to view the outlook with some additional apprehension.

"There is another phase of this soft coal question," said a sales agent today, "that the public probably doesn't know about, and may not fully appreciate its import when it does learn it. That is, that the Lake Erie coal shippers have been unable to get their usual supplies of Youghigheny soft coal. In consequence of their disappointment in that direction, the shippers have had to buy what they could find to replace it. Hocking seemed to be the only grade of soft coal from the Eastern fields that at all answered their purposes that could be had in considerable quantities, and so they have been sending in large quantities of this grade of soft coal.

"Ordinarily Hocking is used largely by small dealers throughout the country for the domestic trade. It is not what coal men consider the most desirable staple soft coal for steam fuel purposes. It is too inflammable, and dock men fight as shy as possible of carrying large stocks of it on dock, because of the liability that extends to the dock and the other and safer grades of coal that are carried on the structure. As a general thing, Hocking coal is kept moving off the dock as rapidly as possible in order to lessen the hazard.

"The result of carrying large stocks of Hocking in order to be able to meet the large demand that usually is met with Youghigheny will be to add to the cost of carrying insurance on all coal on the dock, soft or hard. That feature is likely to add to the cost of coal sooner or later."

Sale agents regret that the inducement held out by the companies to early buyers of supplies of anthracite for next winter's consumption has resulted in a largely increased demand.

"During the past two months," said a sales agent, "we have done five or six times as much business in anthracite grades as we have ever done before during the same season. I attribute this to the fact that the coal companies have made an inducement to those buying during the early part of the season, or placing a penalty on those that defer buying until the latter part of the summer."

A $500,000 BAUBLE.

Senator Clark May Buy Famous Hope Diamond.

New York, June 28.—It is reported that Joseph Frankel's Sons have sold, or are about to sell, the famous Hope diamond to Senator W. A. Clark. If Clark buys the stone he will pay $500,000 for it, as that is the price at which diamond brokers hold it. The jewel was recently sent to Clark's office and he examined it with great interest. The diamond is a perfect blue, and one of the rarest gems. It weighs 44¾ carats and is cushion-shaped.

WILL DISSOLVE SYNDICATE.

New York, June 28.—Notices have been sent out, according to the Tribune, to the members of the underwriting syndicate for the 4 per cent joint bonds of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy that the syndicate will be dissolved on July 1.

PROTEST

Filed By Carlton County Against Highland Canal Company.

Washington, June 28.—H. C. Oldenburg, county attorney of Carlton, Minn., called at the war department yesterday and filed a protest against the granting of a permit for the Highland Canal and Improvement Company of Duluth, to erect dams across the St. Louis and Cloquet rivers and construct an immense storage reservoir for the purpose of bringing water into Duluth for municipal and water power purposes.

Mr. Oldenburg represents the local interests of Aitkin and Carlton counties. He says the granting of the authority asked for would work great damage to the farmers and to the logging industry. If dams are built the water of the streams would be diverted from their natural channels and the construction of the reservoirs would flood 50,000 acres of valuable lands.

Col. MacKenzie, of the engineering department, after hearing Judge Oldenburg, sent the matter to Duluth to Capt. Gaillard, in charge on engineer work, for a report. Capt. Gaillard replied that there is no serious objection in his judgment to granting the permit.

Engineer Cokefair, of the Highland company, arrived here last night and will press the application for a permit.

CORDIALLY RECEIVED

Were Men Who Asked For Increased Wages.

Chicago, June 28.—Committees from the South Side Street Car Men's union and those of the barn and stable men have presented their requests for an increase in wages to General Manager McCulloch of the Chicago City company. The committees said last night that they were received cordially by the manager and that all their demands were gone into in detail. They are to return for his reply on Tuesday.

Dr. Mitchell at Duluth.

Still Continues to Perform His Marvelous Cures.

A STATEMENT OF FACTS.

Never in modern times has any method of treatment for disease received such endorsement as this. Hundreds and hundreds have ben cured by Dr. Mitchell's magnetic power. He has had crowds of people during the past months, and has made many marvelous cures. It seems that the people must believe it is not a question of mere statements; the proof is within the reach of every man or woman who is suffering today. Look up any or all the cures Dr. Mitchell has published during the past four years in the daily papers. They are all true and you can be convinced beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Mr. Anton Peterson, a man who is a well known stone mason and an old resident of Duluth, had rheumatism and paralysis of one arm, which caused him a great deal of suffering, after trying physicians, who failed to give him any relief, was cured by Dr. Mitchell. Dr. Mitchell has also successfully treated three other members of the family, all of whom are enthusiastic over what the doctor has done for them. This statement can be verified by calling at 617 Twenty-third avenue west.

A lady well known in Duluth says: "I was a miserable sick woman, my throat and lungs were in a serious condition. Now all this is gone, my appetite is better, I am well. If any one doubts the efficiency of your wonderful treatment you can refer them to me."

Mr. Carl Scott, of Deer River, Minn., who was carried upstairs to Dr. Mitchell's office a helpless cripple with paralysis, unable to use an arm or leg and given up as a hopeless case by other physicians and taken from the hospital as uncurable, is now walking.

Miss Howell, from the iron range, had a large tumor of three years' growth. Many physicians whom she consulted told her nothing but a surgical operation could remove it. She was cured after a course of treatments by Dr. Mitchell and is now perfectly well.

A gentleman from the southern part of the state fell a distance of thirty-five feet, injuring his spine. Dr. Mitchell cured him in two months and he is now working every day.

Mr. Silas Williams, of Mattewa, Minn., cured of lung and heart trouble, of which he had given up all hope.

Mr. Edwin Watkins, of Forest City, Minn., was going blind, cured by Dr. Mitchell's magnetic treatment.

Mr. Martin Aune, of 126 Mesaba avenue, cured of paralyzed arm.

Mr. C. B. Munroe, clerk at Steele & Co.'s, cured of nervousness and stomach trouble. Recommends Dr. Mitchell's magnetic treatment very highly.

Perhaps this is enough for the present. But there are many thousands more testimonials at your disposal should you desire them. Every reference given is bona fide and can be proven should any one wish to do so.

Office hours daily, 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. Sundays, 10 a. m. to 12 m. Remember the name, Dr. Mitchell. Bring this advertisement with you. It will entitle you to consultation and examination free. 'Phone, 579.

WILLIAM L. WINDOM.

Appointed judge of the Duluth municipal court to succeed Judge W. D. Edson, who will retire on Aug. 1. Mr. Windom is to fill the vacancy until the election next spring, when the voters of the city will fill the place.

AT THE HOTELS

Judge Mills and Messrs. Staples and Miller, of the railroad and warehouse commission, were in the Spalding lobby last night. The commissioners had just returned from a trip over the Fosston branch of the Eastern Minnesota, where they had been considering the advisability of ordering some changes demanded by the residents of the towns along the line. The people of Glyndon desire an extra platform at the depot; Averill wants a depot established at that embryo metropolis; a siding is what the inhabitants of Pleasant View desire to have established for loading and unloading their produce, and the settlers between Bemidji and Solway want a depot established. Judge Mills said that the commission had these demands under consideration for the present.

Although many of the local politicians were around to see the commissioners they one and all declined to talk of state politics. Judge Mills laughingly observed that the municipal judgeship seemed to be a stepping stone in Duluth to congressional honors, but although visibly interested in Judge Edson's candidacy, he declined to make any prognostication as to the outcome of the contest between the judge and Jadam.

The commissioners took the N. P. night train and returned to St. Paul last night.

Representative W. H. Noyes, of Barnum, was at the St. Louis last night in a contented state of mind, having won the first round of his fight against one of two publications that have accused him of bribery and corruption.

The original publication of the alleged libel was in the Grand Rapids Herald-Review and was copied by Editor Quinn, of the Cloquet Independent. Noyes had Quinn arrested and when the trial came on Quinn retracted all that he had published derogatory to Representative Noyes and pledged himself to publish the following statement in his next issue of the Independent:

"The publisher of the Cloquet Independent, take this means to disavow editorially the sentiments expressed by the Herald Review article and desire to say in this public manner that I do not know of any act of Mr. Noyes while a member of the legislature that would lead to such a charge. (Signed). Albert E. Quinn."

Now it is Editor Kiley's turn to be hauled over the coals and the Barnum statesman says that no apology will go in this case, but that he will press for a conviction and the highest possible penalty.

J. M. Molleter, of Emerson, Neb., was one of about forty of the excursionists on the Omaha that registered at the St. Louis last night. Mr. Molleter has visited Duluth several times and takes much interest in this city. "I must congratulate you," he said, "upon the improved appearance of Superior street. I believe the brick pavement is superb and I rejoiced last night in observing the manner in which it was washed down in the fire house. I have one criticism to make, however, and that is that some means should be devised for preventing the flooding of the sidewalk and washing of gravel and mud from the roadway upon the walk. I was out early this morning, and I found it preferable to walk on the clean bricks rather than the gritty sidewalks. This is a small matter, however, and probably only noticeable by a stranger. Duluth has much improved in appearance and as far as I can judge in business prosperity also. We are looking forward to good crops in Nebraska this year, in spite of the late season."

• • •

A. G. Bernard and Ed L. Warren, of Cass Lake, registered at the Spalding this morning. They were both en route for their home from Washington, D. C. Mr. Bernard said that he had nothing more to add to the Washington dispatches concerning the passage of the Morris bill, but whatever had been done in the matter all credit should be given to Congressman Page Morris for his untiring zeal and energy in pushing this piece of legislation so vital to the interests of Cass Lake and the other towns in the vicinity. Both of the gentlemen showed signs of the hard campaign that they had been through but they declared that they felt so good over the success of theire efforts that they almost forgot their fatigue.

CLEANERS' STRIKE ENDED.

Chicago, June 28.—The strike of 350 car cleaners employed by the Pullman company, which began on June 18, was declared off last night. A number of the men had already returned to work and were said to be receiving more money than they did prior to the strike. Representatives of the company, it is said, have informed members of the union that any of the former employes who applied would be given work, but there would be no recognition of a body of men.

AT WEST DULUTH

The Leading Stars baseball team has got together an exceptionally strong aggregation for the game with the Hubs tomorrow afternoon at Thirty-second avenue west. Manager Ultican of the Stars has just taken hold of the team, and is well qualified for the position and intends to get together as fast a ball team as this part of the city ever had. Larson will do the box work for the Stars in the game. He is a good all-around pitcher, with plenty of speed and good control and it given proper support should win the game.

Busky will wear the mask and those who have played with him say that there will not be much thievery of second. C. O'Brien will be the field captain and cover first, with Brotherton on second. Robinson, one of the fastest short-stops that ever played in West Duluth, will fill that position and Troup will see that third base isn't left out. The fielders will be J. O'Brien, Ross and Gonyea, a trio of good ones.

With such two teams as the Leading Stars and the Hubs facing each other, an exceptionally fast ball game should result.

ALL TO BE ASKED.

J. A. Scott, the secretary of the Commercial club, which is in charge of the arangements for the Fourth of July celebration, says that it appears that some of the fraternal orginazations in the city were not invited to participate in the parade. It was the intention of the committee to ask every organization of that kind to enter and they took the various names from the directory for this year. However, in some manner it seems that there are several of the lodges which do not appear in that publication and these were overlooked. They are all requested to march, however.

HAVE NO LICENSE.

Georgia Carpenter's Theater Pavilion company pitched its tent on the corner of Ramsey street and Forty-seventh avenue two days ago, stuck out the box office and opened for business. It played one night, but the following afternoon, unfortunately for them, Lieut. Briggs stepped around and wanted to be shown a license, which the showmen could not produce. They said they would fix it all right, however, and immediately went off up town to get the required document. But the police department had seen them once before. Several weeks ago they were playing on the Bowery, when the show got so frisky that even the rounders had to go outside. Summary measures were taken by the police and out they went, but Duluth's loss was Superior's gain and they went across the bay for a time. After everything had calmed down they made a second attempt to show in Duluth, with the foregoing result. Nothing disheartened, nevertheless, they got up a petition and circulated it among the West Duluth business men yesterday afternoon, but they did not put on a performance last night, and had not been successful in securing the required document at noon today.

MARRIED IN IOWA.

Wednesday morning at 8:30 o'clock in St. John's church in Mason City, Iowa, occurred the marriage of Miss Cora Mackey, formerly of Duluth, to William Brisbane, of Waseca, Minn. The bride was beautifully gowned in white silk tissue and carried white bride roses. Father Cardyn officiated and said nuptial high mass. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. M. J. Fitzpatrick, of 312 West Ninth street. Mr. and Mrs. Brisbane afterward left for Waseca, Minn.

CHURCH SERVICES.

At Westminster Presbyterian church children's day exercises will be held at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. The parents are especially invited. Thomas Thorburn will speak in the evening at 8 o'clock.

Pastor James Earl will preach both morning and evening at the Plymouth Congregational church, corner Fifty-fourth avenue west and Bristol street, tomorrow. The sermon theme for 10:45 in the morning is "True Freedom," and the theme for the evening discourse is "No Difference." There will be special music.

Rev. Dr. Forbes will preach in Asbury church tomorrow morning, and Rev. M. Adams will speak in the evening.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The young people of the Presbyterian church gave a well-attended social last night in the church parlors. Refreshments were served and a good time was enjoyed by all.

The Republican club will hold its regular meeting tonight.

The Safe, Economical and Healthful Preservation of Food

Is quite as important as the food itself. The things that we buy to eat are purchased under the belief that they are FRESH, SWEET and CLEAN. Is it consistent to submit them to the care of soggy, decaying wood and corroding metal; you know what a disagreeable odor comes from this kind of a refrigerator.

New Calumet Shaft Will Be Mile and a Half Deep.

Houghton—Before the end of the present year No. 4 shaft of the Calumet & Hecla mine will have been sunk to a depth of 8100 feet on the plane of the lode. In other words, the shaft will be nearly a mile and a half deep. Thus, No. 4 shaft will become the deepest incline shaft in the world. Doubtless, the opening of another to as great or greater depth never will be witnessed. At the depth mentioned No. 4 shaft will be as close to the Tamarack boundary as conditions will permit.

No. 4 shaft passes about forty feet north of the big Red Jacket shaft, and it is with no view to furnishing the Red Jacket a thorough system of ventilation that sinking now is under way. No. 4 will not be operated below the fifty-seventh level, which is the bottom of the shaft from the viewpoint of mining operations. Vertical depths in both No. 4 and Red Jacket will be identical, and already the eighty-first level from the Red Jacket has been extended to the territory that soon is to become the bottom depth of No. 4 shaft. At present they are connected at the thirty-sixth, thirty-ninth, forty-second, fifty-seventh, sixtieth, sixty-third, sixty-sixth and sixty-ninth levels. These shafts, with No. 5, up the most productive territory possessed by the company.

The census of births for Houghton county has just been completed, and a glance at the records on file in the county clerk's office shows that every one male child in ten born in Houghton county during the last year has been given as baptismal names William McKinley or Teddy Roosevelt. Parents in the copper country thus have demonstrated that they are good Republicans.

Chassell—While fishing for trout at the mouth of Pike creek, seven miles from Chassell, yesterday, Nick Evert and M. J. Brustmaker unexpectedly encountered two large black bears. Evert dropped his rod, seized his gun and, after firing three charges into one of the brutes, killed it. At the first shot the beast raised himself to the height of a good-sized man and seemed about to charge upon the fishermen. Although several shots fired at the other brute took effect, the bear escaped into the woods. The bear weighed 275 pounds.

Calumet—Adolph A. Bajari, the most prominent Finn of Houghton county, is dead. He resided in the copper country over twenty-three years, and built up an extensive contracting and lumber business. He was the senior member of the firm of Bajart & Ulseth, of this city. He came to Calumet when it was in its infancy, and saw it develop into the largest mining camp in the United States.

BUY BEEF COMPANY.

Deal In St. Louis Amounting to $2,000,000.

St. Louis, June 28.—The St. Louis Dressed Beef & Provision company has been purchased by a syndicate of St. Louisians headed by Thomas W. Crouch, vice president of the Colonial Trust company. The purchase price, it is said, is $2,000,000.

Options are held by Mr. Crouch on the controlling interest in the concern and the money will be paid for the stock on Monday. Mr. Crouch, who will become president and manager of the business, stated that the report that the plant was purchased for the beef trust was untrue.

Is All the Smallpox That Has Developed at Split Rock.

Investigation by the Duluth health department of the reports that small pox existed to a dangerous extent at Split Rock, shows that the reports were without much foundation.

So far as can be learned one case of small pox was brought in from that place on a north shore boat. The man is now in the detention hospital and nearly well. The case was very light and so far as can be learned it was the only case that Split Rock has furnished.

Dr. Budd, of Two Harbors, has also made an investigation of health conditions at Split Rock lumber camps and reports no further cases.

DYNAMITED COLLIERY.

Fortunately No One Was Injured By Explosion.

A TALE OF A GOAT.

Superintendent Clarke of the bureau of street cleaning is finding many things to amuse him during the warm days of springtime. Last evening he was walking along Classon avenue, says the Brooklyn Eagle. When he reached Atlantic avenue the alarm bell rang and the railway gates closed down, shutting him off from crossing the track. The gates also shut off a woman who was leading a refractory goat by the horns. The goat escaped and the woman barely managed to seize the animal by the tail as it was disappearing under the gateway. Superintendent Clarke cannot tell the story without frequent explosions of laughter.

"It was a life and death struggle, as you might say," he said, in describing the incident today. "At any rate, the woman thought that it meant the death of the goat if he got loose. There was an act of heroism which was whole hearted and sincere. She loved the goat, and while she was able to draw breath no harm should come to him. It appealed to me as nothing has in a long time.

"I never saw anyone work so hard in my life as that woman did, except that goat. For a time it was an even struggle. You see, there wasn't room on the goat's tail for both the woman's hands, and she had to take a grip like a golf player, with one hand over the other. Then the goat began to gain, inch by inch, until he had dragged her jam up against the gate. She put her foot up against one of the bars and he couldn't gain another inch.

"Meanwhile the Long Island train was coming down the line and the goat was getting more and more excited. I wanted to help the heroic woman to save her pet's life, but there wasn't room. The situation had its humorous as well as its pathetic side. At the same time that I was nearly splitting my sides with laughter I was very, very sorry for that woman, and do you know what came into my mind as I stood there?

"That old catch, 'Why is a goat nearly?'

"The answer is because he is all butt, and I never realized how funny the joke was before. If there ever was a goat that was 'nearly,' that one was it. He had his head down and you could see the glare in his eyes as he pawed the ground and kicked and tugged. It's very seldom I want to be a poet, but I wished with my whole heart that I could write a poem to that woman and that goat. They were both 'all but.'

"Well, the whole thing happened much quicker than I can tell it. The train was by and the gate lifted in a very short time after the struggle began. When the gate listed the woman lost her brace, and the goat broke away and tore down the track after the train. The last I saw of them the goat had a good lead, and the woman was sprinting after him, calling: 'Mike, come back! Come back!' It was one of the funniest things I ever saw, and I hope the goat didn't catch the train and the woman catch the goat."

SOUTH AFRICAN TRADE.

Increase Causes Inauguration of Two Steamship Lines.

New York, June 28.—Actual and prospective trade with South Africa has assumed such proportions since the termination of the Anglo-Boer war that two steamship companies have inaugurated service between this city and South African points. It is the intention of the agents to maintain a bi-weekly service.

For the last few years the carrying trade between this port and South Africa has been in the hands of a combination consisting of three lines. The new service already has resulted in a reduction of rates.

"The demand," said an official of one of the new lines, "is mainly for lumber and building materials, for which cable orders are coming to this country every day, and also largely for supplies of grain. The demand for agricultural implements of all kinds is very large, and is rapidly increasing."

Marvelous Escape From Death!

Paine's Celery Compound

Does a Wondrous Work For a Lady Who Was Almost Crazed With Pain and Suffering.

It is well known that terrible rheumatism, sciatica, and neuralgia cause more helplessness, acute suffering and agony, than any of the other diseases that afflict humanity. The great medicinal virtues of Paine's Celery Compound make it the only trustworthy specific for the cure of all forms of rheumatism and neuralgia. Thousands of strong testimonial letters from the most prominent people of the land, prove that Paine's Celery Compound has banished these terribly fatal troubles when all other treatment has failed. Mrs. Margaret Bethel, of Brainerd, Minn., after thirty years of agonizing tortures had a desire to end her life, if it was the will of Heaven; she almost prayed for the time to lay it down. Heaven-directed, she made use of Paine's Celery Compound, and is enjoying true life once more. He says:

"For thirty years I have been a great sufferer from neuralgia in the head, and also with rheumatism in the whole body. I began taking Paine's Celery Compound and soon found I was much better. Before taking the Compound, my life was such a burden that I almost prayed to lay it down. I was bedfast every two weeks with horrible pain in the head, back, and neck, until I was almost crazed. I am able to do harder work and more of it today than for twenty-five years. I am really enjoying life again, thanks to Paine's Celery Compound. I am satisfied that my life has been prolonged many years by its use."

THE DAKOTAS.

The Attempted Elopement Case at Huron Is Probably Ended.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Huron—Ray Underhill, who attempted to elope with Mrs. George E. McEathron, the wife of a well known traveling man and was in jail here for the past two weeks, was examined in Judge Van Dalsell's court Friday on a charge of adultery. The warrant was sworn out by the husband of the woman and Underhill was acquitted. This probably closes one of the most sensational affairs in this part of the state. Mrs. McEathron is in Buffalo and no attempt will be made to bring her here.

Deadwood—William Lawrence, 17 years old, has pleaded guilty to burglary and has been held to the grand jury. He broke into a house at Nemo and stole a watch and $35 in money. He was captured at Black Hawk.

The Deadwood fire department has voted to join in the Fourth of July celebration at Lead this year. Deadwood will not hold a celebration.

Pierre—The horse sale here has again shown that in the raising of range horses, blood will tell. Those who brought in a good grade of horses secured double what the owners of the lighter horses were able to secure. The highest price paid for any single horse was $155, while another horse raised by the same man brought $115 and others close to the hundred mark. A bunch of ten selected halter broken horses went at $83 each, and a bunch of twenty-three unbroken horses were taken at $71 a head. There was a large attendance of buyers, and the bidding was lively on good stuff, but light horses were evidently not wanted. It was the heaviest sale since the beginning of work by the commission company last year.

Redfield—The funeral of Mrs. S. H. Riggs, of this place, took place this afternoon. She was one of the pioneers of Spink county, having removed here from Danville, Ill., at an early day. She had long been prominent in church and society work. While she had been ill for some time, her death was unexpected and was a severe shock to her family and friends.

Aberdeen—J. O. James, of Amarilla, Texas, who has a range of 140,000 acres in the panhandle of the Lone Star state, and is engaged largely in breeding cattle, is spending some time in South Dakota with a view to securing a range for the maturing of his animals and preparing them for market. In the panhandle country he reports that from fourteen to fifteen acres are necessary to sustain one steer or heifer, while in this state a comparatively small acreage is required, and the animals are ready for market when they have reached the age of four years. The Thompsons, of Vermillion, who are now interested in cattle to a large extent in this state, may engage with him in the business here.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Grand Forks—The jury in the Thoen murder case retired at 6:15 Thursday evening and after repeated balloting returned Friday morning at 12:30 with a verdict of not guilty. Thoen was overcome when the jury came in, but revived shortly and a sensational scene followed.

Souris—Emil Grimstad, a well driller who came here from Minnesota, while being lowered into an eighty-foot well on the farm of A. B. Anseth, was struck on the head by a knuckle on a drill point, and fell to the bottom. When taken out some hours later he was dead, his skull having been fractured. This is the second accident of the kind that has happened near here in the last few months, the other case being that of a well digger who was suffocated in the bottom of a well before he could be taken out.

KILLED BY FALLING TREE.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., June 28.—William Killion, 30 years old, at work in a logging camp on the Soo line for Longely & Anderson, was struck on the head by a falling tree and instantly killed.

HOG AS A SEAMAN.

Lars is an educated hog who lives on board the ship Avanti, which is now at a pier at Old slip, says the New York Herald. He poses as being educated because he finds that by so doing he can keep out of brine. He is fond of salt water as an element over which to travel, but objects to being soused in it. He is supposed to dance a hornpipe and to turn a somersault. He also displays a wonderful discrimination for numbers. If the ace of clubs has a tempting morsel beneath it he will haul it out at any time. His educator is the cook of the Avanti.

Being a porcine diplomat, Lars does not trouble his head about persons who are not useful to him. He treats the crew with silent contempt, nods to the mates, grunts to the captain, but when the cook calls he squeals "Aye, aye," and proceeds with all dispatch to the galley. Lars is the official mascot, and it is believed as long as he is on board there will be a full larder and a prosperous voyage. The sailors and the officers of the ship declare that he is a mascot worthy of the name. He came on board seven months ago, and he has had a house on deck ever since his arrival.

Ordinarily he has the run of the ship, but just at present, while painting operations are being carried forward, he is kept in strict seclusion. He has a way of overturning paint pots on the slightest provocation.

Lars weighs 250 pounds. He never misses a chance to get everything he can, so he gets his due and more. He has the pick of the riches of the galley, and his partiality for lobscouse and plum duff are well known on board the Avanti. He does not object to the prune soup which is considered such a delicacy on board.

Lars was born in Sweden, where the matches come from. He had a look at London for a month and objected to the fog. He will soon sail for Australia. Capt. Egrup says that all aboard the Avanti think Lars is a faithful mascot, and only in the case of shipwreck and impending starvation would they consent to have him slain.

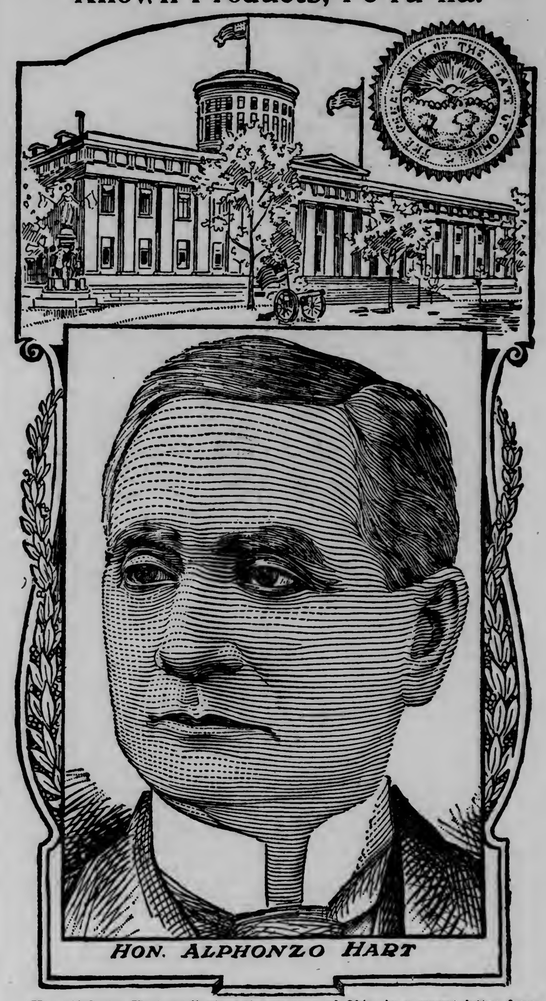
TRAVEL IN ITALY.

Posting was expensive and exciting if you traveled without a courier and were not at home in the Italian patois and coinage. Starting from Rome, you hired a light phaeton, which went through to your destination; you paid in advance at the pontifical bureau, and the officials so far smoothed the way that the coppers for postillions at each successive stage were made up in separate parcels. Of course, these had to be largely supplemented, so you were open to squabbles all the same. And discussing matters with a discontented postillion was no joke, at mirk midnight, or in driving rain, by the dim light of the carriage lantern, says the Saturday Review. Even at midday, the currency question was a perpetual grief, when each state was emulously debasing the precious metal at its particular mint. Johnson advised Boswell—unnecessarily—when getting the change for a guinea, to look carefully at it, as he might find some curious coin.

In Italy your hands were always full of strange coinage—scuddi, soldi, pauli, carlini, baiocchi—and much of it so obliterated that a rare medal of the Roman republic might have easily passed muster. What you lost thereby in change and exchange there was no calculating, but the passport system was even more aggravating. The police were on the watch at each frontier and relieved you of it at every garrison town. The visa was a fruitful source of revenue to officials, and in the course of a few journeys you collected a bulky volume of autographs, richly illustrated with spread eagles and rampant lions. Drivers in Italy usually consider their horses and themselves, but in Calabria, and still more in Sicily, it was often breakneck work. The Sicilian youth would stand up on his shaky box, crack his whip, whoop to his horses and urge them into a Hungarian or Roumanian gallop. We remember one night ride through the vale of Enna to Calatafimi, wild as the gallop of Wilhelm and Leonore, when as our friends took ruts, stones and pitfalls as they came, had we belonged to his church we would have vowed candles to the virgin to be delivered from imminent peril. It added insult to injury when we looked for a generous buonamano.

EX-LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR OF OHIO

Recommends One of Ohio's Well-Known Products, Pe-ru-na.



Hon. Alphonzo Hart, ex-lieutenant-governor of Ohio, in a recent letter from Washington, D. C., says:
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"I have been using Peruna for catarrh, and can cheerfully recommend it to all as a cure for same, and it is also a good tonic."

A. HART.

Mr. Elmer M. Barnes, 611 State street, St. Joseph, Mich., manager for the League of Educators of Michigan, writes as follows:

"It is with pleasure that I give Peruna my hearty endorsement. I have found that it contains valuable properties as a tonic. Close study and steady connement induces a wear and tear on the nervous system, and at such times I have found that a bottle or two of Peruna would restore the system to its normal vigor very splendidly and permanently.

"ELMER M. BARNES."

Nervous Debility.

Everyone who is in the least degree subject to nervousness, sleeplessness, protration, mental fatigue or nervous debility in any form, finds the hot weather in June, July and August very hard to bear, if not dangerous.

The only safe course to take is to keep the blood pure, digestion good, and sleep regular. No remedy equals, in all respects, Peruna for these purposes. If the system is run down and weaknened by catarrh, Peruna renovates and rejuvenates the nerves and brain.

Mr. Orlando E. Service, officer of St. Joseph police department, St. Joseph, Mich., writes:

"I have good reason to be grateful for the relief I have repeatedly found when using Peruna. When I have been under a continual heavy strain, physically or mentally, I have found that a few doses restore my health and strength quicker than anything else I have ever used. Peruna is a general restorer, inducing a fine appetite and good healthful sleep, and a few doses will throw off all unpleasant feelings after being exposed to the wet, cold weather.

"ORLANDO E. SERVICE."

A book on the catarrhal diseases of summer will be mailed to any address upon request by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

The above testimonials are only specimens of 50,000 letters received touching the merits of Peruna as a catarrhal tonic. No more useful remedy to tone up the system has ever been devised by the medical profession.

Delay of the Statehood Bill.

Although the omnibus statehood bill has by agreement gone over to the short session of congress, the Republican senators are bitter in their comments on the action of the house in permitting the bill to pass that body and throw the responsibility on the senate of checking the measure. The majority of the Republican senators regard the statehood bill as a party menace, and they say that if it becomes a law it might entirely upset present political conditions. With Oklahoma, Indian Territory and New Mexico admitted as states, there would be a chance for the Democrats to capture four or even all of the new senators who would then come to Washington, and with this start the Democrats would probably soon control the senate. Even if it did not result in turning the senate over to the Democrats, it would place the balance of power in the hands of the new comers, who would be able to combine with the Democrats and probably control important legislation. These Republicans regard the statehood bill as the most serious question affecting party politics that has come up at the present session, and they are consequently very caustic in their arraignment of Senators Quay and Platt of New York for pushing it to the front. Many of them acknowledge that at least one of the territories, Oklahoma, is entitled under the constitution, to be admitted as a state, but they decline to see that they are placing themselves in very much the same position that the Democrats assumed several years ago when they opposed the admission to the Union of Nevada, Idaho and the two Dakotas. To a certain extent the senate Republicans have achieved a victory, as it is practically conceded that the bill will not go through at the coming session. It has been transparent all along that no matter what rights the territories had for admission as states they would not be recognized as long as the Republicans could control legislation.

Changes in the Leather Industry.

Reports on the leather industry of the country as furnished by the last census show some peculiar changes from the report of 1890. Owing to the action of the two trusts controlling the sole and upper leather output of the country there are so much less concerns in operation than there were a decade ago, but at the same time the capital employed in the industry has been increased by nearly 80 per cent in a total of $173,977,421, and the tendency to concentrate the tanning business in the West is more marked than ever. Though leather manufacture is not an industry in which one would expect to find any but able-bodied men employed, there has been a surprising increase in the number of women and children workers in the tanneries within the decade covered by the twelfth census. In 1890 there were, it appears, 243 woven over 16 years of age. This was about one-half of 1 per cent of all the wage-earners employed, the percentage of men being 98.5 per cent and of children less than 1 per cent. The figures of the present census indicates an increase of only 19.7 per cent in the case of men wage-earners, while the increase in women workers, outside of those engaged in office work, is 383 per cent. The number of children under 16 years of age shows an increase of 36.5. The changes that have been going on in the manipulation of hides and their tanning into leather has reduced the percentage of men wage-earners sixteen years and over, as related to the total from 98.5 per cent in 1890 to 96.7 in 1900. A considerable expansion of business has taken place in the ten years covered by the census, and with high prices prevailing here and a larger export trade amounting to nearly $15,000,000, the industry may be said to be prospering.

CANADIAN RECIPROCITY.

The Pink Paper, published at Bathgate, N. D., says:

"Reciprocity with Canada may be made a plank in the national Democratic platform for 1904. It would be a popular measure in this section. There is no reason why two people of common origin and speaking the same language should be separated by an imaginary line and interchange of trade be seriously hampered. Our present laws are driving the Canadians to closer trade relations with England, and taking from our manufacturers a large amount of business which naturally belongs to them. The best protection wall with Canada would be one that was razed to the ground. The Democratic party will aim to do this."

There is no doubt that reciprocity with Canada is favored by the people of Minnesota as well as by those of North Dakota, and the Democratic state convention, in session at Minneapolis this week, placed itself upon record as favoring the establishment of close trade relations with our northern neighbors. The Duluth board of trade not long ago went even farther and passed a resolution declaring for free trade with Canada. No resident of Duluth who studies the situation can fail to perceive the great benefits that would accrue to this city were the tariff barriers removed and close trade relations established between Duluth and the Canadian Northwest. With direct railway connection between Duluth and Winnipeg, the trade of that great country would be largely diverted in this direction.

With unrestricted commercial intercourse with Canada, or even with a reciprocity arrangement covering certain products, Duluth would become the commercial center for the great wheat-raising country to the north of us. There has been much talk in and out of congress for many years on this subject. Is it not time to take some definite action? If the Republicans will not take the necessary steps, a Democratic congress should be elected to carry out the wishes of the American people.

THE PHILIPPINE BILL.

As was to be expected, the senate promptly turned down the Philippine bill as passed by the house, and asked for a conference. The house quickly acceded to this, and both bodies have named their committees to meet and try and adjust the differences. It is well known that the Republican leaders in the senate are much opposed to yielding to the house on two of the principal points of difference in the bills, namely, the placing of the Philippine currency on the gold basis and the establishment of a Filipino legislature, and on these two points the main struggle in conference is likely to come.

The views of one of the leading senators on the question give an excellent idea of the stand which will be maintained by the senate. He says:

"There has been a great deal of misinformation scattered abroad in regard to the action of the senate on the Philippine currency. The ablest financiers of the senate went over the matter carefully and called into consultation men fmous throughout the country as experts in finances, and finally arrived at the conclusion that it would involve too much risk to place the islands on a gold basis, as suggested by the house bill. We believe that to do so would permit the Oriental countries to draw away our gold in great quantities, probably at a time when we could not spare it. A condition of this sort might prove a serious menace to our finances and might even drag us into complications in the Orient. The senate decided, for this reason, to continue in effect the present currency situation, so that the American silver dollar will be the standard in the Philippines. In regard to the native legislature, the house merely adopted the suggestion of Governor Taft, and we oppose this for reasons of public policy. Such an organization would not be able to accomplish anything, but it would afford the Filipinos, who, like all Oriental races, love to talk, an opportunity to deliver endless speeches in favor of Philippine independence. In other words, the legislature would be nothing more or less than an annex to the anti-imperialists in this country and would be a means of keeping up the troubles which our soldiers are gradually quelling. It would fill the islanders with false hopes and interfere with our plans of pacifying and educating them."

There is considerable nonsense in this statement. If the gold standard is a good thing for the United States, why should it not also be a good thing for the Philippines? The senate's objections to this portion of the house bill seems to be very weak. Equally nonsensical are the senator's remarks on the effect of giving the Filipinos a legislative body. Of course the members of the legislature would talk; but so do the members of the state legislatures. The talk would do no harm, while the establishment of this form of self-government would be a valuable education for the Filipinos and fit them for what must inevitably happen some day—the duty of governing themselves. Governor Taft suggested that a native legislature be provided for, because he believed it would assist in pacifying and educating them, and he is better authority on this pont than members of the isenate who have not been on the ground and know nothing about the conditions there, except by hearsay. The Filipinos will never be content with anything short of independence, and the sooner they are taught to assume the reins of government the better. If with the establishment of this legislature there was given the assurance that they would be treated as was Cuba and permitted to govern themselves as soon as they demonstrated their ability to conduct a stable and efficient government, the Philippine problem would be speedily solved. This is the Democratic program, and it is based on common sense and justice.

EXTENSIVE ADVERTISING.

One of the really wonderful features of the present age is the constantly increasing volume of newspaper advertising. Advertising has become a science. The amount of money that is being expended by merchants and manufacturers throughout the country to attract public attention is enormous. The interesting fact was brought out at the recent sale of the Philadelphia Record by auction for over $3,000,000 that one department store in Philadelphia, which is using a large amount of space in the Record daily, pays that paper alone over $100,000 a year, and it expends thousands of dollars for advertising yearly in other newspapers. It is said that some of the merchants in New York city expend over $2,000 a day in advertising.

That this extensive advertising pays is proven by the experience of those who have paid out large sums in order to attract public attention. Nearly every month new advertisers enter the field and begin the expenditure of large sums of money, and the new ideas and novel effects in advertising are really wonderful. Speaking of new ideas, the enormous success of "Uneeda" biscuits will be readily recalled. This success was due to the inventor of the word "Uneeda," and the extensive and attractive advertising which it received. Only a few months ago an experienced advertising man became associated with a cereal company in Buffalo, N. Y. The company proposed to put a new cereal food upon the market. Instead of adopting a name similar to other breakfast foods, this particular advertiser developed a new idea. He called his breakfast delicacy "Force Food." Having adopted this novel name, he proceeded to advertise it in a novel way all over the country and readers of The Herald have no doubt noticed this striking advertising. So tremendous has been the result of this advertising that the company now finds itself unable to supply the demand for its product, and has sent out letters to the newspapers of the country discontinuing its advertising for a short time because, although its present factory is working day and night, it is able to fill only half of its orders and is put in the position of simply creating a demand for substitute articles. Until increased facilities enable it to fill all orders, the company has decided to refrain from soliciting new business and therefore has discontinued its advertising.

The success of "Uneeda" biscuits and "Force" food are merely two instances of many cases of great businesses being being built up by extensive advertising. There are many other merchants and manufacturers who are spending liberally for advertising, and with excellent results. In fact, there seems to be no end to the growth and development of advertising. It is one of the wonders of the Twentieth entury.

RAILWAY BUILDING.

Very interesting is the report by the Railway Age of the railway building during the first six months of 1902. From this report it appears that the railway mileage of the United States has passed the 20,000-mile mark. The figures at the close of 1901 were approximately 199,525 miles, and the construction for the first six months of 1902 brings the total up to 201,839 miles, the track laid during the first half of this year on 155 lines aggregating 2314 miles. This is nearly 500 miles in excess of the new mileage for the first six months of 1901, when 1817 miles were were built. The total for the twelve months last year was 5222 miles, and if the same ratio is maintained this year it will readily be seen that the construction for the year 1902 will easily exceed 6000 miles. Tracklaying thus far this year has been distributed throughout forty-one states and territories, the following states reporting no new mileage, although lines are under construction in all of these with the exception of two or three New England states: New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Jersey, Delaware, Wyoming, Nevada and Idaho. The amount of new track credited to Minnesota is 26.81 per cent, divided among three railways.

While the new mileage is widely distributed, the greater portion of it is located in the Southwest, the five states and territories of Arkansas, Texas, New Mexico, the Indian territory and Oklahoma territory contributing no less than 984 miles. The eight states and territories which are usually classed as Southwestern states have built 1143 miles of new line, which is nearly half the mileage for the entire country. Other groupings are as follows: New England states, 21 miles; Middle states, 121 miles; Central Northern states, 196 miles; South Atlantic states, 287 miles; gulf and Mississippi valley states, 191 miles; Northwestern states, 183 miles; Pacific states, 172 miles. The states west of the Mississippi river have built 1613 miles, and the states south of the Ohio and east of the Mississippi, 380 miles, making a total of 1993 miles of new line completed in the states south of the Ohio and west of the Mississippi river.

While many of the large systems of the country are building important extensions, the majority of them have laid but little track so far, the first six months of the year having been devoted largely to surveying and grading.

The new mileage for this year embraced in the Age's table does not include many logging and private roads which are being built for temporary use, but as large as the total is exclusive of such lines, it will undoubtedly be increased by returns from a number of companies which have not yet reported, but which have doubtless laid some track. The work of grading is being pushed on several thousand miles of new lines in various sections of the country, and tracklaying is just commencing or will begin during July in many places. A good many lines report difficulty in securing rails, and this is the only thing that will prevent the completion of 6000 miles or over of new road during the calendar year 1902.

JUDGE WINDOM.

The appointment of William L. Windom as judge of the municipal court to succeed Judge Edson, who has resigned in order to devote his whole time to his congressional candidacy, has met with a considerable degree of approval, as Mr. Windom is personally popular and has many friends among the politicians who have been much interested in the outcome of teh little contest for the position.

For a political appointment, Mr. Windom's selection is a very good one, and he has been heartily congratulated upon obtaining the governor's favor in this respect. The unexpired term of Judge Edson covers about a year and a half, but Mr. Windom's tenure of office under this appointment extends only until the next municipal election.

THE COAL STRIKE.

As the complications in the coal strike multiply, the greater are the chances of the miners to win out in their contest with stiff-necked operators, who refuse to arbitrate the differences which have arisen. The government is a heavy user of coal, and it may be possible that some effect may be produced by the recommendation of a bill by a house committee, which provides for a board of arbitration to settle just such disputes. In case it is passed the operators would be compelled to arbitrate whenever differences of vital importance arose. The treasury department of the national government is the only large purchaser o coal in the government which has not a clause in its contract for coal which relieves the contractor in case of strikes or disaster. The contractors for coal for this department said recently that while the should carry out all contracts for the current fiscal year to the letter, it was liable to ruin his business to enter into the contract which had been awarded him by the treasury for the coming year on the strength of bids opened on the first of May. At the time of putting in his bid he was required to put up a certified check for a moderate sum, but before the beginning of the new fiscal year, on July 1, he would have to furnish satisfactory bond in $8000 for the performance of his contract. The treasury used soft coal almost exclusively, and whereas his bid was $3.16 a ton, he is now obliged to pay $3 net for it at the mines and $1.60 for bringing it to Washington, involving a dead loss of $1.44 on every ton at present prices. As the contract has not yet been formally executed, he has appealed to the department to insert in it the "strike and disaster" clause of the other department contracts. Whether or not this concession is made in consideration of the peculiar circumstances, the department will certainly insert the clause in contracts for future years.

The District of Columbia government is in the worst plight of any of the coal-using public agencies. It did not get around to making its anthracite contracts for the coming fiscal year till the strike was fairly on, with the result that it had to reject all bids, as prices had jumped up to $8.94 a ton. The departments generally had closed for anthracite at figures ranging from $4.20 to $6, according to size. The district must, of course, keep its pumping works going for the water supply of the city and suburbs, and its fire department bunkers filled up, whatever else goes by the board. It must, therefore, take its chances of buying small quantities in the open market and advertising for new bids when the pending troubles shall have subsided. All these things go to show the necessity of congresisonal action to do away with labor troubles, and it is to be hoped the bill recommended will pass.

Students of crime cannot fail to be interested in the fact that the manufacturing city of Woonsocket, R. I., has not had a single case of murder or manslaughter in the past fifteen years. Such is the statement of the Woonsocket correspondent of the Providence Journal. Woonsocket now has about 30,000 inhabitants, and of those probably two-thirds are employes of cotton and woolen mills. Over one-third of the people are French-Canadians in origin, while comparatively recent immigration from Europe has been plentifully distributed through the population. The character of the city is hustling, and there is everywhere a keen scent for business. That the place should not have had a murder case in fifteen years is the more striking when considered in comparison with the murders of a shocking nature that have occurred in recent years in the rural districts of Northern Rhode Island.

An interesting woman, Mrs. Elizabeth Cooper McIntire, aged 102, has just died in Philadelphia, with teeth, eyes and faculties remarkably preserved to the last. Often she referred to meeting Lafayette in 1824, and recounted the pleasure experienced in shaking hands with the French general. When her brother, Lieut. Francis Cooper, was stationed at Fort Mifflin during the war of 1812, she made frequent visits there, and during the civil war was one of the assistants at the old cooper shop refreshment building, where the Union soldiers were so well cared for by patriotic women.

Utility in Decorations.

The New York supreme court has decided that a postal card is not libelous unless it can be proved that the offensive writing has been read by others than the writer and the recipient. Any other view presupposes that the postoffice clerks and others through whose hands a card may pass read it. So postal card libels will be very hard to prove, for no one in the postoffice or out of it will confess to having read the contents of the postal cards.

There is no law compelling the council to order the paving of East Superior street with either asphalt or bituminous macadam. Both are controlled by trusts. The cedar block pavement is pronounced by experts to be the most satisfactory. The material is at hand, and nine-tenths of the cost of a cedar block pavement would be kept at home. This is a point worthy of serious consideration.

An ingenious calculator informs perspiring humanity that we get a pitiful proportion of solar heat; only one 2,000,000,000th of it reaches the earth. Even this gets here with difficulty, having to pass through "a vast and empty refrigerator whose temperature is 200 degrees below zero." Facts like these should put an end to all complaining when excessive heat comes.

The suicide of an Indian because his mother-in-law whipped him, has been attributed by his tribesmen to the white man's civilization. The position does not appear to be well taken, says the Topeka State Journal. The teaching of the Caucasian would have been more likely to lead him to shoot the old lady.

The weary days would not be half so long,
For I would sing it every day, to you—
If I but knew.

If I but knew
The words that would express
How much I love you now, I will confess
I'd write each day a ream of words or two;
If I but knew.

If I but knew
A way to make you be
Always content with me, you'd quickly see
Me use my secret; ah, that's what I'd do,
If I but knew.

If I but knew

Wireless Telegraphy and Cables.

By PROF. A. SLABY, Inventer of the Slaby-Arco Wireless System.

Only foolish people are easily alarmed and seriously believe that the wireless spark telegraph system will supplant the submarine cable.

Wireless telegraphy will in no event interfere with the cables. It is ridiculous for the shareholders of cable stock to become frightened. When the electric light was introduced, holders of gas stock were frightened, but what is the result? Gas is used in overwhelmingly larger quantities than when electricity was introduced.

The objection to trans-Atlantic telegraphy by ether waves is that such strong currents as Mr. Marconi, for instance, could send from Poldhu interrupt communication over the entire ocean. When two boards are tuned to receive or send messages and a heavy current comes along, it destroys the communication.

I do not claim that my system is superior to Mr. Marconi's, but that I arrive at the same results by different construction, which does not involve transmitters from one coil to another. Some time ago the Marconi system was offered to the German government for $500,000. The government rejected the offer, and the Slaby-Arco system is employed not only by the German navy, but by the navies of Sweden and Norway, Denmark and Russia, and is also used in Austria, Belgium, Portugal and Mexico.

While Mr. Marconi zealously pursued his experiments and worked secretly, I was moved to publish the results of my investigation to the scientific world.

Half a year before Mr. Marconi explained his methods before the Society of Arts—on Dec. 22, 1900—I sent two messages between Charlottenburg and Schoeweide, using the most trying method for receiving messages—namely, a lightning rod.

A large station, or rather a number of stations, are being erected on the shores of the North sea and receive messages, but there will be no attempt to send messages across the ocean, as Mr. Marconi is tryin to do from Cornwall.

Rural Free Delivery as an Educational Factor.

By Congressman LEMUEL P. PAGETT, of Tennessee.

The benefits of the establishment of rural free delivery in any section of the country are manifold. I regard it as a great educational factor. It not only enlarges and expands the mail facilities, but marks the development and evolution of newspaper and magazine reading wherever it is established.

It also stimulates an interest in better roads and encourages better public roads. It also enhances the value of of property in the rural districts and promotes happiness among the country people in their satisfaction with their surroundings.

Eventually I believe that the rural free delivery will discourage the tendency to congregate in towns and cities and will encourage contentment with rural liferural life.

It is also one of the evidences of our advancing civilization and marks the progress of the country in social life.

Money, How It Brings True Succss In Life.

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr.

It is a habit of thought in business that the man who gets the most money is the most successful; but, though he may get great sums of money honestly and legitimately by his own efforts, that money is of no real use to him unless he uses it in the right way, and it may be a great curse to him, and he may achieve no real success whatever.

One man may hold high office and may make a failure of life by misusing his power, while another may serve the public good and so be a success. The lawyer may be skillful and may have many important cases, but unless he makes a wise, just and good use of his talents he is not by any means a success.

If you believe what Christ said of success, you must agree that a successful life is one that has been made the most of in the way of doing for others.

The highest success is not what one can make, but how one can make oneself most useful. Money, power and place are circumstances more or less useful according to how a man uses them.

American Art and the Tariff.

By M. JEAN LEON GEROME, Famous French Painter and Sculptor.

American art is now at a standstill and perhaps slightly degenerating. It can make no progress as long as the present prohibitive tariff upon works of art obtains.

French painters would not take their works to America either for exhibition or for sale as long as a tariff based upon ignorant philistinism prevents their purchase.

American artists who do their work in France are also badly treated by their own country. I know an American who had a work painted in New York, brought it over here and now cannot get it back to New York without paying a large sum. There would be less need for American artists to come abroad if great works of art were admitted free of duty into the United States. There is a great deal of talent among American students, but but a premium upon ignorance tariff dwarfs it.

Sculpture is treated even worse than painting. This is all the more deplorable as the United States is lamentably deficient in sculpture. There are a few good American sculptures, yet the squares and public parks of your great cities have hardly any monuments.

Labor's New Cabinet Position.

By United States Senator BOIES PENROSE, of Penrose.

The needs and requirements of American labor and, of course the most important question confronting the government. American labor is entotled to what governmental supervision may be desired or required.

The new department of commerce and industry is intended to cover the labor field. In fact, labor questions will be one of the most important matters that will be dealt with by this department.

It has been proposed in the past to establish a separate cabinet dealing particularly with labor matters, and such a proposition is now being agitated by labor leaders throughout the country.

It is, however, the opinion of the majority in congress that the pending bill for an additional cabinet position, by creating a department of commerce and industry, will be amply sufficient for the present and meet the desires and requirements of organized labor.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: The way a bachelor learns so much he ought not to know is by never telling where he learns it.

To save his life a man can't make his wife distinguish the difference between his being cross and sick.

TEA TRADE

Discussed By the Leading Tea Merchants of Japan.

Tokio, June 11, (via San Francisco,) June 28.—An important meeting of tea merchants throughout Japan was held at Shidzoutka, Japan, early in June, about 300 being present. Among those present were Mr. Hirata, minister of agriculture and commerce, and Baron Komura, minister of foreign affairs. Baron Komura delivered an address in which he said:

"America is the best customer of the tea world. Three-quarters of the total production of the world is consumed in the United States. Despite this fact Japan tea trade with America appears to have made no progress during the last ten years. Ten years ago the exports of tea to America amounted to 6,500,000 yen in value which is also the case at present, though the population of America has greatly increased in the meantime. Secondly the Russians are great tea consummers and if the Japanese pay attention towards Russia, that country will became a good customer of Japan tea."

Mr. Okami Kahei, chairman of the Central Tea guild, said: "The future prospects of Japan tea in the United States are by no means reassuring as the tea plantations in South Carolina and other parts of America have made remarkable progress of late years and it is not at all improbable that the American government may some day be compelled to impose a heavy duty on foreign tea for the protection of the domestic industry."

America's Summer Resorts

When it begins to get hot and dry, one's thoughts naturally turn toward the lakes and rivers and the seashore of New York and New England, and we begin to wonder how much it would require of time and money to make the trip. A lot of these questions are answered and a lot of information given free in "Four-Track Series," No. 3, "America's Summer Resorts." Sent on receipt of a 2-cent stamp, by George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, New York Central & Hudson River railroad, Grand Central station, New York.

SOMETHING DEFINITE

Will Be Presented to Vatican on Friar Question.

New York, June 28.—Definite American propositions about the Philippines will be presented to the vatican, perhaps tomorrow, says a Rome dispatch to the Tribune. They have been delayed because Governor Taft was awaiting a cable message from Washington to clear up some points. Governor Taft, it is stated, will remind the vatican of previous withdrawals of the friars from other countries as desired in the Philippines. For instance, when France occupied Tunis, French monas, led by Cardinal Lavigerie, were sussituted for the Italian friars. After Italy occupied Erythrea the French Lazarists there were replaced by Italian Capuchins with the complete approbation of the vatican.

SHIP MAGNATES MEET.

Discuss Economic Administration of Shipping Combine.

New York, June 28.—With the departure of Messrs. Clement A. Griscom, P. A. B. Widener and William L. Elkins from London, cables the correspondent there of the Herald, to join their respective yachts at Southampton, it became known that these three gentlemen had attended a very important meeting of moving spirits in the trans-Atlantic shipping syndicate.

This meeting also was attended by J. P. Morgan, Bruce Ismay and Bernard Baker, of the Atlantic Transport line.

It is understood the subject of an economic administration of the different companies was discussed. It practically was decided that the different offices shall be, in a certain degree, consolidater in future, effecting a great saving in the way of officers, clerk hire, etc.

In the fall, another meeting will be held in New York at which time all other questions, including that of agencies, will be discussed. It is quite probable many small agencies will be abolished. There will be no change made in the sailing schedules of the various lines until next year, there being a number of existing contracts which must be fulfilled before that can be done.

PENSIONS GRANTED.

Washington, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following pensions have been granted: Original—Theophilus Wilson, of Duluth, 6. Increase—William W. Huntley, of Hancock, $10.

The Whirl Of Politics

St. Paul, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Preparations for the big fight of next Tuesday have been going on all of this week, and while few of the delegates have reached this city, yet from the outside districts considerable work has been done.

The main fight, of course, will be on the state auditorship, though Dar F. Reese has no walkaway for renomination to the office of clerk of the supreme court.

He is handicapped by a delegation from Ramsey county that was not chosen directly in his interests. It is for him, of course, but it is tied up so he will not be able to handle any of it for use in gaining strength elsewhere. Attempts have been made to line the solid delegation up for Iversen for state auditor, and though that game has been blocked, the delegation was chosen indirectly with that end in view, and it will be more or less of a menace to the other candidates. There can be no manner of question that certain business interests that are directly interested in "a continuation of the present course of things in the state auditor's office," have been working to line up votes against both Halden and Jacobson.

It was tried in Hennepin and it failed there almost entirely. The plan to have an instructed delegation of 112 for Iverson met most determined opposition, as a result of which both Halden and Jacobson will have votes in the delegation, and many prophecy that Halden will have a majority of that delegation.

It was more successful in Ramsey county, though the extent of its success cannot yet be measured even there. Halden and Jacobson will get votes theer also, but they are not likely to get the same proportion as they will in Hennepin, unless things are arranged so that Reese can "play ball" with his home delegation with a little more freedom than he has now.

The effect of all this may be to force Halden and Jacobson into a defensive, if not an offensive, alliance, strange as this may seem. St. Louis and Lac Qui Parle appear to be strange bed-fellows, but that is what politics is said to make, among other things. The apparently hostile attitude of the business interests that want to see a continuation of the present system in the state auditor's office, and that see in Sam Iverson a candidate that they believe will stand without hitching, is more than likely to consolidate the issue into one of whether or not there is to be a change in the state auditor's office. That may mean that Halden and Jacobson, the objects of this hostility, will have to stand together more or less. While there is no such thing now in any sense of the word, many stranger things have happened in the devious course of the history of American politics.

• • •

Halden stock is at par, and rising every day. He has strong friends in the Twin Cities. He has a stronger and more forceful contingent from his home neighborhood than either of the other candidates, though Jacobson stands next to him in this respect. Iverson's home delegation, from Fillmore county, is not instructed for him, though most of it will vote for him, and he has no solid, concentrated engine of political warfare like the flying wedge that St. Louis county's gallant forty will be for Halden. Halden will get votes from all over the state. He will dip into Iverson's territory, and he will dip somewhat into Jacobson's. He will be there with the goods in the neutral territory of the Third congresisonal district. He will have many votes in the Fourth and Fifth districts, which include the Twin City delegations. He will hold at least the balance of power in the Sixth, Eighth and Ninth districts. If present indications are not deceptive he will come out of the first ballot with at least his third of the delegates. It is hardly probable that the nomination will be made on the first or second ballots, and there may be many.

• • •

Mr. Halden, with Senator E. B. Hawkins, the chairman of the St. Louis county delegation, have been on the ground all of the week, and others were expected here today. The Halden headquarters, rooms 48 and 49, Windsor hotel, will not be opened until Monday morning, as there will be few delegates in before then.

• • •

Jacobson's strength is not by any means to be despised, and whether he is nominated or not, he will be a power in the convention. He has over 100 instructed delegates, and next to Halden's his following is the most personal and the strongest. Both Halden and Jacobson have 100 votes to swing for any purpose where Iverson has not fifty, and while it is generally supposed that the main fight will be on the state auditorship, that will be a bitter one, and it may happen that if some of the other people do not play ball properly things will be thrown wide open in the convention.

• • •

J. F. Jacobson arrived in St. Paul yesterday, and he will open headquarters at the Windsor Monday. Ray W. Jones opened his headquarters there Thursday, and the other candidates will open up Monday.

• • •

Reese is opposed by C. A. Pidgeon, of Wright county, who is confident of his nomination. Jacob L. Gish, of Le Suer, is a late candidate, but his friends say he can line up the entire Third district for himself. Capt. Evcrett will have votes from the southern part of the state. There is material for a proper contest on this office if the right combination of events takes place.

• • •

Even Ray W. Jones, who has had the field all to himself for lieutenant-governor, has a suspicion of opposition. Senator E. J. Jones, of Morris, has been endorsed for the place by his home county of Stevens, and there are rumors that quiet work has been done for him that may show up at the convention strongly.

• • •

A very funny incident happened at the Democratic state convention Wednesday, but very few people became aware of it until it got told about a day or so later.

Lars M. Rand, of Minneapolis, is an alderman from the Sixth ward, a wheelhorse of the party there, in short, the entire thing in his particular section, and he would not give it up to become president of the United States. During the convention somebody came into the hall looking for him, and in the big hall, with its thousand or so of people, it was impossible to locate him. So the man went up to E. F. Stevens, of Minneapolis, who was a delegate.

"Do you know where Lars Rand is?" he inquired.

"No," repiled Stevens, "but I'll find him for you."

It happened at that moment that nominations for secretary of state were being made. Mr. Stevens rose to his feet.

"Mr. Chairman," he said, "I have the honor to place in nomination for the office of secretary of state the name of Hon. Lars M. Rand, of Hennepin county."

Several counties seconded the nomination, but Mr. Rand jumped to his feet and excitedly began to explain that he could not accept.

"There he is," said Mr. Stevens, quietly but triumphantly. That was the way he fulfilled his promise, and that was how it was Mr. Rand was placed before the convention.

• • •

Democratic organization for the campaign will not begin for two or three weeks yet, and it is not yet known who will manage the campaign.

Leonard A. Rosing, the nominee of the party, professes confidence that he will be elected.

"No plan for the campaign has been made so far," he said to The Herald yesterday afternoon, "and there will be none until the state committee organizes, which will be in two or three weeks. It is my intention to make an aggressive campaign, and to win the election. The Republican platform must be one of accomplishment, for it has been in power two years and has had all the opportunity in the world. What has it done that can be placed in such a platform? It is a record of incompetency, and wastefulness of opportunity, and no glittering platform can hide it."

• • •

J. Adam Bede is here hunting for Halden, and he says he has put his congressional campaign to one side until the state convention is over and Halden is nominated, when he will make a fresh start.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

LOCAL POLITICS.

Judge Edson Will Cover the District Soon.

Judge Edson announces that he will soon make a tour of the district in the interest of his candidacy. He claims to be well satisfied with the outlook and the assurances he is receiving from different parts of the district.

J. Adam Bede announced last week that he would not begin his campaign until after the state convention; that he would go down there and hustle for Odin Halden instead of thinking of his own fight. Many are disposed to consider his statement as to opening his campaign after the state convention as a characteristic Bede joke. They think that Bede has been conducting his campaign for this nomination for the past four years.

• • •

The appointment of William L. Windom to be judge of the municipal court upon the retirement of W. D. Edson on Aug. 1 was more of a surprise for the promptness with which Governor Van Sant made it following Mr. Edson's resignation, than because of his selection. Governor Van Sant is evidently learning that by acting quickly in such cases he avoids a lot of wire-pulling that is embarrassing to him and kindles feelings that often result in much bitterness.

• • •

As for Mr. Windom's appointment, it seems to give general satisfaction. The members of his own faction are very much delighted, for they have always thought much of Mr. Windom. The members of the opposite side smile good-naturedly, of course, for what else could they do? It is suspected, however, despite their urbane manner, that they are not particularly overjoyed.

• • •

It is practically a certainty that Senator Daugherty will be a candidate for the Republican nomination for senator in the Fifty-first district. This will give George R. Layhourn a lively fight, but, if his courage is oozing at all, he does not show it.

• • •

P. E. Dowling has filed his affidavit announcing his desire to get the Republican nomination for representative in the Fiftieth district.

• • •

Among those who filed affidavits for nominations this week are: L. H. Whipple, for treasurer; Judge W. G. Bonham, for judge of probate; Dr. S. H. Boyer, for coroner; and Andrew Johnson, for auditor. All are Republicans.

• • •

Not much is heard as to who the Democratic candidate for the congressional nomination will be. Senator Charles O. Baldwin is probably in the greatest demand, but does not seem inclined to consider the matter. John Jenswold is another strong man who is mentioned, but he does not seem to have any more inclination to go after it than does Mr. Baldwin.

Joseph Ward Reynolds is a man whom many of the Democrats would be glad to see run, but it is not thought that he takes the idea at all seriously. Charles d'Autremont is regarded as most likely to be persuaded to make the race.

The primary election law makes it much more difficult to bring a candidate before the people than did the old system. Now the man himself is forced in a certain sense to take the initiative. He must file an affidavit expressing his desire for the nomination. He cannot sit back and say to his friends, "Go ahead and nominate me if you want to, or if you can." He must, in a way, appear wanting it and this fact will deter some men from becoming candidates. They will be willing to appear as receptive candidates, but will balk at making an affidavit of a desire to get the nomination.

• • •

The Aitkin Republican, prompted by the announcement that Judge Edson is a candidate for congress, reviews the congressional situation thusly:

"Judge Edson, of Duluth, has finally consented to become a candidate for congress and will resign from the bench and try to head off J. Adam Bede. Judge Edson is undoubtedly popular with the Duluth people, but his acquaintance in the district outside of St. Louis county is somewhat limited, and to quite an extent will he be handicapped in his canvass.

"The Duluth Republicans have been trying to drum up a candidate against Bede ever since it became known that Judge Morris would not run again, and they have finally been successful. The Duluth people do not seem to be inclined to "tote fair." In '92 Judge Searle was the Republican candidate for congress, but because he did not live in the city by the unsalted sea he failed of election. In '94 Duluth brought forward Charley Towne, and the Repubnicans of the district turned out and helped to elect him. Towne went over to the enemy in '96, and the district was told by the Duluth people that Morris was the only man who could hope to win out against him. Morris was elected by a narrow margin; and no one contributed to the result more than J. Adam Bede. In the two succeeding campaigns Mr. Bede was also a strong factor in our congressman's success; and now that he is a candidate for congress, he has weighty claims upon the Republicans of Duluth, especially the friends of Judge Morris. If gratitude is a virtue of the Duluth Republicans, they will turn out and accord him a hearty support at the primaries.

"Mr. Bede was a resident of Duluth for a number of years, but now resides at Pine City. That he is an able man there is no question, and if he should be elected to congress he will be as good a citizen of Duluth as of any portion of the district, so far as securing legislation affecting that city is concerned."

• • •

"Old" Pease, of the Anoka Union, cannot get over his little grudge against Duluth. Here are some of his affectionate references in the last issue:

"Hog, thy name is Duluth."

"Duluth cannot bear to see anything within reach get away from it."

"Finally Duluth has brought out its candidate for congress, and his name is not J. Adam."

• • •

The Anoka Herald is not so confident of Bede's ability to carry off the nomination, for it remarks:

"J. Adam Bede continues to laugh his opposition out of court. Bede's good nature seems inexhaustible, but it may be brought to a test before the middle of September, if we can believe stories that float this way from Duluth."

• • •

The Moose Lake Star is planted as firmly as ever under the J. Adam Bede stadard. It remarks:

"Judge Edson may be a very fine man and have all the necessary qualifications to become a congressman, but we believe the same as quite a few others that he is several laps in the rear of J. Adam, and that he will be defeated and redefeated as many times as Mr. Bede will be eletced and re-elected to represent the Eighth congressional district of Minnesota."

• • •

The Dassel, Meeker county, Anchor takes a shy at affairs out of its own ballwak after this fashion:

"J. Adam Bede at least has found a man who will oppose him for the congresisonal nomination. The gentleman took this method perhaps of establishing a reputation at least, if he did not have serious thoughts of success against Mr. Bede."

• • •

The Virginia Enterprise does not fall entirely into the Edson wagon, but remarks:

"The fight is now on, and while J. Adam Bede, from the wilds of Pine, has secured a lead over all comers by his early start, it is not improbable that he may yet have a run for his money, even if he does not bunt into a stone wall."

• • •

The Hinckley Enterprise evidently thinks there is a "gang" in Duluth, for it says:

"The Duluth gang has finally found a victim to run against J. Adam Bede in the person of Judge Wm. D. Edson of Duluth. It has not been a question of the best man with the "gang" but 'anything to beat Bede.' The people of the district outside of Duluth are in sympathy with J. Adam, and no low down political tricks of the Duluth schemers will go."

• • •

The Carlton County Vidette also has the idea that Duluth Republicans are avaricious. It says:

"Duluth cuts considerable ice all the year 'round, and ought to be able to keep cool as the political kettle begins to stepe. Duluth wants Odin Halden for state auditor, and Duluth is not alone in this connection. J. Adam Bede wants to go to congress, and the Eighth district wants him to go. If Duluth is bent on bringing another candidate of the same complexion (politically) as Bede, it will make a serious mistake, and one that the Republican faction of Duluth cannot afford."

• • •

Beltrami county is no longer in this district, but it once was, and may possibly be replaced by that fact, claim some familiarity with Duluth Republican politicians. Here is what the Beltrami County Advocate says of the congressional situation:

"Now that Senator Daugherty has positively declined to make a run for the Republican congressional nomination in the Eighth district, the Duluth Republicans are exceedingly joyful over the fact that their Judge William D. Edson has consented to become a candidate for Page Morris' seat. Duluth Republicans have had a cinch on the congressional seat of their district so long that they have almost forgotten that any person residing outside the incorporate limits of that city is eligible to that seat."

SIR THOMAS LIPTON.

Sir Thomas Lipton, whose elevation to a baronetcy has just been announced in the list of coronation honors, was created a knight in 1898 in consideration of his remarkable philanthropies and his notable benefactions to workingmen. The new baronet was born of Irish parents in Glasgow, and grew rich in the tea business. He owns immense tea gardens in Ceylon, and by his industry and liberal methods has made good tea cheap, while enriching himself. Sir Thomas' fame in America, however, is due to his activity as a yachtsman and his noble though futile efforts to retake the America's cup. For many years he has enjoyed the friendship of King Edward.

SCHRAMM CHILDREN.

Wonderful Child Artists to Appear In Concert.

Next Tuesday evening, July 1, at the Pilgrim Congregational church the famous Scramm children, Paola, aged 12 years, and Karla, aged 8 years, will be heard in a piano recital. These children are the wonder of all musicians. They play the most difficult compositions of the great masters and play them with a technique and an artistic finish that is the delight of every musician who hears them. More marvelous even than that is Paola's gift of improvisation. She will improvise from themes submitted to her during the evening. Artists who have sent themes to her from which to improvise are Joseph Joachim, Saudon, Nellie Melba, Leave, G. Campanari, Arthur Sullivan, Mentzel, Menschel and Alvin Schroeder.

The concert will be given under the auspices of the Saturday club, and the program is as follows:

Schubert ..... Impromptu, op. 142, No. 3
Chopin ..... Valse, op. 70, No. 4
Chopin ..... Nocturne, op. 27, No. 2
Mendelssohn ..... Rondo Capricioso
Mozart ..... Sonata, C major
Durand ..... Concert Valse

Played by Paloma's little sister Karla.

Liszt ..... Liebestraum No. 3
Schumann-Liszt ..... Fruehlingsnacht
Paloma ..... Caprice op. 30
Chopin ..... Berceuse
Brahms ..... Hungarian dance No. 6
Moszkowski ..... Valse Brilliante
Wagner-Bendel ..... Walthers Preislied
Schubert-Liszt ..... Serenade
Paloma—"Battle of the Giants," duet op 31

Played by Paloma and Karla.

Those who wish to submit themes for Paloma to improvise from, are requested to prepare them during the first interval. They should be of not over three or four bars in the Treble clef, plainly signed.

During the second interval the motifs will be collected and handed to Paloma. She will draw one and improvise from it.

MAINE'S WHITE MONSTER.

News comes from the headwaters of the Kennebec river that the "old Moxie moose," as the strange white monster of that region is called, has been seen again, having suddenly emerged from his winter quarters.

This moose for many years has been the marvel of Maine hunters, both on account of his color and great size, and because of the fact that he seems to bear a charmed life.

Hundreds of men who know how to shoot have fired at him from all distances and with all kinds of arms, and yet he has dodged the bullets and gone on unharmed. He is an ugly customer, as many a hunter whom he has treed can testify. He is easily tracked, as half of the near hind hoof is missing, but no one has ever been very anxious to get very close to him.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar W. Markell gave a most delightful "Camp-supper" at "Witchwood," their summer home, home, Tuesday evning in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ray and Mrs. Chandler. The long table was beautifully decorated with wild roses. The place cards were of birch bark with a wild rose woven in it. A game of six-handed euchre was indulged in after supper an dthe prizes were won by Mrs. J. D. Ensign and George Spencer.

The guests that were bidden were:
Messrs and Mesdames—
Clinton Markell,
O. H. Simonds,
George aBrnum,
Robert Ray,
Mrs. Chandler,
George Spencer,
J. D. Ensign,
J. N. Upham.

The Card club was entertained Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. William Dalrymple on East Superior street.

An enjoyable social affair of the summer season will be the mid-summer reunion of the high school class of 1904 at the old pavilion on Park point, the evening of June 30. The committee having the event in charge is comprised of Miss Jessie Ames and Winifred Scott and Bailey Mowrer, Herbert Shurvey and Walter Dash. All members of the class since its organization have been extended an invitation.

A picnic was given on Park point Wednesday in honor of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Clinton Markell. The guests left the dock by boat about 11 o'clock in the morning, and selected a delightful spot for the dinner. Social amusements were indulged in and a jolly time was had. A birthday cake with "sixteen candles" was placed near the guest of honor at the dinner, and flowers were presented by her friends. Those receiving invitations were:
Mesdames—
Clinton Markell,
J. D. Ensign,
George Spencer,
Chandler,

Mrs. Charles E. Adams, of 1109 East Second street, is entertaining her aunt, Mrs. George Cribb, of Milwaukee.

A very pretty wedding took place Thursday evening, when Miss Grace Sherwood and Walter O. Flodin were made man and wife. The marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Sherwood, of 315 Seventh avenue east, at 8 o'clock, Rev. Dr. S. P. Long being the officiating clergyman. The decorations were very elaborate, in green and white. The bride was handsomely gowned. After the ceremony a reception was held, and the happy couple left for Lake Minnetonka, where they will spend their honeymoon. Mr. and Mrs. Flodin will be at home after Aug. 1 at Sandstone, Minn., where the groom is engaged in business.

Dr. and Mrs. W. C. Schulze have gone to Colorado Springs.

Mrs. Thomas C. Dymond, of St. Louis, is visiting Mrs. W. H. Denham, 215 East Third street.

A unique green and white wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Griffith, Munger homestead, last Wednesday evening, when Mai Belle Stevenson and Roderick G. Henderson were united in marriage. Rev. Dr. T. H. Cleland, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated. At 8:45 Miss Ethel Cannon sounded the chords of the "Lohengrin" wedding march, and Mrs. E. W. Russel, the matron of honor, proceeded slowly through the front parlor to the hall, where she received the ten bridesmaids, Misses Ida Kennebrooke, Halverta Standau, Anne Christianson, Mamie Chambers, Emma Katka, Emma Clymer, Maude Clymer, Alice Marks, Jessie Nichols and Ethel Cannon, and conducted them to their places. Immediately after them the bride entered, leaning on the arm of Mr. Griffith and looking very pretty in her bridal dress of French lawn. She was met by the groom, escorted by the pastor, entering the parlors from the rear hall.

The ring ceremony was used and was beautifully impressive. The bride carried an arm bouquet of bride's roses, which was later thrown, being caught by Miss Ida Kennebrooke.

The decorations were very elaborate and lent a charming effect to the scene. Refreshments of moulded ices, cakes and mints, with the monogram of the bride and groom upon them, were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Henderson left on the night train to spend a few days in the Twin Cities. About forty friends of the couple were present at the ceremony. The bride's mother, Mrs. D. B. Stevenson, of Terre Haute, Ind., was present, while a large number of congratulatory telegrams from Terre Haute, the bride's former home, were received by Mr. and Mrs. Henderson.

Misses Eleanor and Charlotte Partridge and Miss Marguerite Taylor left yesterday for a trip down the lakes on the steamer W. L. Brown.

Miss Maggie McElroy, of Carleton, Minn., and G. E. Carroll, of Cloquet, will be married at Carlton next Monday morning. Rev. Giroux, of Cloquet, will perform the ceremony at the Catholic church. Miss Mary McElroy, a sister of the bride, will be the bridesmaid, and G. W. Munler, of this city, will be best man. Both of the young people have lived in Duluth. Mr. Carroll is the ticket agent of the Union depot at Cloquet. Misses Blanche Boucher, Mayme Boucher, Louise Boucher and Mrs. Boucher, of Minneapolis, will attend the wedding.

HIS EYES DANCE

When His Good Drink Comes.

A food that will nourish and furnish all the food required to rear a baby is evidently easy food for an adult to digest, and is especially applicable where ordinary coffee does not agree.

The wife of a Congregational minister gives an experience: "It is rather curious, the manner in which I came to adopt Postum for my baby. My husband used to be troubled greatly with bilious headaches and extreme nervousness. This was about five years ago. We concluded that coffee and tea were the cause if his trouble, and so gave Postum Food Coffee a trial. At first we did not like it because it was not boiled long enough and seemed weak and tasteless, but after preparing it properly, and that is easy, we became very fond of it, and now can honestly say we prefer it to any coffee or tea.

"The old headaches and nervousness have disappeared and we both enjoy very much better health.

"When one of our children was a year old he would not drink milk, so we tried him on Postum Coffee, and from the first he liked it and it agreed with him perfectly, so Postum has been his drink now for over four years.

"About ten months ago a baby boy came to our house. I was, of course, anxious to have good nourishment for him, and so drank from five to eight cups of Postum during the day. This with a little Grape-Nuts Food each day was all the nourishment I took, and although the baby weighed only five pounds at birth, he weighed twelve and one-half pounds at three months, and at four months fifteen pounds. Now he weighs twenty-three pounds.

"About three weeks ago the little fellow suddenly weaned himself, much to our surprise. I tried him on cow's milk, but he would not have it. I then tried a certain baby food, then another, but he would have neither. I felt anxious about him, but remembering experimenting with another boy with Postum, I gave him some, which he drank with the greatest relish. It agreed with him perfectly, so he lived on it for one week. Since then he has learned to eat a little other food, but he prefers Postum Coffee to anything else, and looks perfectly delighted when he sees me coming with it. I said to other mothers, 'I wish the Postum company could see baby drink their coffee, it would certainly please them.' It agrees with him so perfectly that I shall continue to have him drink it to his heart's content. I don't like to have my name printed, but you can say I am a Congregational pastor's wife." Name and address given by Postum company, Battle Creek, Mich.

West End Club Thinks There Are Several Good Chances.

Discusses Manufactories That It Is Believed Will Pay.

Will Arrange to Care For Excursionists---Street Improvement.

The first steps toward investigating the field for a paper box factory at the West End were taken by the Business Men's association last evening. The subject was broached by E. Nelson, one of the proprietors of the knitting works at the West End, who has been looking into the matter for some days past and who believes that the head of the lakes offers a splendid field for such an industry. Mr. Nelson says that there are innumerable uses to which paper boxes are put by various interests in the two cities. His firm uses about 20,000 yearly of various sizes, and all of these are now shipped in by rail from St. Paul, which is the nearest point for securing them. The association took an enthusiastic interest in the project, and a committee, consisting of J. J. Moe, E. Nelson and M. A. Fedje, was appointed to investigate further as to the demand and see if the right kind of a man could be found to start a factory.

Another project suggested by J. J. Moe also received favorable consideration, and action will shortly be taken to investigate its merits further. This is to secure an institution to manufacture wrappers, waists and shirts for the retail trade at the head of the lakes. Mr. Moe said that there is not a dry goods merchant in the city that does not have every year a surplus stock of fabrics that he would gladly have made up into wrappers, waists or shirts to dispose of. At the present time the merchants have to buy these things in the East, and the cloth that could be utilized in their making lies on the shelves in the stores. He held that it required very little if any capital to start an institution of the kind, and cited an instance that has come under his observation where one family started a similar industry fifteen years ago in a little shop and today are living in a fine home, employ hundreds of persons, own two blocks of factories and have representatives in every large city in the country.

The association also expressed its willingness to encourage all it can the efforts of the machinists of the city, who, led by A. J. Wilner and others, are about to establish a co-operative machine and repair shop in this city. The machinists are said to have plenty of backing, and are thinking of locating on Garfield avenue, where they will begin repair work and manufacturing. They are said to have already closed a deal for some $30,000 worth of machinery, and have leased a site with 100-foot frontage on the railroad, near one of the elevators.

M. A. Fedje brought the question of taking care of excursionists to the attention of the club. He declared it a shame that people coming to the city had to stop on the Bowery when there were clean and respectable places for them at the West End. The argument that followed was to the effect that the people coming here on excursions are not well enough acquainted with the West End, that most of them never know that there is such a place in the city. A committee consisting of F. A. Fedje, R. D. Haven and N. O. Nelson was appointed to investigate ways and means of bringing some of the excursionists to the West End. It was suggested that all West End people that can accommodate visitors for a day or two, whether in private families, boarding houses or hotels, write a card to Secretary Haven notifying him how many people they can take care of and the terms they will ask. The committee will also canvass the West End so far as possible and make arrangements to meet the excusion trains.

The special committee comprised of N. O. Nelson, J. J. Moe, R. R. Forward and R. D. Haven, appointed to confer with the board of public works to see if something could not be done in the way of repairing West Michigan street, reported that the board of public works treated it most courteously and considered the proposition very favorably. The board held out the promise that steps will be taken as fast as possible to put the street in a passable condition, although it may not be accomplished at the rate of more than a block a month. The plan of repairing the street is to tear out a strip of the center about 12 to 14 feet wide and fill it in eight inches deep with crushed rock. The repairs are expected to extend from Eighteenth avenue west to Twenty-fourth avenue west. Street Commissioner Kennedy, of the West End, has said that the planks under the old cedar blocks are in excellent condition ad are worth the cost of tearing out the planks and the paving blocks.

Applications for membership were received from Fred W. Ericson, Olson & Johnson, G. H. Huseby, Tronsdal & Lofald, A. Andren and S. Morterud.

The next meeting will be held two weeks from last evening and there will be a large number of candidates admitted to membership. There still remains a few more days before the charter is closed and the members will hustle to bring the membership up to as high a number as possible.

USE OF OPIUM.

Chinese Missionary Tells of Terrible Effect of the Drug.

The Lake Superior Baptist association closed its sessions at the First Baptist church last evening with an address by Rev. C. A. Solquist. During the day business sessions were held. It was suggested that at the next meeting an open-air meeting be held at Fond du Lac, and this matter was left with the executive meeting to decide upon. It was expected that Rev. Dr. W. W. Dawley, of Minneapolis, and formerly of Duluth, would speak, but he was unable to be present.

Rev. C. A. Solquist, who is a former missionary to China, spoke for a few minutes on the use of opium in China, and related some very interesting facts. He said that it was one of the three principal vices of China, the other two being gambling and foot-binding. It was forced on the Chinese by the English traders, and has grown enormously within the last few years. It was first brought into the country against the wishes of the Chinese emperor, and to this day is one of the greatest forces working against the missionaries, who have great difficulty in persuading the Chinese that anything good can come from a country that sends the opium: The Chinese are a sluggish race, and it is due to this fact that opium has gained so much favor with them. Drinking makes them lively, and for that reason they are not adicted to the habit, but opium smoking has become almost as common as tobacco smoking in this country.

He told of the way in which opium was prepared from the poppy. It is a terrible habit, one hardly ever being able to get away from it. He had known cases, however, where men by their own will had stopped the use of the "foreign smoke," as they call it. Locking them up does no good, as they will go after it again as soon as they are released. He closed by saying that the introduction of the drug into that country was one of the worst reproaches for Christianity in China.

Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

The uniform success of this remedy has made it the most popular preparation in use for bowel complaints. It is everywhere recognized as the one remedy that can always be depended upon and that is pleasant to take. It is especially valuable for summer diarrhoea in children and is undoubtedly the means of saving the lives of a great many children each year. For sale at Boyce's drug store.

THE GRAIN MARKETS

Wheat Started Out Unchanged, Eased Off But Recovered.

Wet Weather and Rise at Paris Were Bullish Factors.

Flax Trading Fairly Active and Market Generally Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 28.—The wheat market was quiet but fairly steady this morning, after a slight decline early, due to the liberal receipts. There were two bullish factors—wet weather in the harvesting country and a fair bulge in prices at Paris. The English markets were still closed.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 368 cars, and at Chicago, 29, a total of 397 cars, against 298 last week, and 345 last year.

The Paris market closed ½@1¼c higher. Primary receipts of wheat were 199,000 bus; last year, 551,000. Shipments, 340,000 bus; last year, 761,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 767,000 bus.

July "new" oats closed 1c higher. Corn closed ¾c up, and was up 1¾c at one time. Primary receipts of corn were 240,000 bus; last year, 248,000 bus. Shipments, 157,000 bus; last year, 255,000 bus. Clearances were 19,239 bus.

The Duluth market was very quiet. It opened unchanged at 75c, and did not vary from that price until 11:15, when it sold at 74¾c. The close was at 75c. Chicago also closed unchanged and Minneapolis advanced ½c.

Cash sales were 5000 bus. Cash prices dropped somewhat. No. 1 northern selling at July price instead of 2c over. And No. 2 northern at 1½c under instead of 1c under; No. 3 continued at 3c under.

Flax trading was fairly active and the market generally steady, closing without change.

Cash oats advanced 2c and September oats ½c. Cash and September rye also advanced ½c.

Following are the closing prices on the Duluth board:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wet Weather Started Bullish Sentiment In Grains.

Chicago, June 28.—Wet weather and fair bulge in Paris quotations indicating more rain in France started a bullish sentiment in grains at the opening. There were no English cables, July wheat opened 1¼@⅞c up at 73¼@73⅝c and sold still a shade higher. Trade, however, was small, early receipts were fairly liberal and July receded to 73⅛c, though later it steadied near 73¼@73½c. September sold between 72⅝c and 73⅜c and steadied near the lower figure. Commission houses had good buying orders for a time and shorts covered. Local receipts were 39 cars, 3 of contract grade and 2 of new wheat. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 268 cars, making a total for the three points of 347 cars, against 298 last week and 345 a year ago.

Late trade in the wheat was dull. July slipped back to 73⅜c and closed steady, unchanged at 73c. September sold down to 72¼c and closed firm ¼c up, at 72⅝c.

Corn shorts covered excitedly at the opening and made July corn mount to a new record price for the year, 70c. Rains fell in most of the country and although benefited to suffering Texas endangered cultivation over the big corn belt. July opened 8@9c higher at 69@70c, but dropped back to 68¾c. September sold between 61⅝ and 61¾c at the opening, dipped to 61⅜c and steadied under 61¼c. Receipts were 225 cars, 26 of contract grade. Private elevators made 90 cars.

Corn shorts kept busy most of the day covering. There was a fair demand and July closed strong and congested to up at 69¾c. September closed 2@2½c higher at 61¼c.

Oats were strong early in sympathy with the other grains and on the wet weather. Shorts covered in July new and set the opening price 8@9c to 15@16c higher at 46¼@47c. A later dip to 46c steadied the pit. September sold firm between 33½c and 34c and closed firm, ¾@⅞c higher at 33⅝@33¾c. Receipts were 209 cars.

Shorts in new July oats covered freely all session and that option closed strong 1@1½c up at 46¾c.

Light receipts of hogs at the yards induced some small buying of provisions at higher prices. Trade, however, was dull and fluctuations were narrow. September pork opened 7½c up at $18.52½ and sold at $18.50; September lard 5c up at $10.60 and sold at $10.62½ and September ribs 2½c up at $10.62½.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 507 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, June 28.—Trade in what was light today and mostly all of a professional character. The market during the early part of the session fluctuated on unfavorable weather throughout the winter wheat belt and higher cables from Paris on account of unfavorable weather in France. Later there was more or less selling by early buyers, which caused a reaction. The market closed steady. We are getting too much rain in the winter wheat belt and more rain is predicted over Sunday. The general situation is firm and prices gradually should go higher. The only drawback at the moment is the absence of outside speculation, but if the weather continues unfavorable much longer this may come into the market any day and cause a sharp advance, with cash what selling at a premium there is no likelihood of any deliveries in the first of the month. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 35 cars.

Corn—Trade in corn was not so large today, in fact, the market was decidedly quiet. There were no cables received today on account of the holiday. Estimated receipts, 300 cars.

There was a large and active trade in oats again today and the market ruled steady on covering by shorts and very unfavorable weather for the crop. A good many complaints regarding the weather being too wet and oats lodging. Country movemnt very light. Cash demand continues brisk and at full prices. The general situation strong and we look for prices to go still higher, and if the weather keeps unfavorable much longer we may see some lively markets. Estimated receipts tomorrow, 215 cars.

Provisions opened firm on smaller receipts than expected and was advanced on buying for local account, but later lost most of the advance and closed about as yesterday. The feature of the day was the weakness in July ribs, but trade was smallest in weeks in everything on the list. Advance in grain hurts this market as 72c wheat looks more attractive than $18.50 pork. Farmers are realizing 70c for their corn fed live stock, and are not willing to buy the product back again at ruling prices. The market acts weak and we do not believe leaders that have sold out will appear again as buyers unless they can buy the product decidedly lower. Estimated for Monday 34,000 hogs, and for next week 130,000.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul.—Barrett & Zimmerman report that outside of the sale of heavy good drafters, there was a perceptible relax in the trade. Local operators were seeking the most desirable offerings of horses weighing 1600 pounds and upward, which made up the only feature of the market. Values:

DEWEY STANDS PAT.

"Do you know," he asked, "whether Aguinaldo has a dollar today?"

"I don't know," was the reply. "I have not been in the Philippines for three years, how should I know?"

In answer to pressing questions the admiral said he and Gen. Anderson did not agree very well, but he added that he was there, and what he said he knew, and was not responsible for what others said.

"I don't like your questions," he said to Senator Patterson, "and I don't think I ought to be required to answer them."

Senator Beveridge, presiding, said the admiral need not make replies. Both Senators Beveridge and Dietrich asked questions to bring out the fact that the admiral, upon further acquaintance with the Filipinos, felt that they were not capable of self-government.

The admiral was then excused.

Fools make a mock at advertising, but the wise man sayeth not a word, and secureth additional space.

TRADING IN STOCKS

Was Light and the General List Was Inert.

There Were Large Takings of Missouri Pacific Early.

Some Recoveries After Bank Statement But Closing Heavy.

New York, June 28.—The market opening with a varying and uncertain movement of prices. Only a few stocks were dealt in and those to a small extent. There were some large takings of Missouri Pacific and a number of the Gould Southwesterns hardened in sympathy. Distilling preferred rose 1¼ and Colorado Fuel ran off 1¾.

There were a number of striking gains in minor railroad stocks. Vanderbilts eased off slightly. Colorado Fuel was supported and about wiped out its loss and Ice preferred regained a point of yesterday's decline. Illinois Central advanced 2 points to 1½. Other gains included 3¾ in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Soo preferred, 1¾ in the common and between 1 and 2 points in Chicago & Eastern Illinois, Iowa Central preferred, Louisville & Nashville, St. Louis Southwestern preferred, American Telegraph and Telegraph, Gas and Continental Tobacco preferred.

The general list was inert. Illinois Central reacted and Reading fell ⅜. There were declines of about a point in St. Louis Southwestern preferred, Denver & Rio Grande, Ice preferred and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, and 2⅝ in the preferred. Chicago & Eastern Illinois rose 3⅜ all, New Haven 1½ and Lead preferred 1¾. There were some recoveries after the bank statement, Illinois Central rising to the best, but the closing was rather heavy.

STOCK GOSSIP.

New York to W. H. Laidley & Co.: The stock market today was unchanged from the last few days, inasmuch as it was extremely dull and quiet. Values, however, remain very firm and are well held. The bank statement was fair and had a good influence. Illinois Central was easily the leader, scoring 2⅜ point advance and held the entire gain. Colorado Fuel & Iron, after opening at a loss from yesterday, met with fairly good support and seemed to be better bought than for some little time. Speculation though is entirely in good rails and no mistake will be made in buying Illinois Central, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Atchison.

• • •

Waldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: In high financial circles sentiment on the market is much strengthened very much by the advances almost daily recorded in individual stocks and comment is made tonight that the manipulation which is responsible for these movements utterly fails to bring in the public. In point of fact, there was never a time when speculation was so unresponsive to the efforts of operators to infuse fresh life into it. This week, for example, Missouri Pacific and St. Paul have been taken in hand on different occasions and advanced with scarcely any effect in either instance on the general list. Some of the most experienced observers in the street find it difficult to account for the difference in opinion as to whether it precedes a fall or a rise in security prices. A few incline to the belief that the dullness is the forerunner to contraction in general business and they point to the declining tendency of bank clearings as significant. There is little doubt, too, that the strike is beginning to exert a depressing influence on trade. And this fact tends much importance to the question whether President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers, who, to the suprise of the managers of the anthracite companies, has been empowered to order a general strike if he sees fit, will call the men out. While these adverse factors in the situation are ignored by favorable developments, they must sooner or later result in market weakness. Just now, however, there is pressure to sell securities, as money by continuing decidedly easy is disappointing speculative calculations. The reduction in savings bank interest rate to 3½ per cent is perhaps one of the reasons why offerings of dividend paying stocks are so light, although, on the other hand, a fact of equal, though less favorable, significance, as certain bankers point out, is the comparatively low bid prices made this week for the bonds offered by the city of New York.

• • •

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: St. Paul and Missouri Pacific creep up a little higher every day. People who took profits simply lost their stock and people who waited for "sharp reactions" never had a chance to buy. In my judgment both of these stocks will sell considerably higher before there is much reaction. I likely to sell at 124 before 104 and I advise holding on to it. Copper seems supported around 62 and with so many bears on this stock it might prove a profitable purchase.

• • •

Warrington to W. H. Laidley & Co.: No indications of weakness is apparent anywhere in the railway list and I can only refer to advices contained in Thursday's letter. There is nothing to gain by changing your position. If you are out of the market stay out until Monday. The shorts in Erie and Atchison are getting restless and I expect to see a movement against them at any time. Make no short sales. Hold Chicago Great Western, Wabashas, Missouri, Kansas & Texas until further advises. As before stated I do not expect material change until next week and the probabilities are highly favorable for a general advance in prices during the month of July.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Coppers were featureless. There is a good strong undertone and a fair short interest in the coppers. They may be dull for the present, but the next decided move will be up. The tone of the New York market is getting steadily bullish on Atchison pfd and Union Pacific.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Coppers were unactive. There is nothing doing and nothing to say on them. There is very little interest at present and you cannot expect any material change in fluctuations one way or the other until outside speculation takes a hand in the market. We still believe that money can be made by purchasing coppers upon any recessions, but would advise taking small profits for the present until the market shows more activity.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, June 28.—Money on call, steady, actual transactions 3 per cent, closed offered 3. Prime mercantile paper, 4½@5 per cent; sterling exchange, steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.85¾@4.86 for demand, and at $4.85¼@4⅛ for sixty days; posted rates, $4.86@4½ and $4.88½@4.89; commercial bills, $4.84¾@4.85¼. Silver, bar silver, 58½c; Mexican dollars, 42½c; government bonds, steady; state bonds, inactive; railroad bonds, irregular.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 28.—The cotton market opened barely steady at one, with prices unchanged to 2 points lower, this being better than expected in view of further rain reports from the Southwest and government predictions for continued wet weather over the belt line west of the Mississippi. Receipts were light, the statistical statements were bullish and there seems to be no doubt but that the room was considerably short. On the rise after the call July reached 8.58 and August 8.24. Trading was fairly active for a Saturday half holiday with professional operations comprising the bulk of the business done. Cotton futures closed steady. June, 8.26; July, 8.68; August, 8.26; September, 7.93; October, 7.79; November, 7.72; December, 7.70; January, 7.69; February, 7.69; March, 7.71. Spot closed steady; middling uplands, 9¼; middling gulf, 9½. Sales, 2300 bales. Estimated receipts at the ports today, 2000 bales, against 1507 actual last week. Today's receipts at New Orleans were 459 bales, against 5582 bales last year, and at Houston, 65 bales, against 1982 bales last year.

BANK AVERAGES.

New York, June 28.—The weekly statement of the averages of the associated banks, shows: Loans, $863,571,300; increase, $1,856,700. Deposits, $865,820,400; increase, $4,376,600. Circulation, $31,456,000; increase, $105,500. Legal tenders, $75,301,900; increase, $1,607,500; specie, $172,854,500; increase, $311,300. Reserve, $251,935,700; increase, $2,638,300. Reserve required, $238,-975,350; increase, $1,219,200. Surplus, $12,978,-350; increase $820,100.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, June 28.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows available cash balances, $206,-185,018; gold, $102,165,117; silver, $24,255,090; United States notes, $10,382,312; treasury notes of 1890, $136,513; national bank notes, $10,280,763; total receipts this day, $2,312,198; total receipts this month, $25,-826,266; total receipts this year, $559,553,-985; total expenditures this day, $670,000; total expenditures this month, $32,950,000; total expenditures this year, $470,321,797; deposits in national banks, $127,002,560.

SPARROW'S QUEER FATE.

In City Hall park, near the large fountain at the Park row end, a body swayed to and fro from one of the topmost limbs of a tree for hours, says the New York Journal. Spectators who looked at it were divided in their minds as to whether it was a case of suicide or accidental death. No one attempted to remove the body. Even the coroner was not notified. It was identified later by an eye-witness as that of Jack Sparrow, a Londoner, who had come to New York several years ago, and had fought valiantly against allowing robins or blue birds to alight on any of the park benches.

"Poor little bird," said a woman, looking at the dangling body.

"Poor nothin'," said a man in overalls. "I guess if the people who pity a dead sparrow had to work all night and then try to sleep with an army of them pesky, chirrupin' things in a tree in front of their windows they wouldn't hev sech an all killin' sympathy for them."

"Jack Sparrow," the eye-witness said, "had picked up a thread in the City Hall park, near the fountain. The eye-witness had awakened from a doze in time to see him fly to the tree with the thread, about a yard long, trailing in the air. He at first supposed that Mr. Sparrow intended the thread as part of a nest to be built in the top of the tree. In the light of what followed the eye-witness is doubtful as to whether the thread was gathered as an act of industry or for the express purpose of taking Jack Sparrow from a world of strife.

Mr. Sparrow, said the eye-witness who lazily watched him, flew to the tiptop of the tree. Then he dropped down a couple of branches. One end of the thread had caught on an upper branch, but Mr. Sparrow did not pay the least attention to this.

He was seen to fly out with the other end of the thread in his bill. The end caught in the branch above and brought him to an abrupt stop, so abruptly in fact that he whirled round and round, and the thread wound about his throat with a death grip.

He still held it in his bill near the outer end, but let go as his breath was cut off and fluttered in an apparent effort to free himself. But the thread was tightly wound, and in a few minutes Mr. Sparrow fluttered his last flutter and hung limply from the limb, a dead Jack Sparrow.

DULUTH REALTY RATHER QUIET

Market Is Feeling the Usual Summer Dullness But Some Realty Is Moving and Building Continues Active.

The market continues in a healthy condition for this season of the year. There are no startlingly large trades, or at least not a lot of them, but the trade as a whole is experiencing a better volume of business than it has at this time of year since the boom days. The business that is reported is practically all of the healthiest character—it is bought to meet a legitimate necessity for its use. The fact that this demand for homes and sites for homes continues on a very generous basis is surprising, particularly to quite a large coterie of people who predicted a marked falling off in the demand from this source until fall.

• • •

While no very large trades have been made public this week, it is known that at least two sizeable deals in centrally located property have been closed up ready for the signing of the papers. One of them involved a piece of West Superior street property that a year ago was sold by the same dealer. His latest price obtained for it was two and a half times the consideration of the transfer of a year ago. There is plenty of encouragement in such a direct contrast as is afforded here in the recent past value of Duluth realty and the present market price of the same.

• • •

Improvements continue all over the city. Not only are the contracts entered upon earlier in the season being prosecuted with all the spirit possible, but new contracts are being let day after day for notable improvements in both the mercantile, warehouse and residence sections. The past week a number of flat and apartment buildings have been contracted for. One architect has at least three residence plans well along. Another has finished plans for one of the largest and finest homes in Duluth and has two others well along toward completion, and others have a number of luxurious homes in course of design.

• • •

Austin Terryberry has submitted to contractors for figures plans for a brick flat building to be erected at Fourth avenue east and Fourth street for Capt. J. Jeffry. On the ground floor will be two store rooms each 50x60 feet in size, and on the second floor will be four flats.

Mr. Terryberry is also calling for figures on plans for a brick block of four flats of seven rooms each, to be built on he upper side of East Superior street, between Seventh and Eighth avenues. The builder will be S. H. La Ferte.

• • •

Contracts have been let by John J. Wangenstein this week to Pearson & Fawcett for the erection of two buildings. One is to be the addition of two stories on the Silberstein & Bondy store building on Superior street, between First and Second avenues west. The other calls for the erection of a block of six flats to be erected on Fifth street between Eighth and Ninth avenues west, by J. E. Cooley. The building will be of brick and three stories high.

• • •

Other architects are busy, but have nothing in a position to make public this week. The outlook is most promising, however, from the point of view of all of them.

• • •

Contractors are figuring on the erection of a handsome home for Chester A. Congdon, to be built on the east side of Fifteenth avenue east, by Clarence H. Johnson, of Minneapolis, and calls for a square house of large dimensions and built of cut stone, supposedly brown stone. It is said the building will cost anywhere from $60,000 to $100,000, and will prove probably the most costly home in the city.

• • •

Stryker, Manley & Buck report the following sales:

House and lot at 1602 Jefferson street, the John Frazer house, recently owned by C. F. Roebel, to F. E. Potter, chief dispatcher of the Northern Pacific road, for $6,250.

House and lot, 2507 London road, for Eastern party, to Mrs. P. Binane, $3,000.

No. 2705 West Third street, house and lot, to Joseph Brechtel, $1,850.

House and lot, 4711 Grand avenue, Lakeside, from an Eastern party to Jud Potter, $1,000.

House and lot at West Duluth, $1,000. Unimproved lot on Seventh avenue west ad Fifth street, $370.

Store building and triangular lot at Eleventh avenue west and Michigan street, to A. LeBlanc, $3,100.

• • •

In no other part of the city is there more jubilance expressed by real estate dealers and property owners over the outlook than in West Duluth. Those having property, whether resident or not, are pleased over the turn in affairs and the establishment of so many new industries in that part of the city since the early spring. The starting up of the mitch factory last fall had a beneficial effect, but coming hard after it are other important industries in the way of the blast furnace, the location of the National Iron works and the lease of the car works by the American Lumber company. Thus, within six months nearly every one of the plants so long idle have been occupied and industries started that will employ several hundred men.

The effect on real estate values has been marked. Property that was a drug on the market for years past now finds ready sale at an advanced figure, and many who a few months ago were anxious to close out their West Duluth interests are now reluctant about parting with them at former figures. Rents have stiffened and a number of new houses are being built. As a rule, the new buildings going up are for homes for the owners of the property. All of the real estate dealers of West Duluth report a good business, with prospects for even better during the coming months. A building boom to accommodate the many people that will be going to that part of the city to seek homes near their work is looked for in the very near future.

• • •

N. J. Upham & Co. say that midsummer dullness has struck the real estate market, and that there is considerable apathy at present. The buyers, as a rule, are acting in a conservative manner, and anything like inflation is instantly fatal to any deals. Sellers are showing some disposition to ask slightly exorbitant prices, and this has the effect of somewhat deadening the market.

• • •

W. M. Prindle & Co. report a rather quiet period for the past week. There is a good inquiry, but it is rather more difficult to get hold of good bargains. The tone of the market still continues to be somewhat conservative. The loan business is more brisk.

• • •

This has been a quiet week with Little & Nolte in real estate. If people wanted loans, they say they could do a large business, as they have all kinds of money on hand, but borrowers are scarce.

• • •

George H. Crosby & Co. report sales as follows: Modern dwelling, 1151 East Fourth street, $2600; modern dwelling at West End, $1500; centrally located vacant lot, $800; 35 lots outside city. They find inquiry healthy and business good.

RATHBONE PETITIONS

Congress For an Investigation of Charges Against Him.

Mr. Teller Urges Senate to Take Up Matter.

Morgan Wants Claims Against Panama Company Investigated.

Washington, June 28.—When the senate convened today a partial conference report on the general deficiency appropriation bill was agreed to, and Messrs. Hale, Allison and Teller appointed conferees. Bills were passed as follows: Authorizing the Duluth, Pierre & Black Hills Railroad company to construct a bridge across the Missouri river at Pierre, S. D.; authorizing the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad company to construct bridges across the Calumet river at Hammond, I. L., and across the same river at Cummings, Ill.; to provide souvenir medals for the benefit of the Washington Monument association, of Alexandria, Va.

Mr. Teller (Col.) presented a petition from Estes G. Rathbone, praying for a full investigation into his performances of duties as director of posts of Cuba during the occupation of Cuba. He maintained his petitioner had been unjustly tried and unfairly convicted, and that he is entitled to a full, fair and impartial investigation by congress.

Mr. Teller said the petition was unusual, and the conditions were unusual, and it was the request the petition was read in full. The petitioner asked that full justice be done to the end that aspersions upon his character might be eliminated. Mr. Teller said the petitioner was not now in jeopardy, but would have been had not a general amnesty been granted by the Cuban government. He stood before the world as a convicted criminal. The case was unique, but it was one that might arise at any time in the Philippines. It seemed to him that the question demanded investigation by the senate. While he did not pass on the guilt or innocence of the petitioner, he believed there was a fair presumption of his innocence.

The petition was referred to the committee on relations with Cuba.

A resolution offered yesterday by Mr. Morgan, providing for an investigation by committee on interoceanic canals to ascertain whether any claims exist in favor of citizens of the United States against the new or the old Panama Canal company; and authorizing the committee to ascertain whether unlawful or corrupt efforts have been made to obtain any part of the sum that may be applied to the purchase of the property of the new canal company, or to Costa Rico or Nicaragua by the United States, was taken up.

After Mr. Morgan had explained the resolution, Mr. Spooner (Wis.) vigorously opposed its adoption, declaring that it was without precedent, entirely mischievous and obstructive of the action of congress. The United States was in no position, he thought, to act as agent for bondholders or shareholders of the Panama Canal company. Those people would have to look to the French courts for their rights. It was not the business of the United States to constitute itself guardian of the French court and of the people who had claims against the Panama Canal company.

Mr. Morgan interrupted Mr. Spooner to say that he wanted to know whether the lobby that had been hanging about Washington was to receive any part of the $40,000,000. He said bribes were paid to men who conducted great negotiations.

Mr. Mitchell (Ore.) said he could not support the Morgan resolution because it would tend to delay work on the canal.

Mr. Hanna, in opposing the resolution, resented the insinuation that a lobby was here. He challenged Mr. Morgan to produce the proof of such a charge. He said Mr. Morgan had tried to throw a cloud upon the Panama company's title and was endeavoring to lay upon congress calumny and charges of corruption. There was no truth in the insinuations.

Mr. Morgan said he had made no reflection upon congress, but insisted that there was a lobby for Panama.

The Morgan Panama resolution went to the calendar without action. It will take a vote of the senate to get it up.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 28.—When the house met at noon today Mr. Babcock (Wis.) asked unanimous consent for consideration of a resolution to empower the commissioners of the District of Columbia to make special regulations for the G. A. R. encampment in this city next September.

Reserving the right to object, Mr. Moon (Tenn.) took the floor to explain why he had objected yesterday. He specifically disclaimed any intention to impugn the speaker's motives, and while he felt that he ought to object, he appreciated that at the close of the session he might interfere with the passage of many meritorious bills. "But I give notice now," he concluded, "that at the next session I shall object to every request for unanimous consent until there has been a hearing upon this bill."

The resolution then was passed, and the house resumed the debate on the Horton-Butler contested election case, notice having been given that after it wa sdisposed of conference reports on the naval and District of Columbia appropriation bills would be called up. The contestee, Mr. Butler, (Mo.), took the floor in his own behalf, making a speech of an hour.

SYMPATHETIC STRIKE.

All Electrical Workers Go Out at Des Moines.

Des Moines, June 28.—At 1 o'clock today all electrical workers and linemen employed on the local telephone exchanges quit work out of sympathy with the hundred striking central girls.

This action was taken after the employers had declined to hold a consultation. Further sympathetic strikes to the same end are expected next week.

TRANSFER.

Barker Dredging Plant Passes to the New Company.

The actual transfer of the Barker dredging plant of West Superior to the Lake Superior Contracting Dredging company was made this morning, the papers being signed and the money paid over. The big dredging plant has now passed into the possession of the consolidated company free of all incumbrances. The price paid for the plant is not stated, but it is understood to be a large sum. The tugs, scows and dredges of the Barker plant, numbering 29, will be made in Duluth within the next few days.

The Lae Superior Contracting and Dredging company's plant is a consolidation of the Williams & Sons' plant and that of the Barer estate, and is one of the largest concerns now on the lakes. The company can put into commission thirteen dredges, of which two are of the hydraulic type, 13 tugs and about 30 scows.

Capt. E. T. Williams will assume the management of the consolidated plant. All of the business transactions of the company will be done from the headquarters this side of the bay.

The permanent location of the shops and yards has not been definitely decided on, but it is understood there is a strong possibility of their being in West Superior on account of the room available on that side of the bay.

MRS. TANKE

Unable to Find Articles to Prove Alleged Confession.

St. Peter, Minn., June 28.—The search for the revolver, pocketbook and watch at the Weltner farm in Lafayette has proved fruitless.

Mrs. Amelia Tanke, who was granted permission to be taken to the farm for the purpose of pointing out the spot where the articles were hidden, arrived there yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, accompanied by Sheriff Gaffke, of Sibley county.

Search was immediately begun at a point south of the barn and some distance from the former excavation.

According to Mrs. Tanke's story, the revolver was not buried directly after the murder, but she hid it until spring in a smokehouse. When the frost was out of the ground she bored a postHole and dropped in the revolver, watch and pocketbook, taking pains to carefully cover up the hole.

The excavation made yesterday was circular and about fifteen feet in diameter. Earth was removed to a depth of several feet.

Between fifty and a hundred spectators were present to witness the proceedings, but hours passed by and nothing was brought to light. The crowd graduaay dispersed.

Among those present interested in developments were County Attorney C. E. Davis, A. A. Stone, Sheriff McMillan, St. Peter; T. J. Coleman, Minneapolis, and Judge Webber, New Ulm. Attorney Joseph Eckstein, counsel for the Tankes, had charge of the work.

Mrs. Tanke assisted in preparing dinner for those engaged in the digging. This is her first visit to the home of her murdered husband since last October, the time of her arrest. She appeared to be in good spirits, and was confident she had correctly located the whereabouts of the revolver.

At 3 o'clock the party gave up the search in disgust, and Mrs. Tanke was taken to New Ulm and thence to Henderson. Whether the defense will resume the search is questionable.

EXECUTIVE

Committee of the International Sunday School Union.

Denver, June 28.—B. B. Taylor, of Denver, the newly elected president, called to order the morning session of the International Sunday School convention, Rev. Dunning, of Boston, read the report of the lesson committee.

The most important innovation raised, was a graduation of classes in Sunday schools, with a special course in study provided for each class, a period of six years' attendance upon one class being required for advancement. The present course shall be the one for study by the intermediate class. The nominating committee announced amid much applause, the name of W. N. Hartshorn of Boston, as chairman of the executive committee.

Following are the members of the new executive committee from the Eastern states and provinces: Alabama—W. T. Atkins; Alberta—W. A. Ward; Arkansas—B. W. Green; British Columbia—N. Shakespease; Connecticut—H. H. Spooner; Delaware—W. O. Hoffeck; District of Columbia—W. W. Millan; Florida—H. C. Groves; Georgia—W. S. Witman; Illinois—A. H. Mills; Indiana—W. C. Hall; Iowa—J. F. Hardin; Kentucky—J. S. Steas; Louisiana—E. P. Mackie; Manitoba—F. W. Cligan; Maine—I. R. Cook; Maryland—J. P. Campbell; Massachusetts—W. Hartshorn; Michigan—E. K. Warren; Minnesota—G. R. DEATH LIST.

Chicago, June 28.—Owen H. Roche, formerly a well known board of trade operator, died here today aged 60 years. Mr. Roche came here from Boston in 1872, accumulated a fortune in the grain business and retired from active operations two years ago.

Kansas City, June 28.—A. Boyd Watson, a young Englishman, said to be a member of a wealthy family, is dead at a hospital here of pneumonia. He was making a trip round the world and intended to return to England by way of South Africa. A brother in London has been cabled.

GEN. SMITH'S CASE.

Washington, June 28.It is announced at the war department that the case of Gen. Jacob Smith will not be acted upon finally before the end of next week at the earliest.

ATTORNEY HAS APPENDICITIS.

St. Paul, June 28.—An Eau Claire special to the Dispatch says: Attorney T. F. Frawley, of this city, was taken suddenly ill at Medford, Wis., today with a serious case of appendicitis. His brother, ex-Mayor Frawley, of Eau Claire, is there. Dr. Wheaton, of St. Paul, was summoned by wire to Medford.

PHILIPPINE

Conferees to Have Trouble Over the Monetary Proposition.

Washington, June 28.—The conferees on the Philippine bill reassembled this morning and took a recess at 1 o'clock. Consideration has been given to the mineral land laws during the day's session. It is expected that all but a few important contested points will be settled today.

It became evident at this morning's meeting of the Philippine conference, that no agreement would be reached today and that the matter would go over until Monday. The important issues on the house provision for a legislature and between the senate silver system and the house gold system are still open, as is also the section as to granting franchises.

The house conferees will make a determined stand for their civil government plan, claiming that it follows recommendations by the Schurman and the Taft commissions and by President McKinley. It appears that the intimation that all legislation will fail unless the senate silver system is accepted, was conveyed to one of the house conferees by a senator. The conference was resumed at 2 o'clock.

GARDNER

Gives Testimony to Sustain His Charge of Cruelty.

Manila, June 28.—At today's session of the board which is inquiring into the charge of cruelty, etc., brought by Maj. Cornelius Gardner, of the Thirteenth infantry, governor of the province of Tayabas, against American officers and soldiers, Maj. Gardner continued his testimony, the first part of which was presented yesterday. The recorder objected to certain parts of the testimony, as witness was not entitled to special privileges. Counsel for Maj. Gardner admitted that the point was well taken, but said he thought the question could be called for more than ordinary inquiry. The recorder replied that it was a matter of routine and that the record showed that Maj. Gardner had always been given every advantage. He had long felt, and he believed this feeling was that of the rest of the command, that regardless of whatever they did, Maj. Gardner would accuse the board of unfairness. For this reason the board had given the major every latitude. His privilege in this sense was certainly not granted to the officers and soldiers Maj. Gardner was endeavoring to besmirch. The major had been represented at the hearings as governor Tayabas, by the chief supervisor, the fiscal's assistant, the attorney general and his first assistant. The recorder did not profess to be a lawyer although, however, that such an array of talent was not likely to be imposed upon.

POLITICS

Responsible For Ouster Proceedings In Ohio, Says Johnson.

Cleveland, June 28.—Mayor Tom L. Johnson today gave out a signed statement relative to the decision of the Ohio supreme court declaring the federal plan of municipal government unconstitutional. Mr. Johnson's letter says, in part: "The ouster proceedings had its origin with cheap politicians, backed by interests opposed to the things the city administration stood for. It would have ended there but for the action of Attorney General Sheets, with advice and consent, I am informed, of the state administration.

Without the approval of Attorney General Sheets, no case could have been brought in the supreme court and after this suit was begun he refused to comply with the request of Cincinnati attorneys to test the Cincinnati law. It was an attempt to play politics but the result will show that it was poor politics. The entire responsibility rests with Attorney General Sheets and his advisors.

The important question is, however, what shall be done? I believe the supreme court should be praised rather than blamed for its courageous decision. It was the timidity of their predecessors that made possible so much special legislation.

In conclusion Mr. Johnson declared that it has been demonstrated that the federal plan of municipal government is the best that can be devised. He expresses the hope that it will be adopted for the government of all Ohio cities at the special session of the legislature.

FINAL GAME

Between Yale and Harvard Universities Ball Teams.

New York, June 28.—The final and deciding baseball game between the teams of Harvard and Yale universities attracted a big crowd of college enthusiasts to the polo grounds today. At the end of the fifth inning the score stood:

Harvard, 2; Yale, 0.

Batteries—Garvin and Winslow; Clarkson and Milne.

Umpire—Tom Lynch, of the National league.

GAYNOR-GREENE CASE.

Prosecuting Attorney Objects to Motion For Prisoners.

Quebec, June 28.—The Gaynor-Greene case was again brought up in the superior court today on writs of habeas corpus issued on June 20 and 21. Mr. Taschereau, counsel for the prisoners, moved for writs of certiorari calling on Judge La Fontaine at Montreal to produce the records and all documents in the case, but Mr. McMaster of the prosecution immediately objected to the motion being argued. He said that being the senior attorney he had the right to make the first application in relation to the writ issued June 20 and 21.

BICYCLE RECORDS BROKEN.

Salt Lake, June 28.—Two world's records were broken at the Salt Lake saucer track last night, the half-mile unpaced record of 44 2-5 seconds, held by Major Taylor, was reduced by William B. Samuelson to 52 3-5. Jim Chapman lowered the half-mile competition record of 58 seconds, held by M. L. Hurley, to 57 3-5 seconds.

DANISH REPORT READY.

Washington, June 28.—Chairman Dalzell, of the special committee which investigated the charges in connection with the purchase of the Danish West Indies, today completed the report of the committee. It will not be formally passed upon by the committee before Monday and until then its terms are not made public. There is little doubt, however, that it dismisses the charges as groundless.

STRIKE OUT

Returns of the Packers In the Ouster Proceedings.

Jefferson City, Mo., June 28.—The supreme court en banc today sustained the motion of Attorney General Grow to strike out the returns of the packers in the ouster proceedings as to all the contentions except the sixth, which raises the question as to whether the packers are in a combine to fix and maintain prices. On this latter point the court overruled the motion and appointed I. H. Kinley, of Kansas City, to take testimony and report on the first day of the October term of the supreme court. Attorney Hagerman, for the packers, filed exceptions and objections to the action of the court, on the ground that the points overruled involve federal questions, which the supreme court of the United States should pass on.

The court sustained the constitutionality of the state anti-trust laws involved in the motion.

Chief Justice Burgess dissented from the action of the court in overruling a part of the motion relating to the question of fact on which testimony is to be taken.

WILL ADJUST.

Reduced St. Louis Lumber Tariff to Head of Lakes.

St. Paul, June 28.—The three Minneapolis-Duluth lines—Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Northwestern—announced yesterday that they had agreed to check in the reduced lumber tariff published by the Minneapolis & St. Louis to Missouri territory, effective last Tuesday. The three roads in question are now preparing their tariffs to apply from the head of the lakes to all points reached by the Minneapolis & St. Louis, effective July 1.

The 2-cent reduction in rates made by the Albert Lea route because of its regard for the Minneapolis lumber manufacturing interests has been met by the Great Northern, Milwaukee & St. Paul, Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific and Burlington, each falling in line in the order named. They, too, announce that they will act on a similar tariff to Missouri river points.

In making the low rate, however, the Minneapolis & St. Louis was simply resolved to protect Minneapolis interests and desired that the 7-cent additional rate to Duluth lumber should be continued. The reduction of that 7-cent difference to 5 cents recently by the Northern lines was responsible for the 2-cent cut by the St. Louis road on shipments from this city Southwest.

The question now is, will the St. Louis agree to absorb its proportion of the through rate from the head of the lakes on the reduced tariffs, or return to its Northern connections the latter's proportion and keep for itself that proportion which it would enjoy under the former higher rates.

There is also a good deal of speculation as to what the Wisconsin Central will do on east-bound shipments, in view of the fact that it cuts no figure in Missouri river business.

FOR SPENCE.

Gov. Van Sant Issues Requisition For His Return.

St. Paul, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Van Sant today issued a requisition on the governor of California for the extradition of J. F. Spence, who is wanted at Duluth, to answer the charge of grand larceny in the second degree. He is charged with having embezzled $1,400 belonging to the United States Realty company, of Duluth. Spence is under arrest at San Francisco. W. J. Bates will go after him.

NOMINATIONS.

President Sends His Daily Batch to Senate.

Washington, June 28.—The president today sent the following nominations to the senate:

Walter L. Robb, Oregon, collector of customs for the District of Oregon; Ernest Eagleson, Idaho, surveyor general of Idaho.

Postmasters: Minnesota—James M. King, White Bear Lake. Wisconsin—John G. Gerth, Oconomowoc; Peter Danielson, Medford. Iowa—Frank E. Fritcher, Nashua; frd. Iwa—Frank E. Fritcher, Nashua; Leroy R. MURDER AND SUICIDE.

Pittsburg, June 28.—Andrew Hellman, aged 65 years, a well known dairyman of Mt. Washington, fatally shot his wife this afternoon and then turning the revolver against his own temple, killed himself.

WOMEN PLAY GOLF.

Philadelphia, June 28.—Miss Marion Jones, of Nevada, and Miss Bessie Moore met on the courts of the Philadelphia Cricket club at Wissahicken Heights this afternoon for the tennis championship of the United States. Miss Jones by defeating Miss Neely, was entitled to meet the present national champion.

BUTLER LOSES HIS SEAT.

Washington, June 28.—The house today adopted resolutions declaring the seat occupied by Mr. Butler, of Missouri, vacant on the ground there had been no valid election.

PECULIARITIES OF MICA.

The mica as it comes from the mines is in blocks which are theoretically short rhombic prisms, but practically are scarcely recognizable as such, having a very rough and uneven contour. They have a very perfect cleavage parallel to the base, and may be split into laminae thinner than the thinnest tissue paper, and these laminae form the familiar transparent stove panes and lamp chimneys, says the Engineering News. The exterior portions of these blocks are opaque, brittle and worthless, presumably from the penetration of water, for mica soon decomposes when exposed to any considerable weathering. A thick layer of plates has therefore to be removed from either face of the block before any mica of commercial size or value is reached, and the sheets split from the remainder are surrounded by a wide margin of worthless material.

But the difficulties and losses of mica mining are far from being all enumerated. Even when occurring in blocks of commercial size, it is rendered valueless or comparatively so by one or more of a series of defects, which may be classed as color, specks, ruling, ribbing and wedge formation. It sometimes occurs literally pied with black dots, consisting in general of black oxide of iron or garnet, and when even a few of these are present its commercial value is destroyed, because such mica when used as an insulator is peculiarly liable to puncture, the specks forming practically short circuits for the electric current. The same is true of streaks, which are sometimes turned to red rust.

Some otherwise excelent mica is found to be ruled or cut, as it were, with a series of perfectly straight lines, parallel to one side of the crystal, so that on being split the mica falls immediately into strips. Or again, instead of being striped or ruled, the mica is often deeply ribbed or corrugated parallel to the adjacent edges of the crystal so as to give the appearance of the letter A (or rather V), whence it is termed "A-mica." As the ribbed portion has to be cut away in the sheet, such mica is unprofitable, unless the blocks be large. Wedge-mica is that in which the block is thicker at one end than the other, the laminae partaking in the unevenness. Such blocks are wholly worthless except as scrap.

NEW WAR MATERIAL.

The subject of hygiene in general, as well as the hygienic principles involved in the care of the individual in his everyday life, has taken a most important position in the public mind, and has been developed to such an extent in the last decade of the century just past that the results today were hardly dreamed of fifty years ago. Hygiene has been elevated to an important science, and military hygiene is an essential branch of military science, says the New York Sun.

One of the principal problems to be solved by sanitary science is supplying a good drinking water, and this not only for permanent barracks and quarters of troops in time of peace, but also for the field in time of war. The analysis or examination as well as the improvement of drinking water is therefore a matter of great importance to the personnel of the army, and both subjects are of greater significance in the colonies than at home, because of the present state of general national hygiene poor drinking water is much more apt to be found there than in the mother country.

For purifying water, filters are commonly used, and the rate of filtration is hastened by pressure, which latter may be effected by increasing the height of filtering material, or by producing a partial vacuum below. Now this rate of filtration is very important in portable filtering apparatus for military purposes, because transportation in the field is always limited and the number of filters required to insure the necessary quantity of potable water in a given time is therefore often a vital question.

During the past year a new model of Pasteur-Chamberland filter has been introduced in the French army, and special instructions for its care and management have been issued. The candle of unglazed porcelain is inclosed in a metallic tube, the latter being screwed at top to the water spigot. In this way the necessary water pressure for the filtration is obtained, provided that pressure corresponds to a height of column of about forty inches. Otherwise the proper pressure is secured by means of hand operated pressure accumulators, capable of withstanding a pressure of three atmospheres, in which the required pressure in the water on the filter is produced by means of an air pump.

The experiments at Versailles show that with a pressure of two atmospheres even with a very impure water a single candle will furnish twenty-four liters of pure water a day, and will therefore be sufficient for seven men. To remove the sediment on the outside of the candle it must be cleaned once a week, and to sterilize it it must be placed in boiling water for half an hour.

Another improvement has been made called the Andre system, in which a number of candles (6, 12, 25 or 50) are connected together and placed in a metallic reservoir which has an arrangement for mechanically washing off the surface of the candles and keeping them clean. Such a filter of fifty candles is sufficient to provide a battalion on the war footing with all the drinking water it needs.

Although these filters may not be available for transportation with troops constantly on the march, yet they are of immense value when more or less permanent quarters are occupied, especially in countries where the water is not good.

A new automatic pistol is being manufactured in England by the Mars Automatic Firearms syndicate. It is made in three different sizes, 0.335, 0.36 and 0.45 inch. The magazine is contained in the handle of the pistol, different models carrying from eight to eleven cartridges. The weight of the pistol is two pounds ten ounces. The mechanism is peculiar in that the breech remains closed until the bullet has left the barrel, so that there is no chance of the cartridge bursting by its being withdrawn while there is still pressure in the bore, consequently this pistol can fire a very heavy bullet with a large charge. The weight of the Mars bullet is 220 grains, the charge 14 grains of cordite, the muzzle velocity 1250 foot seconds (nearly double that of the Colt revolver), and the muzzle energy 760 foot pounds (nearly three times that of the service revolver).

An expert can fire twenty-four shots in ten seconds, and in accuracy it is stated that when fired from a rest at 1000 yards range it will keep all its shots on a four-foot square target, while its penetration is sixteen inches of pine, against the Mauser pistol's ten, and the Colt's eight.

MUSIC FROM GAS FLAME.

A singular musical instrument belongs to a New York man, who made it in pursuance of suggestions from Professor Ogden Rood, the famous scientist, says the New York Post. Until informed, no one would ever recognize the apparatus. It is part of the chandelier in the owner's drawing room. The basis of the affair is the so-called musical flame. When gas is burned in a cylindrical chimney of a certain length and width, it produces a musical note. According to the angle at which the vapor is emitted from the jet there will be either a sound or silence. A simple contrivance enables the owner by touching a button to change the flame from musical to non-musical at will. There are thirty lamps in his chandelier, so arranged as to make four octaves. The keyboard is in a corner of the room, where it occupies but little space, and might easily be mistaken for a convenient shelf on the wall. The music produced by the flames is very pleasant. It is not at loud nor as vibrant as that from either wood or brass wind instruments, but is fuller and more sonorous than a whistle or a flute.

An odd feature of the instrument is that playing on the flames does not vary the amount of light produced, the musical being indistinguishable from the non-musical flame. All that the spectator notices is a delightful melody of unusual timber coming to him from the chandelier.

The owner has frequently had considerable fun by playing the instrument when someone was in the room or hall that knew nothing of the affair. Where the auditor was educated, he was puzzled and looked about the parlors in vain for the new-fangled music box he believed to be at work. Where he was ignorant, he usually manifested some fear along with his bewilderment.

While the cost of the gas organ, as the owner calls it, is not great, its construction demands considerable time in order to secure the proper notes from the chimneys. In the case described the owner devoted several months to trying chimneys of varying lengths and widths before he obtained the satisfactory musical scale. Not only the length and width of the chimney, but the thickness of the glass, the uniformity of the walls and even the composition of the glass itself affect the musical note given by a flame.

Amendment of Articles of Association
—OF—

OLEAN LAND COMPANY.

It is hereby certified that at the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Olean Land Company held at the office of said company in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the second day of June, A. D. 1902, at which were present in person or represented by duly executed proxies, the holders of more than two-thirds of the capital stock of said company, it was duly and unanimously

Resolved as follows: "That article third and article seventh of the articles of incorporation of the Olean Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

"Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00), of which amount one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) having been heretofore paid in, the remainder thereof, to-wit: Fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) shall be paid in at not less than par and at such time or times and in such manner as the Board of Directors may require.

Seventh—The number and amount of shares in the capital stock of said corporation shall be two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each."

It is further certified, that at a regular meeting of the directors of said corporation, held at the office of said company in the City of Duluth, in the State of Minnesota on the second day of June, 1902, subsequent to the aforesaid action of the stockholders of said corporation, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, viz:

That article third and article seventh of the articles of incorporation of the Olean Land Company be amended so as to read as follows respectively:

Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00) of which amount one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) having been heretofore paid in, the remainder thereof, to-wit: fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) shall be paid in at not less than par and at such time or times and in such manner as the board of directors may require.

Seventh—The number and amount of shares in the capital stock of said corporation shall be two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each.

In witness whereof said Olean Land Company has caused these presents to be subscribed by its president and its secretary and has caused its corporate seal to be hereunto affixed this second day of June, A. D. 1902.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE ON FILING PETITION TO SELL LAND.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis. —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, June 28, 1902.

In the matter of the Estate of John Olson Hole, alias Hall, deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of John A. Hobe, administrator of the above estate, setting forth that no personal estate has come into his hands, and that there is none, the amount of debts outstanding against said deceased, as far as the same can be ascertained; the legacies unpaid, and a description of all the real estate, excepting the homestead, of which said deceased died seized, and the condition and value of the respective portions or lots thereof; the persons interested in said estate, with their residences; and praying that license be to him granted to sell all the real estate belonging to said estate. And it appearing, by said petition, that there is not sufficient personal estate in the hands of said administrator to pay said debts, or expenses of administration, and that it is necessary for the payment of such debts, and expenses, to sell the whole of said real estate;

It is therefore ordered, That all persons interested in said estate, appear before this court on Tuesday, the 22nd day of July, 1902, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the probate office in the court house in Duluth, in said county, then and there to show cause (if any there be) why license should not be granted to said John A. Hobe to sel so much of the real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay such debts and expenses.

And it is further ordered, That this order shall be published once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said county.

Dated at Duluth, the 28th day of June, A. D. 1902.

By the Court,
W. G. BONHAM,
Judge of Probate.

New Catholic Church

Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Now Under Construction at Cloquet and to Be Finished In October.

REV. CHARLES GIRAUX,
Pastor and Promoter of the New Roman Catholic Church.

The above picture gives a very good idea of the appearance of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Cloquet, as it will appear when completed. Rev. Charles Giraux, the pastor of the Roman Catholic congregation of that city, has labored long and faithfully for the erection of a suitable church edifice there, and, after overcoming many obstacles, success has at last crowned his efforts. Father Giraux was a a resident of Duluth for eight years, five years at the French church, on Eleventh avenue west, and three years at the cathedral, and his many friends will be glad to learn of his success at Cloquet and give him their material and moral aid in this most worthy enterprise.

Bishop McGoulrick is deeply interested in the new church, and has encouraged it in every way. His sanction has been given in the following letters:

"Rev. Father Giraux is authorized to make arrangements for the suitable location for a new church in Cloquet. We hope to see him aided in his laudable endeavor by the friends and well wishers of the progress of the church in Cloquet. JAMES McGOLRICK,
"Bishop of Duluth."

Jan. 4, 1900.

"Rev. Giraux, of Cloquet, is engaged in the good work of building a new church, which is very much needed. Any aid extended him will be appreciated by JAMES McGOLRICK,
"Bishop of Duluth."

July 19, 1891.

On Sept. 24, 1901, there was corporated under the tittle of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart an organization to take charge of and manage all temporal affairs of the Roman Catholic church of the Cloquet parish. The officers chosen were Rt. Rev. James McGolrick, bishop of Duluth, president; Rev. Charles Giraux, pastor, vice president; Rt. Rev. Buh, vicar general; Michael T. Savage, treasurer; Joseph Loisel, secretary. A board of consultation was chosen and consists of Joseph Heininger, Joseph Lancourt, John F. O'Brien and Louis Leimer. The people of the parish have ably seconded their pastor in working for the new church, but it was found that a heavy loan would have to be secured in order to build it and the following gentlemen consented to endorse the notes for this purpose; M. T. Savage, Joseph Loisel, Louis Leimer, Joseph Heininger, Joseph Lancourt, Maurice O'Brien, Guy Cookson, Joseph Chaveau, A. M. Brunelle, James W. Dyer, Peter Burns and Stan McCoubrey.

The Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be a fine structure, 48 by 132 feet in size, with a seating capacity of 800 people. It is being built with a basement under the whole building, and its height will be forty-one feet above the ground level. The interior is to be finished in hard plaster, and will have the pews, altar, etc., in keeping with the general excellent appearance of the edifice. The windows will be of stained glass and are very handsome. The total cost of the church will be about $20,000, and under the contract must be finished by Nov. 1. However, at the rate the work is progressing it is probable that it will be available for services in October, when the formal dedication will take place.

FEW JUDGES OF WHISKY.

"Men who drink may not know it," said an old barkeeper to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "but the man behind the bar knows as much about the kind of whisky the customer likes as the customer himself knows. The fact of the business is that is the easiest thing in the world to impose on the average man. The only thing the barkeeper has to learn is the character of the whisky a man drinks, whether it is strong or mild. You take the average man who visits saloons, and who claims to be a good judge of whisky, and when you come to look into it you will find that he goes altogether by the smoothness of taste, or the strength of the article you give him. Bad whisky is sometimes strong and sometimes mild, and the result is that the man who depends upon the effect whisky has on the mouth and the palate will be fooled in nine cases out of ten. Unless a man is really an expert in the business—and there are few experts in spite of the claims of men who are counted among the regular whisky drinkers—it is really a very hard thing for him to tell one kind of whisky from another. Of course, there are men who can tell one kind of whisky from another. There are men who are really good judges of whisky. They cannot be fooled. But with the average man it is an easy thing for the barkeeper to practice the art of deception if he is inclined to do so. The customer will not know the difference. It is really a very simple matter. All the barkeeper has to do is to learn the kind of whisky the man likes, whether he wants a strong whisky or a mild whisky. This is all the barkeeper needs to know. When he learns this it is an easy matter for him to fool the man who drinks at the bar, if he happens to be connected with a place which deals indifferently with the brands of whisky. Yes, there are but very few good judges of whisky. Nine out of ten of the drinking men boast of the fact that they know good whisky, but they do not. The only thing they have learned, as a matter of fact, is the difference between strong whisky and mild whisky, and a mere novice in the drinking business will know this much after a few rounds with the cup."

Humane Agent Withrow runs across many cases of pathetic destitution in his work, but few cases are more pathetic than his discovery of five half orphans at Hibbing in the early part of this month. They were deserted by their father, John Macki, and when Mr. Withrow found them they were playing on the bed with a dog. Their hunger was something distressing.

All five were placed in the Children's home, in the East End, and are doing nicely. The first and third children from the right are twins.

Mortgage To Be Burned

Sunday To Be a Day of Great Rejoicing In the First Methodist Church, As the Last Vestige of Debt Will Be Wiped Out.

Tomorrow will see great rejoicing in the First Methodist church. The last vestige of debt will then have been wiped from that congregation and church, and the mortgage that has hung over them for many years will be burned amid praise, song and prayers of thanksgiving.

The services of the day will open with a baptismal service at 10:15 o'clock in the lecture room. At 10:30 o'clock the sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered and members will be received. At noon the Sunday school will meet. At 6:45 o'clock the Epworth league will conduct a praise service.

The important service of the day when the mortgage will be burned will take place in the evening. There will be addresses by Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., of the Lakeside church; Dr. Robert Forbes, presiding elder of the Duluth district, and Rev. Sam[illegible] P. Long, the pastor. Watson S. Moore, treasurer of the board of trustees, will present his report and then the mortgage will be burned. Henry M. Bradley, chairman of the board of trustees, will apply the match.

The following are the musical programs for the day:

History of Church.

The history of the First Methodist Episcopal church is interwoven with the history of the city of Duluth. One of the first to expound the gospel in the Methodist tongue, where now stands the matchless Zenith City, was Rev. Samuel Spates, a missionary to the Indians. At a session of the Minnesota annual conference held at Minneapolis Oct. 7 and 11, 1869, was formed the charge of Duluth and Oneota. Rev. H. Webb was appointed pastor by Bishop Levi Scott. After a journey occupying seventeen days' time made from St. Anthony via Milwaukee, Green Bay, Marquette and Superior city, part of the time advancing by rail and a part of the time by boat, Duluth was reached Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1869. This was the year in which the Western Land association platted the city.

On the following Sunday this first resident pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church occupied the school house and preached to twenty-five or thirty persons. The organization of the church took place afterward. Mrs. Webb was the only member received in full membership, but seed for the future was found in the person of one Swede who joined on probation. This was on Nov. 7, 1869.

Dec. 4 and 5 the first quarterly meeting was held at Oneota, and the pioneer board of trustees chosen in the persons of J. H. White, N. S. Ryder, L. Mendenhall, George C. Stone and C. Markell. The next quarterly meeting was held Feb. 25 and 26, 1870, at which time a love feast attended by special interest was held, the sacrament administered to twenty-five persons, and a collection of $22 secured.

Meetings were first held in "Portland" school house, then in Grove's building opposite the old Clark house, and in August, 1870, more comfortable quarters were secured in a store room on First street. Benches and other furniture were secured for that place and the pioneer disciples of Wesley were greatly encouraged. Late in the fall of 1870 a church was started at Oneota, and on a lot at the corner of Third avenue west and Second street, donated by the townsite company, was commenced the erection of an edifice for the First church.

The conference returned Rev. Webb for a second year. At that time the Duluth church had fourteen full members and four probationers. The Oneota church had, however, swelled its membership to twenty-five. July 30, 1871, the new church was completed, and the occasion saw also on the church rolls the names of thirty-one members and six probationers.

In the fall of 1871 the conference sent Rev. Henry Crist to minister unto Duluth Methodists. During his year of service five children were baptized, $800 expended on church building, generous contributions to benevolence, and the membership raised to fifty, with two probationers.

The eighteenth session of the Minnesota conference was held at Winona Sept. 25-30, 1872. Duluth was taken from the St. Paul district, placed in that of the Northern Pacific, and Rev. William McKinley sent to care for the flock. That was a dull year, but the changing of a debt to a donation by Rev. E. Remington, of Ilion, N. Y., caused much joy and reduced the church debt $1700. A revival followed later on. The membership was raised to fifty-three and six probationers, all expenses were met and the debt reduced to $50.

In 1873 gloomy clouds appeared and brought discouragement to the hearts of all. Jay Cooke, a patron of the church, failed, the Northern Pacific railway was embarrassed, and as a result of the depression one-half of the members moved away. New additions, however, kept the membership about even, and at the end of the year the Sunday school had fifty scholars, eight teachers and officers and a library of 150 volumes. Rev. Mr. McKinley's ministrations ceased in the fall of 1874, and the charge was not supplied until one-third the conference year was gone. Rev. J. F. Chaffee finally appeared and filled out the year. When he left the membership was the same as the year previous, with two less probationers.

Rev. H. S. Hilton was the next pastor. The church that year was greatly discouraged, but funds received from the sale of the Swedish Methodist church enabled the First church to reduce its debt. The pastor was returned for a second year, but sickness overtook him and he left before the expiration of his time. At the close of his ministrations the membership was fifty-three, with seven probationers.

At the beginning of the conference year of 1877, Rev. J. C. Rich was given the Duluth charge. He remained one year and was succeeded by Rev. C. F. Bradley, who also remained but one year. At the beginning of that conference year—the fall of 1878—the board of stewards was S. W. Palmer, J. A. Stevens, M. J. Davis and J. B. Scoville. At the second quarterly conference Mrs. J. B. Scoville and Mrs. Rachel were added to the board. The trustees were L. Mendenhall, L. W. Palmer, M. J. Davis, J. A. Stevens and J. B. Scoville. That year the membership dropped to 46, with 8 probationers.

From 1879 to 1880 Rev. H. G. Bible cared for the flock and the number in full membership was raised to 67, with 5 probationers. He was succeeded by Rev. S. H. Shumate, who remained two years. At the close of his first year the membership dropped to 48. The next year saw it raised to 86. The conference year, commencing in 1881, saw Rev. J. M. Bull sent to Duluth by the state conference. His pastorate was most successful and was marked by a revival which helped raise the membership to 135, with a school of 150 scholars and 16 officers and teachers.

The next year was one of prosperity under the pastorate of Rev. Levi Gilbert. The parsonage was commenced and when completed cost $2,800. The church was carpeted, a new chancel rail and new communion set added, all expenses paid and liberal donations made to benevolent causes. In the fall of 1884 Rev. Mr. Gilbert was returned for a second year, during which time material evidences of growth, progress and prosperity weer seen in the organization of a Chautauqua circle, a class for religious instruction to Sunday school scholars, and an organ purchased for the vestry. The pastor was, however, robed of his beloved wife by death. That year saw the membership reach 191 in number, with 16 probationers. Under the superintendency of C. M. Gray, the Sabbath school was increased to a membership of 150 scholars. That year an auxiliary society of the Women's Foreign Missionary society was organized.

Poor health compelled Rev. G. P. Penepacker, who came out from Pennsylvania in 1885 to take the charge, to return from whence he came. His year was completed by Rev. C. H. S. Dunn, D. D., who in five months worked the church up to a membership of 220 with 30 probationers. He was returned in 1886, in which year the old church was enlarged at a cost of $7,000. Dr. Dunn held the pastorate until the close of

Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Now Under Construction at Cloquet and to Be Finished In October.

REV. CHARLES GIRAUX.
Pastor and Promoter of the New Roman Catholic Church.

The above picture gives a very good idea of the appearance of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart at Cloquet, as it will appear when completed. Rev. Charles Giraux, the pastor of the Roman Catholic congregation of that city, has labored long and faithfully for the erection of a suitable church edifice there, and, after overcoming many obstacles, success has at last crowned his efforts. Father Giraux was a a resident of Duluth for eight years, five years at the French church, on Eleventh avenue west, and three years at the cathedral, and his many friends will be glad to learn of his success at Cloquet and give him their material and moral aid in this most worthy enterprise.

Bishop McGoulrick is deeply interested in the new church, and has encouraged it in every way. His sanction has been given in the following letters:

"Rev. Father Giraux is authorized to make arrangements for the suitable location for a new church in Cloquet. We hope to see him aided in his laudable endeavor by the friends and well wishers of the progress of the church in Cloquet. JAMES McGOLRICK,
"Bishop of Duluth."

Jan. 4, 1900.

"Rev. Giraux, of Cloquet, is engaged in the good work of building a new church, which is very much needed. Any aid extended him will be appreciated by JAMES McGOLRICK,
"Bishop of Duluth."

July 19, 1894.

On Sept. 24, 1901, there was corporated under the tittle of the Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart an organization to take charge of and manage all temporal affairs of the Roman Catholic church of the Cloquet parish. The officers chosen were Rt. Rev. James McGolrick, bishop of Duluth, president; Rev. Charles Giraux, pastor, vice president; Rt. Rev. Buh, vicar general; Michael T. Savage, treasurer; Joseph Loisel, secretary. A board of consultation was chosen and consists of Joseph Helninger, Joseph Lancourt, John F. O'Brien and Louis Leimer. The people of the parish have ably seconded their pastor in working for the new church, but it was found that a heavy loan would have to be secured in order to build it and the following gentlemen consented to endorse the notes for this purpose: M. T. Savage, Joseph Loisel, Louis Leimer, Joseph Helninger, Joseph Lancourt, Maurice O'Brien, Guy Cookson, Joseph Claveau, A. M. Brunelle, James W. Dyer, Peter Burns and Stan McCoubrey.

The Church of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart will be a fine structure, 48 by 132 feet in size, with a seating capacity of 800 people. It is being built with a basement under the whole building, and its height will be forty-one feet above the ground level. The interior is to be finished in hard plaster, and will have the pews, altar, etc., in keeping with the general excellent appearance of the edifice. The windows will be of stained glass and are very handsome. The total cost of the church will be about $20,000, and under the contract must be finished by Nov. 1. However, at the rate the work is progressing it is probable that it will be available for services in October, when the formal dedication will take place.

FEW JUDGES OF WHISKY.

"Men who drink may not know it," said an old barkeeper to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "but the man behind the bar knows as much about the kind of whisky the customer likes as the customer himself knows. The fact of the business is that is the easiest thing in the world to impose on the average man. The only thing the barkeeper has to learn is the character of the whisky a man drinks, whether it is strong or mild. You take the average man who visits saloons, and who claims to be a good judge of whisky, and when you come to look into it you will find that he goes altogether by the smoothness of taste, or the strength of the article you give him. Bad whisky is sometimes strong and sometimes mild, and the result is that the man who depends upon the effect whisky has on the mouth and the palate will be fooled in nine cases out of ten. Unless a man is really an expert in the business—and there are few experts in spite of the claims of men who are counted among the regular whisky drinkers—it is really a very hard thing for him to tell one kind of whisky from another. Of course, there are men who can tell one kind of whisky from another. There are men who are really good judges of whisky. They cannot be fooled. But with the average man it is an easy thing for the barkeeper to practice the art of deception if he is inclined to do so. The customer will not know the difference. It is really a very simple matter. All the barkeeper has to do is to learn the kind of whisky the man likes, whether he wants a strong whisky or a mild whisky. This is all the barkeeper needs to know. When he learns this it is an easy matter for him to fool the man who drinks at the bar, if he happens to be connected with a place which deals indifferently with the brands of whisky. Yes, there are but very few good judges of whisky. Nine out of ten of the drinking men boast of the fact that they know good whisky, but they do not. The only thing they have learned, as a matter of fact, is the difference between strong whisky and mild whisky, and a mere novice in the drinking business will know this much after a few rounds with the cup."

Humane Agent Withrow runs across many cases of pathetic destitution in his work, but few cases are more pathetic than his discovery of five half orphans at Hibbing in the early part of this month. They were deserted by their father, John Macki, and when Mr. Withrow found them they were playing on the bed with a dog. Their hunger was something distressing.

All five were placed in the Children's home, in the East End, and are doing nicely. The first and third children from the right are twins.

Mortgage To Be Burned

Sunday To Be a Day of Great Rejoicing In the First Methodist Church, As the Last Vestige of Debt Will Be Wiped Out.

Tomorrow will see great rejoicing in the First Methodist church. The last vestige of debt will then have been wiped from that congregation and church, and the mortgage that has hung over them for many years will be burned amid praise, song and prayers of thanksgiving.

The services of the day will open with a baptismal service at 10:15 o'clock in the lecture room. At 10:30 o'clock the sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered and members will be received. At noon the Sunday school will meet. At 6:45 o'clock the Epworth league will conduct a praise service.

The important service of the day when the mortgage will be burned will take place in the evening. There will be addresses by Rev. J. W. Powell, Jr., of the Lakeside church; Dr. Robert Forbes, presiding elder of the Duluth district, and Rev. Sam P. Long, the pastor. Watson S. Moore, treasurer of the board of trustees, will present his report and then the mortgage will be burned. Henry M. Bradley, chairman of the board of trustees, will apply the match.

The following are the musical programs for the day:

History of Church.

The history of the First Methodist Episcopal church is interwoven with the history of the city of Duluth. One of the first to expound the gospel in the Methodist tongue, where now stands the matchless Zenith City, was Rev. Samuel Spates, a missionary to the Indians. At a session of the Minnesota annual conference held at Minneapolis Oct. 7 and 11, 1869, was formed the charge of Duluth and Oneota. Rev. H. Webb was appointed pastor by Bishop Levi Scott. After a journey occupying seventeen days' time made from St. Anthony via Milwaukee, Green Bay, Marquette and Superior city, part of the time advancing by rail and a part of the time by boat, Duluth was reached Tuesday, Nov. 2, 1869. This was the year in which the Western Land association platted the city.

On the following Sunday this first resident pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church occupied the school house and preached to twenty-five or thirty persons. The organization of the church took place afterward. Mrs. Webb was the only member received in full membership, but seed for the future was found in the person of one Swede who joined on probation. Fables By George Ade.

The Modern Fable of the Syndicate Lover, the Pickled Papa and the President of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

(Copyright, 1902, by R. H. Russell.)

Once there was a yearning Bachelor who wanted the Girl so hard that he would come around at Night and looked up at the Windows of her Boodwar and g[illegible]w the Palings of the Front Fence.

The First of Love had got beyond Control and it was time to call out the entire Department. He was for Petty and had no Shame in the Matter. He would send a A. D. T. Boy at 6, saying that he would be up at 8 and then he would phone her at 7 to find out if she had received the Note.

His affection was none of your stingy, half-way Quivers. It was the real Essence of Googoo, double strength. It was an Omnibus Love that reached out its red-hot Tentacles and twined around all Objects, animate and inanimate, that were associated with little Honey-Bun.

He would have deemed it a Holy Privilege to go around and mow the Grass in her Front Yard.

It was the kind of transfiguring, old-fashioned, romantic-novel Love that made him think well of her Kin-Folks. He knew that anyone who was related to the Queen of the Human Race was certainly Right. So he tried to stand Ace with the Old People and a brother named Walter and a tall-browed Sister who was Intellectual.

Consequently his Work was mapped cut for him.

Mopsey's Father was what we might call Liberal in his Views. That is, he was not utterly set against the High Ball as a Substitute for 5 o'clock Tea. Furthermore he had stubbed his Toe often enough to know from sad Experience the true Value of two small Pairs when five are setting in.

Had it not been that he took on his daily Package in a Club instead of a Saloon, and carried a goldheaded Cane, a good many people would have said that he Drank. As it was, he simply had the Name of being a High Liver. When he was slight Overset and carried about 165 in his Gauge he was exceedingly Dignified, in fact a Gentleman of the Old School. He objected to playing Poker with a Stranger, but he loved to skin a Good Friend, so he was no Gambler.

Baby's Mother was exactly the Sort that is usually married to an elderly Sport. Having found it impossible to wean him away from the Red Eye and the Saturday Night Game that laps over into Monday Morning, she tried to catch even by reforming all the rest of the Universe. She was a member of 33 Organizations that were out to whip-saw the Cigarette, down the Cocktail and give a lasting Ki-Bash to the Blue Chip and the Kitty. As soon as she had a little Money saved up she sent it to the Missionaries in Kakaroo. By attending Services at least twice every Sunday she hoped to establish a good General Average for the whole family.

As for the other members of the Family they knew that she had enough Piety to supply four ordinary Mortals so they did not have to go out and accumulate any. The whole Bunch, Father included, expected to get past the Turnstile on Mother's Ticket.

The Sister with the busy Dome was in two or three Philadelphia Library Clubs. She read one Book a Day, even in the hottest Weather. If she had stopped to take Breath, the Publishers would have secured a Lead and she never could have caught up. On Monday it would be Charles Major, on Tuesday it would be Marion Crawford, on Wednesday it would be John Kendrick Bangs, on Thursday it would be Marie Corelli, on Friday it would be Emerson Hough and on Saturday it would be Conan Doyle. Then on Sunday she would hold her Head, and try to mentally digest the Chop Suey.

TOOK HIM DOWN TO THE CLUB.

Loved one had a Brother with big gristly Hands and stocky Shoulders. His Conception of a Glad Summer's Day was to get out and play 72 Holes, followed by several Sets of Tennis, after which it was time to bat up a few Flies and then the nimble Ping-Pong.

The True Lover thought it a smooth Policy to cultivate the Quartet that lived with his Own and Only One. As for Father and Mother and the female Book Worm and athletic Walter, they were friendly to the prosperous Bachelor and each one determined to put in a few quiet Plugs for Sis.

So Father took the Candidate down to his Club and gave him Old Stuff that was 130 Proof and then tried him out in a nice little cut-throat Game. By the time he got away from the Pirates, he was due to show up and attend Morning Service with the prospective Mother-in-Law. He let on that he was keen for a good Sermon and he made an awful Bluff at singing the Hymns that he had not heard for twenty years. On Sunday Afternoon he was due to meet Brother Walt at the Country Club and play him for a Ball a Hole. After a couple of Sundays, Walt had enough Haskels to last him a Life-Time.

When he had hurried to his Room and rubbed himself with Witch Hazel, he would tear for the House, where the living Book Review would be waiting to ask him if he didn't think Dorothy Vernon was better than Mary MacLane. While he would be doing Foot-Work and side-stepping the Questions that were calculated to show him up as a howling Ignormaus, the Real Thing would be sitting back waiting in vain for an Opening.

This went on for quite a Spell. He had been jolted at Poker, trimmed at Golf, put against long Sermons right in Fly-Time and conned into reading 47 Books that did not appeal to nim. He seemed to be making grand Headway with all members of the Outfit except the One that he wanted to snare out into a Dim Corner and hold in a Strong Embrace forever and ever.

After a while he began to weaken on the Scheme of playing to a whole Cast of Characters. He wondered if it would not be just as easy to love a lone Orphan.

She was Wise. She saw herself losing a Good Thing. It was a shame to back-cap her own Tribe, just when they were pulling for her, but she had to do it. One Night she fought off the others and lured him into a Boat and there in the Moonlight she told how she had lived in the same House with them for 19 Years and how they were all right, but they wouldn't do.

"It's a mere Suggestion," she added,

LURED HIM INTO A BOAT.

"but why don't you stop trying to make these Around-the-Table Combination Shots and pay a little more attention to Birdie. You don't have to win out the entire Family in order to book me. You must be an Amateur."

Thereupon they Clinched and the Family dropped out of the Deal.

MORAL: Don't try to Marry an entire Family or it may work out that Way.

THE NEW THOUGHT

Wife of Chicago Mental Manipulator Seeks a Divorce.

Says Sidney Blanshard Flower "Sees Things" At Night.

Insists on Making Mediums Out of Unwilling Raw Material.

Chicago, June 27.—"New Thought," which is recomended by Sydney Blanshard Flower as a highly nutritious mental food, has found its way to a divorce court.

Ghosts that walk in the night and a nocturnal desire to create mediums out of unwilling raw material play a part in the allegations.

Mrs. Harriet Flower, wife of the discoverer of the approved way of thinking, has been doubtful of "new thought" for some time. Finally she had an old thought—the same as thousands of women have had, and probably will continue to have.

She went to the circuit court with this old thought, and when she had departed a bill was on file clearging her husband with cruelty and desertion.

Besides a decree of separate maintenance, Mrs. Flower asks that her husband be restrained from departing out of the jurisdiction of the court and from disposing of any business interest he may have.

Flower, his wife, says, is the vice president and manager of the Psychic Research company, and is owner of the New Thought Publishing company, as well as being interested in a number of other "new thought" concerns.

According to the bill the couple were married on April 17, 1900, in Chicago. About four weeks after their marriage, Mrs. Flower says, her husband abandoned her without cause and sent her home to her parents. Later he induced her to return to him, it is alleged, but began a course of unkind and inhuman treatment until she finally separated fromfrom him on Jan. 23, 1901.

Flower, it is alleged, told his wife on several occasions that he was tired of living with her, that he had simply married her as "an experiment," and that it had proved to be "a mistake."

During the time she lived with her husband, Mrs. Flower says, he was deeply intested in psychic manifestations, and would at times wake her up in the middle of the night and insist that there were ghosts in the room.

On these occasions, she says, Flower would try to make her see the ghosts and insisted on making her a medium. He also insisted on her doing spirit writing, she says.

Mrs. Flower avers that by cruelties and abuses her husband finally caused her to take laudanum. After she had informed her husband of what she had done, and while she was violently ill, Mrs. Flower declares, he left her lying on the floor and failed to call a physician.

Her attempt to kill herself, Mrs. Flower says, was in line with suggestions which her husband had made to her frequently during their married life.

According to the bill, Mr. Flower often told his wife he would be willing to have her die if she could do so in a way that would not "bring disgrace" to him.

In explaining some of her husband's business methods, Mrs. Flower tells of one "thought" which she says was extremely profitable. This thought impelled Mr. Flower to advertise the formula of a complexion restorer, which would be sent on receipt for $1.

When Mr. Flower got his hands on the dollar, his wife avers, he would think out a formula which ran something like this:

"Wash your face in hot water and then suddenly dash cold water over it."

As a further evidence of her husband's thrift, Mrs. Flower declares that he managed to dress himself at the expense of the business concerns with which he was connected. Once, she says, he bought an overcoat and charked it on the books as "expenses."

"It looks better that way," he is said to have remarked.

It appears in his wife's bill that Mr. Flower has been put to the necessity of devoting some of his thoughts to creditors whose uncultivated mentalities weer not capable of mounting above the level of sordid dollars.

"My husband told me," says Mrs. Flower, "that he was the owner of the Psychic reseach company, but that in order to avoid creditors, or possible creditors, he had the greater part of the stock in the company in the name of J. V. Daniels, manager of the London branch of the same concern."

The Psychic club, of America, according to Mrs. Flower, has 10,000 members, and each of these contributes $1 a year to the "new thought" cause.

According to Mrs. Flower, her husband is interested in the following business enterprises, all of which are said to be directly or indirectly connected with his magazine, "New Thought":

The New Thought Publishing company.
The Flower Health Cigar company.
The Psychic Research company.
The Flower Food Remedy company.
The Hirsutan Manufacturing company.
The Columbia College of Osteopathy.
The Atkinson School of Mental Science.
The Resorcine Manufacturing company.
The Psychic club, of America.
Somnopathy.
Kill fear secret.
Cash compeling scheme.
Course of instruction in mail order business.

The "health cigar," which is widely advertised in Flower's magazine, is a testimonial to the "new thought" man's originality. It purports to be a choice Havana product from which all the poisons have ben extracted without "in the least impairing the flavor." The health cigars are sold at a price little above what is charged for stogies.

Gambling In Wall Street—Some Reflections Upon Religious Professions.

New York, June 28.—"The public," meaning the flats, or suckers, has dropped out of "the market," again, leaving the builders of that temple to change money and sell doves to themselves.

The average Wall street commoner is a man of small education and a reticule mind, engrossed with gossip. He would like to know you as "a friend of Keene's," not as any reality. He knows little of Keene, but Keene is an idol and idol rumors are the life of Wall street. The game there is to get your money and no race course, nor gambling bank, that I know of plays so exclusively for your pecunious part as Wall street. An angler baiting for an eel is not as assiduous as the sharper of "the money market." Every great broker knows that the gambling element of his fellow man is next to his immortality; that he will play a point like a suicide; will worship the point-giver like a God; will take his wife's stake in life and put it on the "up."

Unquestionably the fervor of greed is the American national religion; it besets most the slick, staid races, like the Pennsylvania Dutch and the blue nosed Puritans. If you are unaware of the number of the Pennsylvania Dutch in New oYrk banking, go and inquire. Belmont is of the Dunkers of Ephrata; Koontz Brothers are of the Pennsylvania Dutch; so was Gen. Eckert, of the Western Union Telegraph. The Rockefellers are Teutons, the Astors, Germans of the same grade whom Penn imported to Pennsylvania; the Vanderbilts, sailors and peddlers. I once knew a French geologist who lived a savage life in the coal fields of Kentucky; he was prospecting in mineral lands for Koontz Brothers, silently advising them where to buy, while the ignorant natives, not the equals of Hottentots, were having vendettas with each other.

Henry Watterson once said to me: "Nobody is killed in Kentucky but who ought to be killed."

Yet, observe the financiers who have come out of Kentucky. Also out of the bottoms of Indiana and from Tennessee. Guthrie, secretary of the treasury, and Diana had slipped up in the state election. Wilson, whose daughter is the wife of Herbert, the new British ambassador, was a financier in and for the rebellion, supplying rebel armies with meat to eat, and after the war he picked up the railroad from Virginia to Memphis and revived it with money he made running the blockade. He took off his coat and worked like a hired man in a cotton banking house next to R. T. Flower. Now he is one of the Four Hundred and One, with a daughter married to an Astor, a Vanderbilt, a Goelet and a Pembroke.

As one looks over the banking aggregate of New York he is compelled to feel that the men in that business are of the very first responsibility. They give a better assurance to your money, your estate, your orphans and widow than ever was the fact before. Before the present period many estates were plundered, and as the executors or administrators were selected from the ultra moral, or respectable class, the conclusion must be that pretension, or even appearance, will not do for financial responsibility.

The bookkeeping of the treasury department established by Hamilton, Wolcott, etc., a greater assurance than the personal or religious honesty of all the individuals there. This should be a lesson to moralists to substitute system for character. System is the only reliable character. The good, per se, trust to prayer and Providence; the real trust to organization which enforces honesty. No one man in hundreds is fit to take care of money not his own. He trusts to optimism, which is not responsibility.

Several years ago a widow consulted me about the fortune left by her husband, who had always kept his account in a local private bank. She said she thought of putting it under a city trust company. I heard her argument and endorsed it. The bankers failed; the trust company is solid.

Looking over the field I feel that our regulated finance is, if not absolutely perfect, a marvelous improvement, and I can hardly anticipate a general panic such as we had in 1857 or in 1873. The trusts underwrite great schemes, but money is seggregated and concentrating; it does not take in the moral matter of honesty so much as sufficiency.

Herein our exclusively moral agencies, such as conscientious men took in charge, must defer to the morals of bookkeeping.

A man who does not keep books is not a proper custodian of money, be he Bishop Purcell or St. Vario Borromeo. The decalogue is well enough, but security is statesmanship.

Mark Hanna continues to pack Ohio for the presidency. This is apparent from conversations with Ohio agents in Washington and everywhere. The McKinley nomination is to be repeated and only Theodore Roosevelt stands in the way.

Forager is far away the most open quantity in Ohio politics. I heard ex-Senator Judge George Gray speak lately of the agreeable surprise Foraker was to him, as against Foraker he was prejudiced. Ex-Senator Higgins and Gen. James H. Wilson expressed the same appreciation. But Foraker has no barrel: he is not the politician Martin Tetzel, and the net is being cast over Ohio in a way one would think, to segregate her still more.

Two of her presidents have been assassinated through the sinlousities of their example.

Success without mental sincerity conveys reaction. The nomination of Garfield was resented by John Sherman as a palpable betrayal. That of Hayes was without any sincerity, as the enemies of Blaine did it. Arthur was put on the ticket with Garfield without any principle. Evidence has since appeared that Garfield was collusive with the design to drop Sherman. Joseph Manly lately related to me that Conkling had a private interview with him by request at the convention of 1880 and asked that Blaine still be supported instead of Blaine's men flying to a candidate made out of conspiracies. Garfield repaid the support of Blaine's people by putting Blaine in the cabinet; then the trade to carry New York by putting on Arthur effectuated its destruction. A lunatic saw that Ohio had swayed doubly and Arthur got the presidency. Blaine was defeated from setting the example more recently seen of rubbing together priests and classes.

A return to decent practices is necessary for the public honor. Vast sums of money paid to elect the American magistrate have become the example of at least two campaigns. The treatment of John Sherman by both McKinley and Hanna was in the nature of a confidence game. They decoyed him from his senate seat, took the seat and then turned him out of the state department. He told me that in the parsimony and appetite of the new Ohio galaxy they would not allow him a common clerkship. Gen. Alger, who had been antagonized by Sherman, appointed Sherman's daughter's sister-in-law to a clerkship when no other minister would do so.

We have read the Rathbone case. Gen. Wood, the ablest mind produced in McKinley's two terms, is proscribed by Hanna's men and no man can like Roosevelt who dislikes Wood.

Whether we consider that presidents appoint judges we want presidents sincerely elected.

Senator Platt of New York once related to me how $100,000 in small bills were carried to Cleveland, by an Ohio jurist from New York city probably given by Jay Gould. It was then taken to Indiana, and a consultation held with shameless leaders there who wanted it all. The New Yorker sent half of the money back to its giver. This was in 1881, when Indiana did it. Arthur was put on the ticket with Garfield without any principle. Evidence has since appeared that Garfield was collusive with the design to drop Sherman. Joseph Manly lately related to me that Conkling had a private interview with him by request at the convention of 1880 and asked that Blaine still be supported instead of Blaine's men flying to a candidate made out of conspiracies. Garfield repaid the support of Blaine's people by putting Blaine in the cabinet; then the trade to carry New York by putting on Arthur effectuated its destruction. A lunatic saw that Ohio had swayed doubly and Arthur got the presidency. Blaine was defeated from setting the example more recently seen of rubbing together priests and classes.

Ohio's maneuvers to take the presidency, since 1827, have been the corruptling of the suffrage all through the center of the country, and it is time that junta had a rest.

Roosevelt stands for everything that is the opposite of Ohio politics. Knowing with whom he has to deal, he has been cool and wise. If they could only get him to lose his temper! His fame has no palaver; he does not advertise himself by piety. He has no Mr. Hyde no manager; deceit is to him the reliance of a coward. How natural that, having elected a sure candidate by a mint of money —McKinley requiring no pecuniary assistance to be elected—the muck-rake should now be leading in the forces of labor unions and corporations! Such complotting threatens the existence of our society. It is begging the crown from the Praetorian guard.

I asked an Ohio officeholder recently if the Capt. Cowles who is married to the president's sister could be the same who previously married the daughter of Allan Thurman, of Ohio. "The very same," said he. "I attended the wedding. This case shows the reasonableness of divorce. Cowles was an excellent, a model man, and he is having his happiness in a second and a congenial marriage."

Considerable clatter is being made over a refutation by the son of Mark Hopkins that George Washington was a member of the Protestant Episcopal church, as had been positively asserted by Bishop Satterlee and a few others. Mr. Mark Hopkins is the clerk of the United States court of claims. In a more barbarous age he would have been pinched, desalaried and added to the martyrs of historical literature. Senator Lodge has gone into the discussion on the sanhedrim side.

The controversy will be of no good to zealotry. Washington's period was abreast of the scientific revival in Europe which disseminated reprints of the works of Bolingbroke, Hume and the encyclopedists in America. John Adams, a Unitarian like his president son, who helped to found the Unitarian church in Washington, read Bolingbroke through often. Jefferson, Madison, Monroe were more or less free thinkers, conforming officially to religious necessity. Washington also, as a commissioned British officer, attended to certain vestry duties and married his wife's widowed daughter-in-law to the son of the preacher of Pohick church. But Andrew Jackson was the first president to show a faney for the preachers, although he was a sorry model for the Christian life. Van Buren, in his incomplete book, ascribed the doctrine of the Declaration of Independence to Rousseau.

Not much is known about the beliefs of most of the following presidents. The Methodists desired to believe that Gen. Taylor was inclined towards them. Politics is not a flourishing filed to plant dogmatism in. Buchanan's brother was an Episcopal clergyman, although the Buchanans were raised Presbyterians. Addiction to the Episcopal church in our rulers is rather evidence of their broad churchism than of their patriotic shibboleth. Our minister to Germany, Andrew White, is not disturbed becatse he wrote "The Conflict Between Religion and Science," taking the side of science. It matters not much what Tyler was, and nobody quotes him. Polk was Presbyterian by race, not selection. Lincoln attended the Presbyterian church for family and convenience, but had a hard head for fate and doctrine. Grant went to the Methodist church as that of his parents and wife. Most of the presidents' wives were attendants or communicants. Garfield prenched as a Campbellite Baptist, but he also attended Spiritualistic seances and believed in the mesmeric power of Joseph Smith, the Mormon; his mother's stock was that of Ballou, the founder of Universalism. Mrs. Hayes was a Methodist. Arthur's father was a Baptist preacher, but it was not catching. Cleveland's father was a preacher, but the preachers harried him. Harrison was a Calvinist, McKinley a Methodist; Roosevelt is a Dutch Calvinist by national descent. The religion of all the presidents would not satisfy a fanatic.

Washington, as a man of sense, was obliged to tolerate all forms of belief and obliged to tolerate sincerely all forms of belief and disbelief. Paine was his best pen. He spent nearly eight years at the formative time of his among the Indian pagans and the German sectarian disciples. He took no action against the secularizing of the established church in Virginia. His colleague, the vice president, Adams, who succeeded him, wrote in 1813 to Jefferson, "Voltaire has done more than even Luther and Calvin to lower the tone of that proud hierarchy that shot itself up above the clouds, and more to propagate religious liberty than Calvin, or Lutner, or even Locke.

"I rejoice that Gibon has lived, that Hume has lived, that Bolingbroke has lived. It is laughable to hear Burke call Bolingbroke a superficial writer; to hear him ask 'whoever read him through?' Had I been present I should have answered, I, myself, have read him through more than fifty years ago, and more than five times in my life, and once within five years past."

The Rev. Jonathan Boucher, who was rector of parishes close to Mount Vernon from 1754 to 1765, or from Washington's 22nd to his 43rd year, published in 1799 a book which I possess and from which I obtain no such extravgant assertions as are now put forth by men who think conformity and respectability are important to the character of Washington.

As long ago as 1839 Sparks said that "there have been discussions tending to throw doubts over the religious belief of Washington," which the compiler refutes by such passing routine as his committing a hymn to memory when a boy and having religious services in camps. He was undoubtedly elected a vestryman, as one of the positions of an influential character. He was not speculative in any subject. Men of good feeling prefer that he should not be painted as a lip-servant, nor made religious by state edict like Louis XIV.

Politeness, inner purity, go before austere professions.

Many of us prefer that Washington should belong to the noble class of ancients like Regulus, Cincinnatus, Germanicus, than be conformed to some narrow confines of mind and observance. As he was wise and good, why give a cause for them beyond his real character? Why say a creed more necessary to Washington more than to Socrates? "Gen. Washington never received the communion in the churches of which I am parochial minister. Mrs. Washington was an habitual communicant," settles the question from Bishop White, the first Episcopal bishop, with Bishop Provoost.

The characteristic of this age is that it investigates pious presumptions. They must be more honest from good men than from men of affairs. What would Washinton add to his character by passing the collection plate and kneeling in the forms?

The fact is that these heedless clericals uncover their own supposition to force history and to misunderstand public motives. Their treatment of what used to be called "profane history," meaning the history of everything but Abraham, Isaac and Jonah, illustrates the weakening of the "sacred" model, so that from the self-made soldier of America, whose only teacher was a bought convict (vide the Rev. Mr. Boucher), they arrogate a man of qualms and tremors, of credulities and respecting of rites.

Not long ago a young priest came to me to inquire about the Calvert settlements on the Chesapeake. He was apparently engaged in claiming for his sect much of the efficiency of the American revolution. He had not the name of any chaplain of his church in that war, but was like the boy with the woodchucks: "When I get two more and the one I am after now I will have three." He asked me how many of his sect I supposed were in the Maryland line. I answered, off-hand, "perhaps a third." But it was a question and my answer was not fairly drawn. Thus, each is magnifying his own fold and calling on all the other sects to sustain the general mudlle. The average secular man gets nothing out of his church attachment in the way of emoluments or titles, which go strictly to the ecclesiastics. Therefore, there is no occasion to scissor off a piece of gimp from Gen. Washington to point to it with pride as an ornament about our altar.

Deener than the subject of a man's mooted church is that of the virtue or vice in a belief which some think is a matter of volition. Belief is not within the power of all sorts of men. It is not a profession, but a disposition. I want no man to share my belief as a compliment, nor yet as a coercion. GATH.

MORTGAGE TO BE BURNED.

the conference year in 1890, and his connection with the church saw nothing but growth and prosperity. Under his care in 1887 the membership was 326, probationers 27, and 343 Sabbath school pupils; 1888 saw a membership of 440, probationers 80, and Sabbath school scholars to the number of 332, with 36 officers and teachers.

The old church building used for so many years was becoming too small and plans were begun for the erection of a new one. The site of the present church was bought June 14, 1887, for $8,000.

In 1889 the church membership numbered 490, with 48 probationers, 375 Sabbath school scholars and 30 officers and teachers. The year of 1890-90 saw the church at Lester Park added to the list of Methodist Episcopal churches in and around Duluth and the Epworth league chartered Oct. 1, 1890. At the close of Dr. Dunn's pastorate the names of 514 members were on the church roles, aside from the 57 probationers. The Sabbath school numbered 357 scholars and 30 officers and teachers.

At the thirty-sixth session of the Minnesota conference held at Mankato, Oct. 1, 1890, Rev. C. H. Stocking was transfered from Burlington, Iowa, and given the charge at Duluth.

Dr. Stocking was succeeded by Dr. E. D. Huntley, now of Baltimore, Dr. James M. Thoburn, of Allegheny, Pa., Dr. George H. Humason, of Camden, N. J., and Dr. Samuel P. Long, of Pittsburg, the present pastor.

Early in 1890 the plans were matured for the building of the present church. During this year $35,000 was pledged, and in the fall of that year the building committee was organized, with A. W. Bradley as chairman; C. E. Shannon, secretary, and W. S. Moore, treasurer. The church was completed and dedicated on Feb. 5, 1893. The entire cost, including the furnishing, was $128,000. It is one of the largest and most complete churches in the denomination, accommodating 2500 people in its auditorium, and has every arrangement necessary for efficient church work.

The membership of the church, including probationers, is 800. The Sunday school now has an enrollment of 700 and is a modern school in every sense, with kindergarten, primary departments, intermediate and Bible classes. The Women's Aid society, Women's Foreign Missionary society, Women's Home Missianary society and Epworth League are effective organizations. Girls' clubs and boys' clubs interest and help the young people.

The lecture bureau has for nine years given to the city of Duluth as fine a lecture course as is conducted in any city in the United States.

The church is open from 8 o'clock in the morning to 10 o'clock at night, with some one always in attendance. A constant effort is made to provide work for the unemployed, care for the poor and to make the church as valuable to the city of Duluth as possible. The services are made as attractive as the official board can arrange, and the church comes very near the plan of an institutional church.

The effort to wipe out the debt was begun in November, 1899, and in two and a half years there has been paid in and applied to the liquidation of the church debt $42,500.

The present officers of the church are: Trustees—H. M. Bradley, A. W. Bradley, R. R. Briggs, W. S. Moore, W. H. Alexander, W. O. Pealer, C. A. Congdon, W. F. Moore.

Stewards—E. L. Bradley, J. H. Harris, C. E. Shannon, W. B. Dunlop, Dr. A. C. Taylor, I. S. Moore, H. W. Van Valkenberg, L. W. Palmer, J. H. Cook, R. C. Vincent.

Local preacher, John Callahan.

Pastor's assistant, Mrs. Wesley Feetham.

President of Epworth league, W. A. Stevenson.

Superintendent of Sabbath school, Watson S. Moore.

It is a somewhat interesting fact that the old church which was used for so many years at the corner of Second street and Third avenue west was not consigned to the waste pile when torn down, but it is now in use at Virginia, to which place it was removed and set up. Dr. Long preached in the church on one occasion, and was much surprised when told that he had been preaching in the First Methodist church of Duluth.

GYPSIES USE AUTOMOBILE.

A band of gypsies traveling in an automobile arrived in this city today and went into camp at Sherwood park, writes the Mt. Vernon correspondent of the New York Sun. The automobile, which is a gasoline affair, is large and very handsome and appears at a distance like a trolley car. It was especially built for the tribe. The inside is divided in three apartments, one a bedroom, another a dining room and in the front is the kitchen.

The outside is painted in gay colors, the main body is finished in a rich, deep green and the running gear is red. The whole vehicle is very brightly decorated with gold. Rich curtains drape the windows.

The chief of the tribe says that he can make fifty miles a day in the automobile if he wants to. Notwithstanding his possession of an automobile, he is still ready to trade in horses.

The above picture is of Richmond street, London, Ontario. The dark spots show bad places in the sheet asphalt paving. This paving was put down by the same concern that is pushing the scheme to pave East Superior street with Trinidad sheet asphalt. It was put down under a five-year guarantee, which expired last fall. The city of London made the asphalt company repair it just prior to the expiration of the guarantee. The above picture shows what the street looked like within six months after the extensive repairing, and yet they say sheet asphalt is the ideal paving for East Superior street.

Domestic Good Temper

By Harriet Prescott Spofford.

If it were necessary to give an opinion as to what is the first and chief constituent of a happy marriage, one might hesitate for a moment over the thought of many almost indispensable virtues, and dally over that of absolute trustfulness on both sides, but one, if thinking and weighing deliberately, would decide presently that the real requisite for happiness in marriage is good nature. Not that a tempest once in a great while may not be worth while to clear the air and to show how good the other is, but in the long, round year the sunshine and fair weather is the best.

What will you not pardon to a sunny-faced rogue? A man may commit countless peccadilloes, a thousand offenses against good taste, even be guilty of sins, but an unfailing sweetness of disposition will win forgiveness for them all. A woman may be extravagant, a poor housekeeper, even slatternly, or a provoker of scandal, but there is no disruption in the household of which she is mistress as long as, with a smile, she acknowledges her fault, though her sin is ever before us. A pair of dimples has saved many a little scamp from a whipping; they are just as useful when the scamp is older and the dimples are slipping into wrinklas. For the dimple is not only evidence of the smile itself, but it stimulates the smiles of others.

Who can rebuke too sharply or too frequently when reproach is always received without retort, without affront? Who is not made to feel upon the spot that good nature is better than any impeccability?

We have, most of us, seen exquisite housekeepers who all but follow the intruder about with a broom, who are ready to dust the chair you rise from, require overshoes to be left outside the door; who, if you take a book from one rom and lay it dwn, carry it back before your eyes; who make more circumstance of broken china than of broken bones. And most of us prefer for a companion the home-body, who makes no fuss about anything, but who is tender and caressing and gay and consoling and sympathetic and always sweet-tempered, although there be fluff on her floors and nicks on her dishes, and no meal ready at its appointed hour. And most of us, again, rather than with the petulent and fault-finding man, or with the stern and sour and solemn incarnation of all the virtues, or with the lofty and superior soul, without whose wisdom and learning the world could not revolve, would choose companionship with the off-hand, happy-go-lucky fellow, who, if the dinner is late, says: "Never mind; it will be all the better when it does come," or if we ourselves are late for church or theater or outing, says: "Well, we will enjoy it all the more when we get there;" or, if the servants are rebellious, condones it by declaring: "We can't expect perfection for the price we pay." And this man may have his better faults, he may not be at home as much as you would like, he may be too careful about the spending of his money, he may have various habits unpleasant to you; but you love him quite aside from them; you regard them as exterior affairs for which he is hardly responsible; you find some one else to be blamed for them, he himself is the sunny creature who brightens gloom wherever he goes, and of whose love you feel assured, whether in truth it is yours or not. And, after all, the assurance of love produces happiness.

In fact, good nature is a charm that never dies. Beauty fades, accomplishments fail, but good nature survives till all else falls to dust. It blends the opposing and contradictory elements like a fortunate solvent. It acts precisely as sunshine does, and where you find it happiness flourishes and life is enriched. In any individual it declares the existence of a calm and strong nervous temperament, and nothing lends itself more to peace and prosperity than that.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT

Washington Post: Perhaps the Chicago preacher who claims he never told a lie would have saved himself much annoyance by keeping the matter to himself.

Chicago Post: A Methodist pastor of Rockford has refused to use an honorary degree for the unusual reason that he believes degrees should be conferred for distinct merit.

Minneapolis Times: Rev. Father Barth, of Stephenson, Mich., will conduct a theater hereafter in connection with his church, his purpose being to wean his young men away from certain objectionable shows that flourish there. He will find the play more effective than the sermon in some quarters.

Boston Globe: The Jersey City minister who declared in his sermon Sunday evening that American girls ought to climb trees and eat corned beef and cabbage apparently believes that it is necessary for leaders of religious thought nowadays to preach something besides old-fashioned doctrinal sermons in order to fill the pews.

Brooklyn Eagle: Now that rectors and bishops have taken to playing baseball, we might invite a few of our esteemed pitchers and batters to express themselves in the pulpit. They could make their presence there enlivening. Indeed, the great need of sermons is a short stop. The search of every preacher is a center field. The task of getting people not to dispute the decisions of the umpire in the pulpit is a hard one. The delight of some preachers to catch topics on the fly is apparent. The church habit of handling hot truths with gloves is as noticeable as that of catchers and baseemen to do the same with hot balls. The desire of batters and of dominies to make hits is the same. And to pitchers and to preachers the matter of delivery is an important consideration. Besides, neither can be said to be indifferent to the gate money.

Chicago Record-Herald: In accepting the honorary degree of doctor of jurisprudence from the Augustinian college of St. Thomas, of Villanova, ex-President Cleveland passed over the personal significance of the ceremony to comment on its general import. He referred to the institution as a severely Catholic college, which was nevertheless ready to bestow its honors "upon one connected with the management of and holding an honorary degree in the severely Protestant Princeton university." And pointed to the act as an impressive illustration of the liberal spirit which pervades the schools of this country and is common to the great majority of them. Under the influence of this spirit Protestant institutions have conferred their degrees upon members of the Catholic priesthood and upon all such occasions there is a notable outburst of good-will and fraternal feeling which means a great deal to the country.

BLASTS FROM RAM'S HORN.

Mighty rivers rise in quiet places.
Dead issues create no discussion.
Burnished brass shines brighter than nuggets of gold.
The criticism of the sermon often uproots the good seed.
Many negatives of vice do not make a positive virtue.
The flowers of rejoicing bloom on the tree of righteousness.
Sermon seed will sprout quickly if it is soaked in prayer.
Bread and butter Christians here may miss the banquet there.
The power of the pulpit is great, but that of the person is greater.
Many a man's practice puts an extinguisher on his profession.
He who fits his shoulder to the yoke is fitting his brows for the crown.
We are all willing to trust God to feed us if we may choose the food.
Honor is one of those things that he ...at seeks it shall not find it.
It is easier to see the way we ought to go than to go in the way we see.
A great man's greatness is often exhibited in self-imposed restrictions.

NEARING HOME.

One sweetly solemn thought
Comes to me o'er and o'er;
I'm nearer my home today
Than I have ever been before.

Nearer my father's house,
Where the many mansions be;
Nearer the great white throne,
Nearer the crystal sea.

Nearer the bound of life,
Where we lay our burdens down;
Nearer leaving the cross,
Nearer gaining the crown!

But lying darkly between,
Winding down through the night,
Is the silent, unknown stream,
That leads us at length to the light.

Closer and closer my steps
Come to the dread abysm;
Closer Death to my lips
Presses the awful chrism.

O, if my mortal feet
Have almost gained the brink;
If it be I am nearer home
Even today than I think.

Father, perfect my trust;
Let my spirit feel in death,
That her feet are firmly set
On the rock of a living faith!

DUN'S REVIEW

Foreign Markets Disarranged---Business Exceptionally Good.

New York, June 28.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Foreign markets were badly disarranged by the sudden illness of the king, and there was much liquidation prior to the closing of the British exchanges from Wednesday afternoon to Monday morning. Domestic conditions are exceptionally satisfactory and trade is well maintained, although low temperatures interfered with the distribution of midsummer specialties. Manufacturing operations have increase in activity, especially in the iron and steel industries, and the production, while constructive work on new buildings and bridges is very heavy. Labor difficulties have not improved in the anthracite region, but numerous settlements have been effected elsewhere. Most of the blast furnaces that were stopped by the scarcity of anthracite coal have resumed with coke, on which the ovens have established new records of output, and shipments have been still larger owing to the stocks accumulated during the car shortage.

Despite the vigorous pig iron production, numerous contracts have been placed abroad, and still the machine shops, manufacturers of stoves and implements and consumers generally are seeking deliveries. Structural steel and all forms of railway equipment continue to lead the market. Bars and sheets are the least active divisions of the market, but even in these there is no tendency to weakness. Higher freights have not materially checked importations, and it is reported that a large structural mill in Germany has sold its output for this year to American consumers. Another evidence of domestic needs is the placing of a Mexican rail contract with British producers, which would have ordinarily have been taken in this country. Eastern manufacturers of footwear report larger volume of contracts, mainly for delivery in August and September. Salesmen are sending in more orders, the change for the better being most noticeable at the South, where the stagnation was formerly most pronounced.

Leather has accumulated, and some tanneries are closed, but belting butts continue in demand at full prices. Chicago hides are slightly easier. More activity occurred in cotton goods, although at some concessions in prices. The changes were a natural result of recent declines in the raw material, buyers having delayed orders on that account. Although bleached cotton was freely purchased at the decline, there was little trading in print cloths, even at 3 cents. Woolen goods have taken more freely, especially the better quality, and clothing manufacturers are preparing for a large fall trade. Raw wool is in better request at Eastern markets, but the new clip is held at a premium that limits trade. Agricultural prospects are far above the average, and rapid progress is made with winter wheat harvesting. Delays have been encountered from heavy rain, while injury has occurred in the Southwest from drouth, but those adverse influences are less extensive than usual. Wide differences between cash prices and next crop options indicate the views of traders. The week brought little alteration in spot prices, light supplies holding all cereals fairly steady. Injury in Texas has partially offset the splendid outlook in other cotton states, while the strong statistical position, together with liberal consumption and covering of short contracts at Liverpool combined to cause a sharp rise in prices and moderate stiffening of spot cotton, but the advance was not maintained. Failures for the week number 200 in the United States, against 204 last year, and 20 in Canada, against 23 a year ago.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Hog cholera remedy eaten by chickens which were served at a neighborhood dinner, poisoned twenty-one persons at Wright, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Switzer and Mrs. Gunsalus may die. Others are very ill, but will recover. The dinner was given by Mrs. Edward Kyle.

Not in many years has Colorado been visited by so many forest fires as this summer. Half a dozen big fires are now raging and numerous smaller ones threaten to denude the entire state of timber if means cannot be found to check them. A great fire is sweeping the Medicine Bow range in Wyoming.

Charles Swenson, of Butternut, Minn., because the young lady to whom he had been paying attention would not give her consent to marry him, took a dose of strychnine last night and died in half an hour. He regretted the act when it was too late.

The state railroad and warehouse commission has again postponed until July 15, the hearing in the matter of passenger rates under the new resolution passed by the senate last winter.

Frederick S. Donnell, of Brookline, Mass., who was arrested on a warrant charging him with larceny of $2,000 worth of bonds of the Winnebago Traction company, of Oshkosh, had his case continued until July 18. The reason given for the long delay is that it will be necessary to bring witnesses from the West to Boston. Bail was fixed at $10,000.

"Kill him! Lynch him! the rope, hang him!" were some of the cries that greeted John W. Anderson, Chicago Socialist organizer, as he addressed a large crowd at Assumption, Christian county, Ill., Thursday night. Anderson was roughly handled and pelted with bad eggs. He was escorted to the railway station and sent out of town on the first train by the cooler-headed citizens.

CABLE FLASHES.

About 1500 Canadian troops sailed from Durban Friday. Two thousand additional Canadians will start for home July 12.

Gus Ruhlin, of Akron, Ohio, who defeated Tom Sharkey, of New York, in the eleventh round before the National Sporting club last Wednesday, challenged the winner of the approaching Jeffries-Fitzsimmons contest at San Francisco to fight either in England or the United States.

The first consignment of Boer prisoners numbering 478 men sailed from the Island of St. Helena Thursday for South Africa.

Although there were no definite reports that the four American teachers who have been missing in the Philippines since June 10, when they started on a day's outing have been killed, there is little doubt that they were murdered, as members of the constabulary who killed a man for resisting arrest found on his person the revolver, watch and chain which had belonged to Mr. Thomas, one of the teachers referred to.

In spite of the arrangements made for closing the special United States embassy, it has been decided that the flags shall remain flying owing to the receipts of an official intimation that Queen Alexandra will personally receive Mr. and Mrs. Reid at Buckingham palace on Saturday.

WORLD OF LABOR

Henry Dworschak Re-Elected President of Trades Assembly.

Henry Perrault Vice President and J. W. Richardson Secretary.

Committee to Work Up Labor Day Celebration.

Coming labor meetings:

Painters and decorators meet Tuesday, 18 West Superior street.

Carpenters' union will meet Tuesday, 18 West Superior street.

Retail Clerks' union will meet Tuesday, 31 West Superior street.

Marine engineers will meet Friday at 31 West Superior street.

Cigarmakers' union will meet Wednesday, 18 West Superior street.

Structural steel workers meet Wednesday, 31 West Superior street.

Freight handlers will meet Thursday, 18 West Superior street.

Leather workers meet Friday, 18 West Superior street.

• • •

The semi-annual election of officers of the Federated Trades' assembly occurred last evening.

Henry Dworschak, the popular presiding officer of the last six months, was re-elected. He was given a handsome endorsement, and frequently the delegates have remarked that his administration of the office has been equal to the best the assembly has ever had.

Mr. Dworschak is one of the oldest union labor men in the city. He has served in nearly every office that there is in the assembly, as well as holding responsible positions in the typographical union.

• • •

Henry Perrault, of the Cigarmakers' union, was elected vice president. Mr. Perrault is a Cuban by birth, and one of the rising labor workers in local circles.

J. W. Richardsn, of the Carpenters union, was re-elected recording secretary. Mr. Richardson has made a record in that office as well as business agent for the Building Trades' council. He enjoys unique popularity in local labor circles.

HENRY DWORSCHAK,
President of Duluth Trades Assembly.

Victor Johnson, former alderman from the Fifth ward, was elected financial secretary, defeating Timothy O'Flaherty, of the Typographical union, in a close contest. Like the new vice president, Mr. Johnson has become identified with the union labor movement in an active way within the past year or so, but he is recognized as a man of exceptional ability and enthusiasm.

• • •

Joseph Pratts, of the Cigarmakers' union, was elected reading clerk. He is popular and well qualified for the position. Thomas E. Marks, a well known member of the Electrical Workers' union, was elected sergeant-at-arms.

The trustees for the next six months are: Ole Larson, of the Steamfitters' union; C. W. F. Hegg, of the Retail Clerks' union, and H. W. Lanners, of the Musicians' union.

The delegates to the Building Trades' council are: Edward Meagher, of the electrical workers; Leo Ewald, of the machinists, and James H. Powers, of the Painters' union.

• • •

The Painters and Decorators' union will have an installation of officers on next Tuesday evening. The Superior local will be present and take part.

• • •

The Leather Workers' union has elected the following officers: S. B. Lowery, president; H. B. Folscraft, vice president; J. P. Birtch, recording secretary; E. A. Holcomb, secretary and treasurer; Arthur Freeman, marshal; William Daarmann, chaplain; F. V. Manske, guard; Martin Koch, local organizer, and Joe Stone, journal correspondent.

The executive board of this union consists of Messrs. Krenz, Howe and Miller.

• • •

President Dworschak of the Trades' assembly, has been instructed to name a committee of five to work up the Labor day celebration. He will probably announce the committee within the next week.

• • •

The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Prindle, of 608 East Eighth street, died during the week. Mr. Prindle is business agent for the Building Laborers' union and has the sympathy of hundreds of friends in his bereavement.

• • •

The local Team Drivers' union held a big meeting Wednesday evening at which a large number of new members were initiated. This union will meet at 31 West Superior street on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month, in the future. All team drivers in the city are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

An effort is being made to have the union shops and stores in the city cooperate in a friendly effort to induce all drivers to join the local organization.

• • •

William Lounsberry, a prominent member of the Typographical union, is supplying his friends with fish from Isle Royale. Mr. Lounsberry spends some time there each summer. This year he is camping at Tobins' harbor.

• • •

The Federated Trades assembly has adopted a resolution thanking the council, board of public works and City Engineer W. B. Patton, for their efforts in hastening the construction of the Tenth avenue west foot bridge. The structure is now complete and working men can get to and from the harbor front without endangering their lives.

• • •

There is a strong probability that the old laundry workers' union will be reorganized. It was formerly one of the best in the city. If the reorganization takes effect the Acme employes may join the union and that institution would be back on the fair list after four years of fighting.

• • •

The West Duluth committee having in charge the Fourth of July celebration for that part of the city, has invited the Trades assembly and union labor in general to participate in the big parade on that day. The assembly was unable to accept the invitation owing to the short time in which to make arrangements.

• • •

R. Schipper has been elected and qualified as a delegate to the assembly from the Brewery Workers' union.

• • •

The Carpenters' union is taking time by the forelock and making extensive preparation for a big showing on Labor day.

• • •

Ole Sund, of the Plumbers' union, was obligated as an assembly delegate last evening.

• • •

Speaking of newly elected delegates, Patrick Sheehan is now representing the Freight Handlers' union in an able manner.

• • •

E. J. Meagher, Thomas Marks, and H. Herriam are the new delegates from the Electrical Workers' union.

The Brewery Workers' international has requested the organization of the Duluth bottlers. The request is strongly favored here.

• • •

The bricklayers have a three-year lease on fine new quarters in the Axa building at 219 West Superior street. The electrical workers will meet in this building from now on.

• • •

Send good live labor news to The Herald: It will always receive careful consideration, but all items regarding unions must be signed by some responsible officer in order to avoid mistakes.

LABOR NOTES.

Decatur, Ill., leather workers have organized.

Montreal is the best organized city in Canada.

Chicago new street railway union has 6000 members.

Roanoke (Va.) printers have secured a 9-hour day.

Sioux City, Iowa, has selected a union printer for mayor.

There is a lull in the reports as to the labor troubles in Spain.

A strike has occurred in the government arsenal at Taranto, Italy.

There are 244 establishments, employing 9889 glovemakers, in the United States.

Kansas has passed a state law for the enforcement of an 8-hour work day.

The members of the International Printing Pressmen union will wear only union-made clothing.

Pittsburg machinists' demand for a 10 per cent increase in wages was refused. Some concessions may be made.

The board of supervisors of San Francisco has passed an ordinance in favor of the drug clerks' hours of employment being limited to 138 hours of actual service in two weeks.

The Bottlers' Protective union has been granted a charter by the American Federation of Labor. It covers the bottlers of all carbonated and soft drinks and malt, spirituous and vinous liquors.

Denver building trades' strike was declared off and an agreement reached whereby a permanent council of arbitration is to be named which shall have full power to settle all disputes and adjust all differences between contractors and men.

A feature of the new scale signed by the Republic Iron and Steel company, of Pittsburg, which has not as yet gained prominence is that the company agreed to establish an 8-hour day in its mills wherever practicable. The officials of the Amalgamated association recognize this as a victory.

President D. McDonald, of the American Labor Union, says: "We are going to have the greatest year in our history. The union intends to put at least six new organizers in the field at once. Eight applications for charters have been received from the East, among them five from Massachusetts.

Woodworkers in Portland Ore., who have been on strike several weeks for a nine-hour day, have banded together and are erecting two factories which will be conducted on the co-operative plan. Manufacturers who have conceded the nine-hour day and are employing union men are encouraging the project.

The recent convention of the International Brotherhood of Bookbinders decided to submit at referendum vote of the members a proposition for the payment of a death benefit. It also appointed a committee on a bookbinders' "home," patterned after the printers' home at Colorado Springs. Already $20,000 has been subscribed for the project. It is likely the institution will be situated at Colorado Springs. E. W. Tatum was reelected international president.

The executive council of the American Federation of Labor is to hold a meeting in San Francisco beginning July 2, according to present arrangements. While the American labor union is preparing to invade the East to gain recruits, the American Federation of Labor is making inroads into the West, the stronghold of the rival body, and is meeting with success. The brickmakers of Boise City, Idaho, have left the Western Federation and received a charter from the International Brick, Tile and Terra Cotta Workers' alliance.

The prosecution of P. J. McGuire, the veteran secretary-treasurer of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, has been dropped, although he has not been tried or vindicated. Reduced to a verge of starvation he has given up the fight against the executive board, which was charged with persecuting him, and virtually admitted that there was a shortage in his accounts. He was charged with embezzling a little over $10,000 of the funds of the organization and the case has attracted widespread attention because of the prominence of McGuire in the labor world.

The metal polishers, buffers, platers and brass workers of Cleveland, who are on strike for a nine-hour work day, have a novel plan in view. It is to supply the strikers with tents and equipment for a camp at some place near the city. A large number of men have already declared themselves in steady to go into camp at any time. President E. J. Lynch, of the national organization, is behind the movement. The camp is to be conducted on the co-operative plan and the balance of the strike pay not used in the expenses of the camp will go to the men. At a meeting held last week the different locals affiliated with the brass workers' organization voted to give $2 per week to each man on strike, in addition to his strike pay.

New York local unions under the jurisdiction of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners have withdrawn their delegates from the United Board of Building Trades in Manhattan. This action was caused by a decision made by a special committee appointed by the United Board to adjust differences between the unions of the Brotherhood and the branch in this city of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners. This branch is a foreign labor organization, having its headquarters in Manchester, England, and the Brotherhood local unions insist that the members of the branch must be citizens, and also members of an American labor organization as necessary preliminaries to their being allowed to work continuously in this country. The decision arrived at by the committee was adverse to the contention of the Brotherhood carpenters.

San Francisco District Council of Carpenters report that the label of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners has been registered with the secretary of state. In accordance with instructions from the general executive board of the organization the label will be issued to mills to be placed on their products. The Brotherhood carpenters will refuse to handle any mill work that does not bear the union stamp. The existing truce between the Building Trades' council and the Carpenters' union affiliated with the Brotherhood will end with the current month. The carpenters have refused to accept the terms offered by the contractors and the fight will undoubtedly be resumed on the first of July. The Building Trades' council expects to have the assistance of many of the contractors in its attempt to enforce the boycott against the Brotherhood carpenters.

A movement is on foot to combine the National Association of Dock Workers of Great Britain and Ireland and the International 'Longshoremen's association of this country. From present indications the plans of several of the most prominent labor leaders in the United States and England will be realized at the next annual convention of the International Longshoremen's association to be held at Chicago next month. The International 'Longshoremen's association today numbers over 350 local unions and has a combined membership of about 125,000. This includes practically all of the ports of the Great lakes, the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, Gulf of Mexico and several ports in Porto Rico. Some idea of the strength of this organization can be gained by taking the condition on the Great lakes as an example. Since the strike of the Great Lakes Towing company and its employes, there has not, it is claimed, been a lumber barge towed to a dock here by a trust tug.

Preliminary steps have been taken toward the formation of a new Chicago Building Trades' council, and this time it looks as if something would be accomplished, as it is the larger unions that are making the move. A meeting was held Thursday night between representatives of the bricklayers, carpenters, plumbers, structural iron workers and hod carriers, with a view to getting a working alliance of the building-construction trades. The combined membership of the five unions described is about 20,000 and the idea of the leaders is to have an alliance completed before the present working agreement with contractors expires next spring. The objects of the proposed new council are not so much to encourage sympathetic strikes as to settle questions of jurisdiction, and to present a united front to the contractors in the event of their refusal to renew agreements on their expiration. When the Building Trades' council disbanded, the contractors maintained their council, and are said to be still working in harmony. Should any one union demand concessions on the expiration of the present agreements, the leaders believe it would be difficult to obtain them against th ecombination of contractors, unless there was a similar combination among the unions.

BIG SMELTER

Is to Be Built By the United States Company.

Colorado Springs, Col., June 28.—The United States Smelting company, which is backed by the United States Reduction and Refining company, has announced that it will immediately build a $1,000,000 smelter at Colorado City to handle the bi-product of zinc-lead derived in smelting gold and silver copper ores. The new plant will have a daily capacity of 700 tons and will turn out 30,000 tons of zinc-lead pigment annually in addition to the production being made by this company's smelter at Canon City. The new smelter will employ a patent process whereby the white lead fumes are automatically collected during the process of smelting, thereby permitting of a great saving over the old method, wherein the lead and the zinc were manufactured separately and afterwards mechanically mixed. The United States Smelting company has a monopoly on the new patent.

A special meeting of the Portland Gold Mining company will be held in this city Aug. 18 for the purpose of removing the company from under the laws of Iowa to this state. The directors of the company state that the Iowa officials have singled the Portland company out of thirty other corporations to pay a special tax imposed on companies doing business in other states. The tax which the Portland is resisting amounts to $52,500. The company has, in addition, to pay an annual tax of $35,000 in Colorado.

At the annual election of officers for the Colorado Springs Mining Stock association held this week, D. V. Jamadason was elected president; J. A. Hayes, president of the First National bank, first vice president; E. P. Shove, second vice president, and J. R. McKinnie, president of the Exchange National bank, third vice president; W. P. Kinney, secretary and treasurer.

David T. Day, formerly of the United States geological survey, is spending several weeks in Colorado in search for mines yielding platinum ores. This material is much sought after because tungsten acid is derived from it, which is used extensively in the hardening of steel. The supply of platinum is far below the demand at the present time.

MORE JAILED.

Captain Fitchette and Detective Malone Arrested at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, June 28.—Police Capt. John A. Fitchette was thrown in jail yesterday. Fitchette, who has been captain under Mayor Ames, was indicted by the grand jury on the charge of receiving a gratuity, a misdemeanor. When arraigned in court he declared he was too poor to engage an attorney, and the court put him under oath and examined him. In spite of the fact that he had recently sold property for $35,000, in the public knowledge, it developed that Fitchette had drawn his salary five months in advance and declared his watch was his only asset. He was locked up in default of bail, but later furnished bonds in the sum of $1000 and was released.

Detective Fred Malone, indicted on a charge of being an accessory to a felony after the fact, with Detective Brackett, was also arraigned and locked up in default of $2500 bail. Brackett has not been located, and is believed to have ran away. The detectives are charged with being implicated in the robbery of a Milwaukee brewing company's Minneapolis office.

AN ISSUE.

Democrats Take a Decided Stand on Trust Question.

Washington, June 28.—A caucus of the Democratic members of the house of representatives held last night unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

"Resolved, first, that we condemn the Republican majority in congress for their failure to pass a measure providing reciprocity with Cuba.

"The bill which passed the house of representatives was heartily supported by the Democratic minority after the protection to the sugar trust had been removed by the solid Democratic vote, aided by a small minority of the Republican members. As it passed the house the bill carried relief to Cuba, reduced the price of sugar to American consumers and struck a heavy blow to the notorious and obnoxious sugar trust. The refusal of the Republican senators to consider this measure unless the protection to the sugar trust should be restored, gives evidence that the president and Republican party in congress are willing to refuse relief to Cuba and totally ignore American consumers rather than abandon their alliance with trusts.

"Second, that the Republican majority in congress is dominated and controlled by the trusts and monopolies which have the great industries of our country in their grasp, as shown by its action in passing an anti-trust bill through the house of representatives in the Fifty-seventh congress in the closing hours of the session, the senate refusing to consider the same as a subterfuge to ride over the election of 1900. That bill has been abandoned and they have ever since refused and do now refuse and fail to bring in any measure to suppress the trusts or to favorably report any of the numerous anti-trust measures introduced by Democratic members during the congress.

"Third, that we favor the immediate passage of a measure to amend the present trust law so as to more fully protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies and also a measure to reduce the duties on all articles and commodities manufactured and controlled or produced in the United States by a trust or trusts, so as to destroy such illegal combinations and to reduce the rate of duty on any article or commodity manufactured in the United States and sold in a foreign country more cheaply than in the United States.

'Fourth, we oppose the adjournment of congress until the measures mentioned above have been enacted into law."

The caucus lasted only an hour and was devoted to a discussion of the terms of the foregoing resolution, which was drawn by Representative Jackson, of Kansas, and presented by Representative Griggs, of Georgia, chairman of the Democratic congressional committee.

THE COAT'S THE THING

Pretty Gowns to Be Hidden Under Long But Beautiful Cloaks.

Proper Way of Lifting the Long Silk Coat Explained—The Sailor Collar the Favorite This Summer.

New York, June 25.—The summer coat will be long and the woman who goes coated will be covered from tip to toe, or nearly so.

And this is the irony of fate which governs dress. No sooner does a woman purchase for herself summer gowns galore and trim them with the best her purse affords than along comes a decree that she shall cover all her glory with a coat of many inches.

Pongee and silk are the two materials which catch the eye quickest. Pongee in the natural color, a yellowish tan, is made into a long straight coat, loose in the front and loose in the back, and is worn with pretty trimmings. The neck has the sailor collar and over it there is a collar of lace, and right in the middle of the front, upon the bust, there is a bow of red ribbon.

The new red is very much like a cardinal. It is deep and bright, and is called by various names, according to its tint and the strength of its color. There is coral, which is very brilliant, and tomato, which is more so, while blood red is a wonderful deep shade.

All these hues are used upon the long coat of pongee.

The silk coat is still more attractive for it can be treated in so many ways. The coat worn recently by Mrs. Roosevelt was in black silk, with straight front and fitted back. It was very long, and the skirt fell away and set out in true flare style. It was unlined and actually trailed upon the street, being longer than the dress skirt.

The extravagance of wearing a long coat, longer than the skirt of the gown, can be imagined. Taffetta, which is the coat material, wears out very quickly, and a frayed edge is the result. The deep hem which borders the long coat becomes worn and the coat is gone.

The way of lifting this coat is from the middle of the back. The skirt is raised at the same time.

A modiste gave this general direction for raising the long coat:

"Take a big handful in the very center of the back of the skirt and lift it and the skirt all together. It wrinkles the coat inevitably, but there is no other way."

The collar of the summer is the sailor collar. It is worn with the low neck and with the high, and it is deep and square and very sailor-like. It is trimmed variously, one way being by the use of lace figures, which are fastened on at the four corners, and in the middle of the back. The cuffs must match the collar in the general style and in the trimming.

The tucked silk coats are, perhaps, the neatest. They are of taffeta, unlined and tucked diagonally from neck to hem. The tucks point downward toward the middle seam in the center of the back.

The coat sleeve is large and full, but is gatheerd into a cuff at the wrist. In the multitude of sleeve styles offered this one stands first as the most important of all because of its general prettiness and the fact that it is becoming to most figures.

At the same time one does see many varieties of sleeve, and the coat sleeve is flowing, is in bell shape, is a mandolin or is slashed according to individual fancy.

It will be a sad day for all concerned when sleeves change and go back to the plain coat sleeve style. At present a gown is made pretty by its sleeves, and you judge the garment by the sleeve it bears.

A taffeta coat, in navy blue, had a slash at the back of the sleeve through which came chiffon, lace and silk. The silk was baggy and hung low, and over this there was chiffon, while a little lace outlined the portion which came next to the cuff.

But if you would have a useful coat, take the coat which is for automobiling. It is in thin rubber, and it comes in many colors, the prettiest of which is a pearl gray.

This coat is used coaching, and it is for outing wear of all kinds, not the least of its uses being as a shopping coat.

The rubber coat is not difficult to make. It requires rubber by the yard, and one can buy the light gray or a pretty plaid rubber cloth, just as one prefers. A good pattern is required, and that is all.

The nicest of these long rubber coats are cut in sweep length, and are finished at the neck and around the wrists with black velvet. A nice black velvet collar lined with rubber is a very ornamental thing, and, in case of shower, it can be lifted so as to make a standing collar.

Black velvet cuffs can be turned back and if rubber lined, there will be no damage from the sudden rainfall.

The rubber coat is meant not entirely for rain, but also for sun and for a general protection. It is light and so neat and pretty that you would never suspect it to be of so durable a thing as rubber unless you put your hands upon it to feel of its texture. Buttons, collar, everything must be dressy.

The racing coat bears a sporty name, but it is not necessarily a sporty coat. It may be in Quaker gray, or in pilgrim green, which is a medium shade of green. It can be in navy blue, or in modest violet cloth, or in brown. But if it be a three-quarter length, it will be called a racing coat.

One of the models shows a ladylike plainness. There is no trimming of any kind. But the coat hangs straight from the neck downward. It is single breasted and it buttons in man fashion under a flap. The neck has lapels which turn back, not too low, and when buttoned the coat looks quite masculine, but thrown back it is sportive to the last degree.

The feature of the racing coat is its lightness, its comfort, its grace and its style. There are few women who cannot wear it to great advantage. A wide single tuck at each side of the front makes, in some cases, its only trimming.

There are very ladylike coats in light cloth to wear when one drives. Those who walk can wear them over an afternoon gown. They can be lifted along with the dress skirt, and they are becoming to nearly all figures.

The loose back is strapped in many of the new models. The back which hangs straight is confined with a wide strap which reaches from under-arm seam to under-arm seam.

Pockets, like sleeves, are eccentric and they are set in the skirts of the long coats in many ways, one of the prettiest of which is the diagonal method. The opening is cut diagonally, and over it, in the flap part, there is a handsome bit of lace and a fancy button. On other coats the flap is cut long and pointed, making a sort of trimming of itself.

On almost all the long coats one notices the length. The coat drags, actually sweeps the street, and it must be held up as one would hold up a long skirt.

The day of the lined coat has gone by, though the importers say that it will return in cold weather again. At present the aim is to make the coat as light and as thin as possible and as cool; and this is done by using thin materials, unlined.

The long coat, the newest long coat, is decidedly upon the order described as modish. It is elaborately trimmed or if not so freely trimmed, it is cut elaborately and it sets into the figure and dresses it up so well. Tall women look graceful in the long coat; little women look chic and even cunning.

Besides pongee and silk, one sees poplin, brilliantine and the heavier grades of canvas, all used in making the coat which now holds sway.

In the three-quarter lengths there are very pretty things, one of them being the straight English coat, either boxed or unboxed.

A model in deep green silk was joined down the back in a middle seam. It hung as straight as could be.

The sleeves were wide and were lined with lace. They are so big as to suggest the dolman shape, and, indeed, the whole garment bore a striking resemblance to the dolman.

Around the neck there was a deep flounce of silk with many cordings at the top.

The season of yachting and of all outdoor sports and pleasures is upon us. Summer in all the charm of her first youth is here. In proper accompaniment for the fresh, young verdure, and the delicious scent of June roses, are gowns that vie with nature herself in the charm of her color; costumes that suit old Neptune in his tempting mood of calm and beauty, yet will withstand the spray he loves to dash over freshly whitened decks; hats that harmonize to a nicety with each and with all.

White is given the first place, let the purpose of the costume be what it may. For yachting, boating and all seashore sports it is far more serviceable and practical than at first thought appears, and is always charming. This season linen is in unprecedented demand. The handsomest and smartest yachting costumes are made of the material in white, and are trimmed with heavy lace, Irish or cluny. Exceedingly chic models are in three pieces, and show shirt, blouse and coat en suite. For these the half and three-quarter loose, or Monte Carlo, coats are exceedingly fashionable, although some jaunty Etons are seen.

Favorite short skirts are plaited and stitched flat at the upper portions, giving a flounce effect, or plain and gored to produce much flare. Many smart women, who are genuine lovers of the sport, will have none of greater length, but there are always those who wear the graceful long skirts, and for them are shown a multitude of designs. The plain gored one is always good, and is much seen with lace let in at each seam, but plaited designs are newer and the box plait takes prominent rank.

A really exquisite gown of the all-white sort is made of butcher's linen, the skirt box plaited and enriched by insets of Irish lace, where the plain fall free, the blouse, also plaited, with yoke and cuffs of the lace and the coat in Monte Carlo style, with collar edged with appliqué and cuffs entirely of lace. Scarcely anything more elegant could be imagined than the costume worn with its accompanying hat that shields the eyes, and which is of burnt straw and simply trimmed with white. As a matter of course, the linen soils readily, but as it cleanses with perfect success, that is not the drawback it first appears to be.

Colors are worn, as a matter of course, and suit some wearers even better than the white, but that fact by no means interferes with the statement that white is specially smart any more than the fact that serge, etamine and other wools are in vogue detracts from the value of linen. White on colors is not seen so much nor so often as self-colored lace in gowns of this sort, but some exceedingly elegant costumes are to be seen in blue and pastel colored linens with heavy linen or Irish laces dyed to match.

When three-piece costumes are not used, coats and skirts are made to match, with fascinating blouses of thinner materials, either cotton or linen. For these, handkerchief lawn is a favorite, with trimming of lace or needlework, and much fancy stitching. As its threads pull out with ease, it lends itself to hemstitching and drawn-work effects with singular success, and permits of such elaboration with less labor than is often the case.

An exceedingly pretty model is, however, free of any such work, and is simply tucked by hand. The waist closes at the back, where the tucks extend for the entire length and are arranged in groups, but at the front is tucked to form the deep points that give a yoke effect. The sleeves are in elbow length, tucked and edged with frills, and the neck is finished with an unlined stock of the lawn and lace, held in place by tiny uprights of covered bone stitched fast at intervals. These uprights are almost invisible, yet serve to keep the collar in place and are not in the least uncomfortable to the wearer. One at the front, one at the back and one midway at each side is the rule and all that are required.

Yachting suits of a similar sort are of linen Sicilian, of canvas, or of serge, and are made with short coats and skirts of walking length. Some fascinating ones sent over from London are of heavy linen canvas in cream, and are made with blouse coats and side-plaited skirts, the latter plain and the former finished with revers and collars of Bulgarian embroidery.

The embroidery being rich, even splendid in color, makes a most picturesque effect, and as the foundation material is an Oriental linen, harmonizes to perfection with the coats. One of the latest skirts is laid in shallow vertical plaits that turn back from the center front, where a box-plaited effect is given, and stitched to flounce depth. Many of these are quite plain, but others again show lace let in near the lower edge and are exceedingly handsome. Favorite hats are of Panama straw with scarf trimming.

The stock that ties under the chin is in the ascendency. There are neck scarfs made of white lawn and others made of white net. These are very long and are tucked in the middle. The tucked portions form the neck piece. Such a scarf crosses in the back of the neck and comes forward to be tied under the chin in that sort of a bow which is characterized as "splashing."

The style of bow of the season shows two short brisk looking loops that set out in an aggressive way and two very long ends hang as low as possible. These ends are much trimmed and the making of them affords another opportunity for the summer woman's endeavor.

Some coronation ideas have been introduced into the handles of the latest umbrellas, sunshades and walking sticks. The crown is not much in favor except in the few instances in which it can be made of real gold and gems, a style too costly to insure many purchasers, but the scepter comes in well, as do the sword, the champion's glove, and even the coronation chair.

A perfectly modeled figure of a crowned and robed king and queen has been cut out of jade and other stones, and the coronation jewels and the various vessels used by the archbishop find some imitators, but good taste revolts against introducing these as ornaments even in a modified form.

Each of these handles will certainly be reproduced in miniature form as charms reminiscent of the great ceremony. Paris and London jewelers are exerting their utmost ingenuity and skill to get ready a souvenir not only for subjects of his majesty, but also for the thousands of visitors who are due in England.

A Paris letter says: "Entire black hats are no longer worn by our best dressers, but every costume worthy to be called stylish shows a touch of black somewhere in its make-up, and this is usually mingled with white or else with pale blue. Many pretty cords and tassels in these tasteful combinations are used to decorate gowns of all popular shades. A pretty gown of biscuit-colored cloth had its skirt and bodice portions trimmed with cords and tassels of mingled black and white silk. Quite a stylish gown in white cloth displayed a combination of red and blue in the white galon which decorated both skirt and coat of material, the coat being further enhanced with dangling decorations in which red, blue and white weer about equally displayed. A charming costume in red and white foulard had the deep-shaped flounces at the foot and the deep flounce on the elbow sleeve, as well as the blouse bodice beneath teh short bolero made of red taffeta. The fichu collar of ecrue Irish lace crossed in the front beneath a long gold buckle, while cords and tassels of mingled back and white and gold joined the bolero with large white pearl buttons. The hat crowning this pretty costume was made entirely of red and white cherries, with foliage, finishing at the back with a bow of black velvet, the ends falling to almost the shoulder."

THREAD LACE EVENING GOWN.

This elegant confection is made over a white silk foundation, bands of beaded velvet giving the princess effect. A deep velvet flounce finishes the skirt. The bodice is trimmed with folds of light blue chiffon, daintily embroidered.

CHIC VIROT HAT AND BOA.

Hats and boas form a predominating feature of some of the new outfits. The hat is made entirely of Palma violets, the chiffon boa being of the same color to match. The effect is unique and dainty.

SHANTUNG PONGEE WRAP.

This small model is one of the latest Rue de la Paix successes. It is made of Shantung Pongee, trimmed with black velvet ribbon and appliqué design on collar and revers. The fullness of the skirt is regulated by cleverly arranged tucks.

EARLY CALENDARS.

Among the Greeks and Romans almanacs or calendars were not written for the general public, but were preserved as part of the esoteric learning of the priests, whom the people had to consult, not only for the dates of the festivals, but for the proper times when various legal proceedings might be instituted. About 300 B. C., however, one Enclus Flavius, secretary to Applus Claudius, stole these secrets by repeated applications to the priests and collated the information so gained, saye the Era. It was really publishing an almanac, when, as Livy relates, Flavius exhibited the Fasti on white thalets around the Forum. From this time similar tablets containing the calendar, the festivals, astronomical phenomena and sometimes allusions to historical events became quite common. They have been dug up in Pompeii and elsewhere.

There are also extant Christian calendars dating as far back as the fourth century, which give the names of the saints, and other religious information.

One of the most famous of the calendars of the middle ages is that compiled by Petrus of Dacia in A. D. 1300. A Ms copy is preserved in the Savilion library at Oxford. The Symbolical Man or Man of Signs (Homo Signorum), still a common features in almanacs, appears in this book, not it is conjectured for the first time, as it seems to have been a survival from the time of Ptolmey's "Almagest," a collection of classic observations and problems relating to geometry and astronomy.

The first printed almanac was the "Pro Purbus Annis," issued at Vienna in 1457, by an astronomer named Purbach. The earliest known almanac devoted expressly to the year of issue was published by Rebelais in 1533.

Thenceforth, the ephemeral yearly character of the publication came to be definitely recognized by almanac makers.

Nostradamus set the fashion of incorporating predictions of coming events into almanacs, a fashion that has continued to this day in all purely astrological brochures of this sort, despite intermittent efforts to suppress it by royal authority in France and elsewhere.

GLORY OF A GOOD NAME

A Prominent Chicago Woman Writing to Mrs. Pinkham Says:

"'Honor to Whom Honor is Due,' and You Deserve Both the Thanks and Honor of the Mothers of America Whom You Have So Blessedly Benefited."

After years of struggle to attain public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others will recognize in us the truth, good faith and honesty of purpose that we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to have succeeded and to feel the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of the vast army of our fellow beings.

This is the standing of Mrs. Pinkham among the women of America today, and Mrs. Brown's letter which we have the great privilege to herewith publish, with her portrait, is only another visible evidence of this truth, and that of all the medicines for womens' ills in the world Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands today pre-eminently at the head.

MRS. MAY BROWN,

Chairman Program Committee, Westside Literary Union, Chicago, Ill.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—'Honor to whom honor is due,' and you deserve both the thanks and honor of the mothers of America whom you have so blessedly helped and benefited. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I would feel run-down or have any of the aches and pains which but few women escape, and I have found that it relieved me at once and gave me new strength. Several ladies, members of our Literary Union, speak in highest praise of your Vegetable Compound, as they have been cured from serious female troubles. One lady, who thought she must submit to an operation was cured without using anything in the world but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. You have hosts of friends in Chicago, and if you came to visit our city we would delight to do you honor. Gratefully yours,—MRS. MAY BROWN, 57 Grant Place, Chicago, Ill."

"How Mrs. Pinkham Helped Mrs. McKinny."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and let you know the good you and your Vegetable Compound are doing. I had been sick ever since my first baby was born, and at the birth of my second, my doctor, as well as myself thought I should never live through it. After that menstruation never came regular and when it came I suffered terribly. I also had womb and ovarian trouble. A friend of my husband's advised him to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me. At first I had no faith in it, but now nothing could induce me to be without it. Menstruation has become regular and I feel like a new woman. Your medicine is a God-send to suffering women. I hope this letter will lead others to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Yours truly, MRS. MILDRED MCKINNY, 28 Pearl St., San Francisco, Cal. (March 16, 1901).

If there is anything in your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. Address is Lynn, Mass. Her advice is free.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

American Prosperity.

Mr. G. Parish, now traveling in this country in the interest of the Statist, the great London financial paper, finds general conditions here particularly sound. He points to the position of our railway industry as a very strong evidence of this. He admits that our railroads beat the world, and in the Northwest, especially, the Milwaukee is pointed to as a veritable model—one of the greatest systems in existence. Nothing in the way of a regular passenger train anywhere in the world equals its celebrated "Pioneer Limited" running daily between the Twin Cities and Milwaukee and Chicago. Increased confidence in our industries abroad will doubtless result from Mr. Parish's visit to this country.

Woman's Nature

Is to love children, and no home can be completely happy without them, yet the ordeal through which the expectant mother must pass usually is so full of suffering, danger and fear that she looks forward to the critical hour with apprehension and dread. Mother's Friend, by its penetrating and soothing properties, allays nausea, nervousness, and all unpleasant feelings, and so prepares the system for the ordeal that she passes through the event safely and with but little suffering, as numbers have testified and said, "it is worth its weight in gold." $1.00 per bottle of druggists. PLAYS AND PLAYERS

Kathryn Kidder In "The Country Girl" At the Lyceum Next Monday.

"Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" Coming to Duluth Next Season—James and Warde to Star Jointly.

"The Country Girl," in many respects the most amusing of all the old English comedies, will be seen in this city at the Lyceum on Monday next, when Kathryn Kidder will make her first appearance here in the role of Peggy. Every revival of this play since the middle of the eighteenth century when it was first produced by David Garrick, has been received with a large share of popular favor. During Augustin Daly's administration of affairs at Daly's theater, New York city, he made two revivals of the play and each time for a long run. There is perhaps no other actress in the country more suited to the requirements of the role of the mischievous, awkward, tantalizing, wayward Peggy than Kathryn Kidder. She amply demonstrated her qualities as a comedienne by her expert handling of the difficult role of "Madame Sans Gene." Many distinguished actresses have essayed the part of Peggy since it was originally produced. Miss Kidder's performance is reported to be the most notable achievement of her career. Her supporting company includes players of national reputation. Among the principals are Norman Hackett, Robert V. Ferguson, Marion Ashworth, Seymour Stratton and T. C. O'Brien.

CAPTAIN JENKS COMING.

"Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" will be one of the real notable attractions to be seen here during next season. It is a fatastic comedy from the pen of Clyde Fitch. Mr. Fitch is now at the zenith of his popularity as a dramatist and "Captain Jinks" represents his best effort. This comedy was not written to order to fit any star, but was held by Mr. Fitch until a proper cast could be selected. When this was done, it was produced at the Garrick theater and ran, uninterruptedly for 200 nights at this play house to the great delight of New York. The story is that of a certain Mme. Trentoni, a grand opera singer, who returns to America, her native country, after an absence of many years. The intrigue lies between her and Captain Jinks, of the Horse Marines, a well known character in New York, who falls violently in love with the singer. Obstructions are, of course, thrown in the way of love's smooth path, only to be overcome by strategy and ardor. The part of Mme. Trentoni will be played by Miss Elizabeth Kennedy, an exceedingly beautiful and clever Australian-American actress, who after several years of success in the Antipodes, is now appearing again before American audiences. An organization of forty players is engaged for the full interpretation of the characters, and the identical Garrick theater productions, correct in all historical details, will be seen here. The tour will extend to the Pacific coast and the large cities in the East re-visted in the spring.

SHAKESPEAREAN SPECTACLE.

The firm of Wagenhals & Kemper, who are to exploit Louis James and Frederick Warde as joint stars next season, have selected "The Tempest" as the vehicle for the famous actors. "The Tempest" is probably the most alluring of Shakespeare's comedies, and is generally regarded by the critics is the most flawless of his masterpieces. This is but consistent in 'hat it is believed to be the last work from his immortal pen. Like "The Mid-Summer Night's Dream" the play is all airy-fairy-make-believe, but its romance is more delicious, and its dramatic interest is more tense. The play has a fresh interest for theater-goers as it has not been done on the American stage for more than ten years. These enterprising managers promise an even still more brilliant scenic equipment for "The Tempest" than they recently provided for "The Mid-Summer Night's Dream," but should they do no more than equal their efforts on that occasion, Mr. James and Mr. Warde are assured of probably the most prosperous season in their career. The public have ever patronized comedy and romance more generously than they have the tragic stories of life and this will apply equally to Shakespeare as to other writers.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Speculation on the Anti-Syndicate Combination.

New York, June 28.—Broadway has had much to gossip about this week, as much as if the winter season were on again. Foremost the interest centered on the scheme of an active opposition to the syndicate, the credit of which was to a large degree appropriated by James K. Hackett. The public is familiar with the hopes of the daring trio, but whether Hackett, Harrison Grey Fiske and Maurice Campbell can make good is a most perplexing problem. It is one thing to bid bold defiance to a closely organized powerful trust, and another to fight it with any degree of success. In this instance the stumbling block is theaters. The syndicate does not control all the theaters of the country, but it certainly has the pick of them and there is little left for outsiders. Nat Goodwin found this out, and he was glad to have the syndicate book him in the end. So were a dozen others, and the most powerful of the independent managers have found it vastly to their interest to keep on at least pleasantly neutral terms with the enemy. If the Hacket combination had the pick of the theaters on the road their prospects would have a far rosier tinge than at present.

• • •

To impartial observers the project looks as though it would tend largely to the advancement of Mr. Fiske, who has a New York theater, which might be on his hands when Mrs. Fiske is on the road. Under the new management there is little likelihood of it ever being idle, and if Henrietta Crosman, Hackett and Isabelle Irving are successful, great will be the honor and profit for the Manhattan theater. That resort, Wallack's and under some conditions the Victoria, are the places available for the anti-syndicate forces.

Now that Julie Opp is no longer tied up to Robert Lorraine, everyone is wondering how soon her marriage to William Faversham will be announced from London, where both now are. Broadway has never had the slightest doubt of this event since Faversham was divorced from his wife, who considerately refused to let the public know the name of the woman she blamed. In this particular instance Cupid has played enough pranks to furnish Charles Frohman with a couple, at least, of farcical matters than he orders adapted from the French. In or near the beginning Cissie Loftus was paired off, by rumor, with Sam Bernard, and her ex-hubby, Justin Huntley McCarthy, with Julie Opp. Then Faversham entered the field, and, despite Mr. Frohman's denial, McCarthy retired in a huff. He "turned down" Miss Opp, who was to have the leading role in the London production of his "If I Were a King," and he stopped work on a new play for Faversham. Now Bernard is married, but not to Miss Loftus, and McCarthy is devoted to Miss Suzanne Sheldon. As Faversham and Miss Opp are left all, all alone, Broadway is sure they will soon be one.

• • •

By the way, Faversham's new play is exciting much comment, especially among the managers. There is no doubt of the popularity of "The Light of Way" as a novel, but Gilbert Parker's works have been singularly unfortunate upon the stage. The character of "Beauty" Steele is a remarkable one, and his versatility it is sure to demand will tax the powers of any actor, and for this reason the other managers are wondering what Faversham will make of it. Nothing he has yet done indicates that he can be the reckless, dare-devil lawyer in the first act and the recluse of a French Canadian village in the others. Mansfield would play the part to perfection, but Faversham is a problem still to be solved.

George C. Tyler left Florence last week for Rome. He has been spending a couple of weeks here as the guest of Eleanor Duse, with whom he has arranged pactically all the details of her coming tour in America. In a letter he announces that she is much pleased with the prospects, and is taking a most lively interest in all the details of her trip. In Rome Tyler will meet Miss Viola Allen, who, after a few days on the Isle of Man, left there with Hall Caine and his wife for the Eternal City. Star, author and manager will absorb all the local color possible, and will then get to work on the production.

Edward E. Rice broke into print this week as an author. He wrote as an expert, and the title of his article was, "Nerve as a Factor in Success." This needs absolutely no comment, but some of his epigrams are worthy of a place in history. For instance: "Nerve is the most salient quality in our make-up—the one that distinguishes leaders from followers. It is the expression of superiority of one man above his fellows. The man of nerve must exhibit no regrets for mistakes—must have no time for remorse. He must accompany all his objective plans with a subjective study of self. The man of nerve is he who, relying upon self, forces his personality upon the crowd and wins by strength of character.'

A case in point bears out Mr. Rice's theory exactly. A certain manager recently ordered some sketches from a designer of costumes.

"You owe me $200 already," was the artist's comment. The manager replied nicely: "Oh, that's all right. You know I'd have paid you if I had the money. Be a good fellow and forget it. This is cash, spot cash when I get the sketches." There was $50 in the work, which would only take a couple of hours, besides times were dull, so the artist yielded. At the appointed time the sketches were delivered by messenger, who had instructions to be sure and get the money. "Just wait until I go into the box office and get $50 for you," said the manager, who had the sketches in his hand. The messenger waited an hour and then learned from the box office man that the manager had gone to keep an engagement up town. The artist went on the warpath, and unbosomed himself in no uncertain way to the manager when they met. "Nonsense, dear boy," said the latter, "I forgot all about it. But never mind, I'll take $100 worth of your stuff on the same terms."

There is a boarding house keeper at Sheepshead Bay who is a sadder but a wiser man. Just before the season opens at Manhattan Beach every one in Sheepshead, which is just over the bridge, has large hopes of profit, and competition is correspondingly keen. That is why this particular boniface now owns a check for $256 signed apparently by Kirke la Shelle, but of no value to any one save himself. He got it from a smart youth who engaged board for all the chorus girls who are to appear at the Beach with Frank Daniels. The check was turned over in payment for the first week and then the advance man explained that the prevailing custom was to give him 10 per cent. He got it, and so did the boarding house man, but in different places.

The visit of the West Point cadets to "Dolly Varden" was not an undiluted success. To begin with, some of the cadets, to exhibit a proper independence, insisted upon smoking cigarettes during the performance. Ushers remonstrated, but in vain, and even Lulu Blaser's frowns were without effect. Then, at the last moment, Miss Glaser discovered that her borrowed uniform wouldn't do at all. An anxious world had, it is true, been informed that the said uniform was a perfect fit, with never a wrinkle anywhere. Now, for some reason carefully concealed, the statement is sent forth that it actually bulged in spots, and, of course, that would never do. The West Pointers had to forego that looked-for treat.

Dan McAvoy and his bride are back on Broadway after a honeymoon trip that embraced West Baden. McAvoy has at last made up his mind to quit the Sires, and announced that no more will he grace the boards of the New York theater. Instead, he is to have the leading role in the new musical comedy with which George Lederer will open the Broadway theater.

• • •

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske has left town for the Adirondacks, where she will enjoy an extended rest. She played twenty-four weeks in this city last season and fifteen weeks outside of it. During this time she made two important productions, "Miranda of the Balcony" and "The Unwelcome Mrs. Hatch," and revived "Divoroons," "A Doll's House" and "Tess, of the D'Urbervilles." Upon her return to town she will direct the rehearsals of "Capt. Molly," and will put the finishing touches upon the preparations for "Mary of Magdala," which is to be her most ambitious effort to date.

Art Chamberlyn, it really seems, is going to break into Broadway again. Since "The Prima Donna" and "The Musketeers" he has devoted all his energies to Boston, where it is generally understood he has had a new angel under a course of hypnotic treatment. As the angel is Thomas W. Lawson, and the new show "The Defender," there ought to be something doing, when it is seen early as July as the successor of "Dolly Varden" at the Herald Square. There is one thing, however, that has not filled the Rialto with joy. Somebody, who, of course, deserves to be lynched, started the rumor that Chamberlyn was going to pay up. The wild rush was suddenly checked by his cold statement that bygones are by-gones, with an emphatic accent on the last syllable. He explained that he cannot be held for a former angel's sudden collapse, but—. Well, Chamberlyn is making all sorts of offers for stars now "resting," and doubtless will land at least a couple before the show opens. All of which goes to show that Broadway is of a most forgiving nature.

• • •

As "The Defender" is practically the only novelty promised for the summer, there is naturally much interest in its merits and otherwise. Folks who have been rash enough to journey over to Boston say it is good and bad, with the former a little in the lead. As soon as a New York opening was in sight, J. Cheever Goodwin was summoned to the Hub and set to work patching it up. Miss Irene Perry, who has made a success of her role, will continue in it, but several important changes are promised for the rest of the cast.

• • •

Leo Dietrichstein, who met Charles Frohman in Paris, signed a contract with him there to appear in a principal part in Capt. Marshall's new comedy at the Garrick in September.

• • •

The following important bulletin issued by A. Toxin Worm must naturally take precedence over everything else that follows: "Through Mr. Alf Hayman, Miss Elizabeth Kennedy has purchased Kebo and Rentz for her production of 'Capt. Jinks,' in which she will tour next season. Kebo is the poodle and Rentz the St. Bernard which Miss Ethel Barrymore made Capt. Jinks and his friends promenade with on the Cunard dock on her arrival as Mme. Trentoni in the Clyde Fitch play. The two dogs have been installed in Miss Kennedy's cottage at Bensonhurst for the summer, to protect the actress from burglars in the place of her stuffed kangaroo, which was stolen from her porch a few days ago." The burglar story is promised for next week.

• • •

Miss Virginia Earle is to have a play all to herself next season. The manager will be George W. Lederer, and he is preparing for her use a musical comedy by Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englander.

• • •

Rose Coghlan has signed contracts to appear again next season under the management of Jules Murry. Her tour will be much more extended, and may include a visit to Mexico, as was originally planned for her by M. S. Leavitt.

• • •

It is curious, but nevertheless true, that with four shows running in which topical verses are sung, not one is devoted to Mayor Low or reform. Tammany is a prime favorite at each theater, and the applause evoked at every performance would indicate that the heart of the people is still true to the wigwam.

• • •

Joseph Miron is to be the next "Princess Chic," not that he will undertake to don Marquerite Sylva's costume, but he is to star in that opera. His old part is being built up for him so that it overshadows that of the princess, and he will be supported by a prima donna who does not long too much for the center of the stage. He has notified Manager Pereley that he will, as soon as possible, retire from "The Chaperons" and begin rehearsals anew.

• • •

Velma Lawton, formerly a member of the chorus in "The New Yorkers," is threatening all manner of things to Dan Daly. She does not care for the harsh things which she declares, Daly addressed unpartially to her and her comrades, and she had several spats with him in consequence. This line of conduct is not calculated to make the lot of any chorus girl a happy one, and Miss Lawton admits sadly that she "got it good." She quit the company and is now collecting evidence. When she has enough, she says, she will sue Daly for slander.

• • •

Miss Isabelle Irving's determination to trust her immediate future to the hands of James K. Hackett quickly followed her resentful parting from Richard Mansfield. Years ago when Hackett starred in "The Prisoner of Zenda" she was his leading woman, and the friendship had much to do with her present determination. Hackett's decision to make her a star in "The Crisis" is somewhat peculiar. Not many months back he nearly quarreled with his wife, Mary Mannering, because she had the rights to "The Crisis" and he wanted them for himself. Miss Mannering's devotion prompted her to yield what both she and her manager, Frank McKee, regarded as an excellent chance for her talents. Hackett tried the play and did not make the hit he had expected. This he laid to the fact that it is better suited to a female than a male star. But Miss Mannering refused to take it back at any price and her husband was obliged to find an actress.

• • •

Ted Marks and his buttonhole are back in town; also some visions concerning the wonderful success of the American theater roof garden. According to Ted everything first class in Europe will be sent there this summer, and the police will have to stand by to keep the eager throng in order before the box office. Moreover the roof garden itself will make Oscar Hammerstein have a fit. Teddy says all this is true, so it is bound to come.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

Richard Golden is to star Foxy Quiller next season.

Joseph Arthur's successful melodrama "The Still Alarm," will soon be produced in Australia.

Laura Biggar, who was bequeathed over $1,000,000 by the late Henry M. Bennett, is in a private sanitarium at Bergen Point, N. J.

Marguerite Sylva will star next season in "Three Strollers," under the management of Nixon and Zimmerman and George W. Lederer.

George Ade is at work on the libretto of a new musical play entitled "Peggy of Paris," to be produced by Henry W. Savage next season.

Hilda Spong will have a leading role in next season's production of "Iris." When "Ulysses" is done here Miss Spong will play Minerva.

Next season Clay Clement will be starred by L. J. Rodriguez in a historical rellefous play, called "David the King," from the Dutch of Jan Van Etten. Mr. Clement will play Absalom and Daniel Bandmann King David.

Francis Carlyle has been engaged as leading man with Joseph Jefferson next season. Mr. Carlyle will appear in a new play dealing with newspaper men in New York city during the period Mr. Jefferson is resting, between the fall and spring seasons.

Frederick Warde, with a specially engaged company, will begin an indefinite engagement at Frisco, opening in the Boker version of Francesca da Rimini. Some of the principals in Mr. Warde's company will be Judith Berolde, Barry Johnstone and Charles D. Herman.

The Independent Booking agency is only a week old, but it proves to be a lusty youngster. It has established relations with more than 200 theaters in the United States, and it is booking routes for next season for a number of independent attractions.—Dramatic Mirror.

A Roman Catholic priest has become a theater manager. He is Father Barth, of Stephenson, Mich., and the theater is his parish house. Stephenson was without a place of amusement until Father Barth, having been so petitioned by the townspeople, fitted the parish house with scenery and began booking attractions.

The personal effects, costumes, riding habits, gowns, stage costumes, wigs, shoes, furniture, paintings, bric-a-brac and household goods of Georgia Cayvan were removed from her late residence and offere for public sale at an auction room yesterday. Miss Cayvan is still a patient at the Riverview sanitarium.

12 Minutes for Lunch.

That is the average time spent in a large city restaurant by three thousand lunchers. It takes three hours to digest a fresh egg soft boiled; three hours to digest a boiled apple dumpling; three hours to digest fresh roast beef. In fact, three hours is about the time required to digest the average twelve minute lunch. The object of the hasty lunch is to let the busy man get back to his office work. But when the brain is active, the stomach is inactive for lack of necessary blood. The natural consequence is indigestion, and indigestion opens the door to many diseases.

Indigestion is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food.

"It is with heartfelt gratitude that I send this testimonial which I wish you to publish with my name and address," writes Mr. Willis Seaman, of Washingtonville, Orange Co., N. Y. "I had stomach trouble from childhood and suffered with it more or less as I grew up. At the age of 26 I was broken down with dyspepsia. My suffering was terrible. Could not eat without distress. Could only eat a few certain things and was not able to work half the time. Every thing I tried only gave me temporary relief. My wife finally persuaded me to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets.' I took six bottles of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and two vials of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.' I then felt so well that I stopped taking medicine. Several months have passed and I can do the hardest kind of work, can eat anything that is set before me and enjoy it. I am 27 years old and this is the first time I have ever been well."

Free. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser in paper covers is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only; or 31 stamps for cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

AMUSEMENTS.

LYCEUM THEATER

C. A. MARSHALL, Lessee and Manager.

MONDAY, June 30.

THE SEASON'S MOST NOTABLE EVENT!

Katherine Kidder

In an elaborate revival of David Garrick's sparkling comedy,

"The Country Girl."

Management of George H. Brennan.

Cast of star Magnitude, including—Norman Hackett, T. C. Hamilton, Munroe Salisbury, Seymour Stratton, M. C. O'Brien, Charles Palmer, Robert V. Ferguson, Marion Ashworth, Olga Flinck, H. L. Davidson, Ellen Armand, Henry Austin. Prices—Dress Circle, $1.50; Parquet, $1.50 and $1.00; Family Circle, 75c; Balcony, 50c.

The event theatric of the month in 'Frisco was the premiere of the fanciful comedy, "The Red Light," by George H. Broadhurst. It was presented at the California by James Neill and his players. The opening drew an S. R. O. house and the week resulted in well-filled houses. Unquestionably the comedy is one of Mr. Broadhurst's most ambitious and meritorious efforts.

At the London Hippodrome on Monday week H. E. Moss will introduce a new play, entitled "The Bandits," in which 400 persons and a stud of plunging horses will take part. One of the effects will be the breaking of a dam in the mountain, carrying everything before it, including a bridge weighing six tons, horses and men. A tank holding 14,000 gallons of water, has been erected on the roof of the Hippodrome, and this huge volume of water will be set free by means of a valve and a tube leading down to the stage.

The vaudeville performers, chorus girls and supernumeraries of Chicago are contemplating forming labor unions, under the direction of Lee M. Hart, secretary of the Theatrical Stage Employes' National Alliance. Better stage accommodations and higher pay will be sought. The vaudeville performers will probably constitute one labor union, the chorus girls another and the "supers" a third. The performers will black list managers who take companies on the road without sufficient financial means to provide against disaster.

Next to Duse, her cousin, Italia Vitaliani, is the greatest actress on the Italian stage. She has also the advantage of being a very pretty woman. Like Duse, she lives a very retired life and shuns every kind of glamor off the stage. All her time is devoted to her art, and, when not acting or rehearsing, she shuts herself up to rest or think of the part se has to play at night. A weary life as ever life can be weary, brightened only by the plaudits of the public, says a Rome letter in the Dramatic Mirror.

E. S. Wilard, just returned to England from America, proposes to build a new theater at the West End. Wilard has in his play portmaneau a long ago written play on the subject of King Arthur. So what with this and Money Coutts' King Arthur tragedy for Lewis Waller, and what with certain other Arthurian new plays, we look like having a King Arthur boom as well as a Ladies' Battle boom. And, lo, I learn at the moment of writing that Sarah Bernhardt has just settled to produce a french version of the King Arthur play which Camyns wrote for Irving, with herself as Lancelot, whose honor, you will remember, rooted in dishonor, stood, while faith unfaithful kept him falsely true.

Amendment of Articles of Incorporation

—OF—

The Guarantee Land Co.

It is hereby certified, That at the regular meeting of the stockholders of the Guarantee Land Company, held at the office of said company in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902, at which were present in person, or represented by duly executed proxy, the holders of more than two-thirds of the capital stock of said company, it was duly and unanimously resolved as follows:

"That the capital stock of this company be reduced from two hundred thousand dollars, being two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, to forty thousand dollars, consisting of four hundred (400) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and that Article III and Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of the Guarantee Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

"Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be forty thousand dollars instead of two hundred thousand dollars, to which amount the capital stock is hereby reduced, the whole amount thereof having been heretofore paid in.

"Seventh—That the number and amount of shares of the capital stock of said corporation shall be 400 shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each."

It is further certified, That at a regular meeting of the directors of said corporation, held at the office of said company, in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902, and subsequent to the aforesaid action of the stockholders of said corporation, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, viz:

"That the capital stock of this company be reduced from two hundred thousand dollars, being two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, to forty thousand dollars, consisting of four hundred (400) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and that Article III and Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of the Guarantee Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

"Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be forty thousand dollars instead of two hundred thousand dollars, to which amount the capital stock is hereby reduced, the whole amount thereof having been heretofore paid in.

"Seventh—That the number and amount of shares of the capital stock of said corporation shall be 400 shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each."

In witness whereof, the Guarantee Land Company has caused these presents to be subscribed and sworn to by its president, and its secretary, and has caused its corporate seal to be hereto affixed this 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902.

VIRGINIA.

Virginia, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The baseball game between the fats and leans of this city at the local park, Tuesday afternoon, was much enjoyed by a large crowd and even by those who played the game. Only five innings were played, but they were sufficient to force out beads of perspiration on the faces of the fats, not caused by running bases, either, but from chasing the long drives made by the leans. Bickford and Mechan for the leans and Deering and Griggs for the fats formed the batteries and very poor work was done by both. At the first half of the fifth inning the score stood 10 to 9. Then the captain of the fats, Dr. Lemont, put Griggs in the box and the leans pounded out six more runs. A challenge will be issued by the fats shortly for a game for money and every indication points to the game being played the Fourth.

Mrs. James Bale, of Ely, spent Sunday here, the guest of Capt. and Mrs. Carmichael.

Miss Santrinelle Johnson visited at Virginia with friends Tuesday.

Mrs. Lutes went to Duluth Monday morning to attend Mansfield's production of "Monsieur Beaucaire," returning the following day.

Miss Johanna Brant left Monday for Anoka, where she will visit for several months.

Miss Carrie Truman returned to her home at Two Harbors Monday, after a few days' visit here with Mayme McGraw.

The Finnish Temperance society gave a picnic in a grove near Merritt Sunday. The uniform rank formed a parade through the streets, headed by the Biwabik band.

Superintendent Lutes, of the Biwabik mine, who for the past five years has been village recorder, resigned his position with the village on account of the lack of time in which to carry out its duties, and F. B. Myers, of the Bank of Biwabik, has been appointed by the council to fill out the unexpired term.

William Hendrickson, a young Finn, created considerable excitement at the Iron Range depot Monday evening by an interesting gun play, firing rather promiscuously and wounding a dog slightly. He was about to take a train for Sparta, but Marshal O'Hara took him in tow and placed him in the village jail. He was tried Tuesday by Justice Heeler, who sentenced him to pay a fine of $25 or serve thirty days in the county jail, and being unable to pay the fine, Hendrickson was taken to Duluth Wednesday to serve his term.

Miss Mau returned to her home near Minneapolis Monday, after teaching in the public schools here for the past nine months.

Miss Alsted has taken a position as bookkeeper at the Biwabik mine, Mrs. Schilling having resigned.

Mrs. William Carmichael visited with friends at Ely Monday.

Thomas Birkland, E. H. Schur and P. J. Murray were in Duluth Saturday as Biwabik delegates to the Democratic convention. Mr. Birkland was the temporary chairman of the convention, and was also chosen as a delegate to the Democratic state convention at Minneapolis.

Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Cummings were in Elba from Monday to Wednesday on a visit.

Born—to Mr. and Mrs. John Kostomoa, a daughter, on Tuesday, June 24.

Miss Ida Hoskins and Thomas Trevena, Jr., were married Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Trevena, Sr. The wedding was a quiet family affair, only the immediate friends of the contracting parties being present. Justice Flemming performed the ceremony. Afterwards the Biwabik band, of which Mr. Trevena was a member, serenaded the happy couple.

Mr. and Mrs. William Crockett left Biwabik for Duluth, where they will visit for a few days. Mr. Crockett has disposed of his interests here to Frank Fisher but has not yet decided where he will make his residence.

Born—to Mr. and Mrs. William Mackl, a son, on Saturday, June 21.

The Foresters held w their annual memorial services Sunday, the lodge members attending the Methodist church in a body where R. P. Cummings preached the sermon.

Mrs. Kendall, of Duluth, visited here with friends Saturday.

Miss Rowe, of the local schools, returned to her home in the southern part of the state Monday.

Sherlock's circus gave two performances in Biwabik Thursday, attracting large crowds to a rather mediocre performance.

Mrs. Frank Guss, formerly of this town, but now of Princeton, Minn., is spending the week here with relatives.

F. Ingebritson, of Fargo, N. D., was in Biwabik Thursday on business.

Ore shipments on the range roads, and more particularly on the Iron Range system, is going forward briskly, all the switch engines here being in constant service switching them about the yards. Owing to the large grade at Waldo having been reduced the mogul engines now haul trains from seventy to eighty cars, which constitute the largest trains hauled over any road in the United States, each train weighing about 4o0 tons, exclusive of the engine.

Simon Marcus, of Duluth, transacted business here Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mrs. Pearce and two children returned yesterday (Friday) to their home at Hibbing, after a week's visit here with relatives.

The young son of Louis Pagnuco is seriously ill with pneumonia.

Mr. Garlick spent Wednesday with friends at Two Harbors.

P. S. Colvin, Fred B. Myers and J. D. Schilling represented the Biwabik Republicans at the convention which was held at Duluth Wednesday.

Dr. C. W. Bray and mother left Thursday for Minneapolis, on a visit with friends.

George Rosenberg returned Wednesday from a short visit to Duluth.

C. J. Davis, of Duluth, transacted business here the first half of the week.

JUDGE AND SENATOR HIT.

Generally the guests at dinner in Washington write their names on a menu card as a souvenir for the host or hostess, says the New York World. At a recent dinner at Senator Foraker's, Mme. Takahira, the wife of the Japanese minister, wrote her name in Japanese characters. The menu card was next handed to Justice McKenna of the supreme court. The justice looked at Mme. Takahira's signature, and turning to Senator Foraker, said:

"Why, what's this? It looks like the senate debate on the Philipines—past understanding.

"No, indeed," replied Senator Foraker, "it would be better to say it resembles the decision of the supreme court on the insular cases."

AT A KANSAS WEDDING.

It was during this feature of the program that the only specially emotional feature of the evening occurred, says the Independence, Kan., Reporter. J. J. Andersono, father of the bride, found several of them rolling down on this sunburned cheeks as he came forward to kiss the bride, remarking that she was his "last baby."

Immediately several of the ladies began to shed tears, everybody was somewhat excited and, in the slight confusion, the writer hereof found himself embracing a lady who stood conveniently near and who proved not his wife. He immediately apologized to the lady and was forgiven. He apologized again later on to his wife, with no very definite returns up to this date.

SHE LOST HER MONEY

While In a Trance In a Boston Medium's Office.

Thousand Dollars Disappeared From Bag Around Her Neck.

Wanted to Find Out If a Man Loved Her.

Boston, June 27.—Mrs. Ethel Laveen, who lives in Malden, has had the misfortune during the past week of losing a sweetheart who had twice promised to marry her. She has also lost $1,000 in cash.

Mrs. Laveen, who is a bright and attractive widow of 38 years, has lived in Malden for several years. She became acquainted with George A. Runnells, a retired builder and a former member of the city government, about two years ago, after her husband died. She says Runnells kept her company and promised to marry her, and that and twice got ready to be married. and twice got ready tobe married. but that Runnells postponed the wedding each time. She sued him for $10,000 damages and attached his property.

Last week she went to Boston to see a Tremont street trance medium and hypnotist, who was highly recommended as one who could see into the future and tell her whether Runnells loved her dearly or not, and whether she would be sucessful in her suit. Mrs. Laveen says she was deeply impressed with the medium, as he told her upon her entering the office, that she had a large sum of money about her. This so astonished her that she immediately put her hand on her neck to see if the $1,000, which she carried in a bag attached to a string around her neck, was safe.

After being in the office a short time she told her love story and troubles to the medium, and asked for advice. He found out what month she was born in, and, after consulting the stars, told her that he would have to put her into a trance in which she could talk, and he would afterward tell her what was best to be done in the case. He made a few passes with his hands over her face and eyes, and she was in the trance for over an hour. When she woke up the man was snapping his fingers in her face and calling upon her to wake up. She felt dazed for a time. The medium afterward told her that the case was a most complicated one, and one of the most difficult he had ever handled, as the stars and planets did not seem to act. He told her to go home and remain in her room for two days and not to speak to any one, and to sit in the room with her fingers crossed and come within a week to see him again.

Mrs. Laveen went home and remained in her room all that afternoon and evening, with her fingers crossed, and did not speak to any one in the house. On removing the package attached to her neck she was astonished upon opening it to find that the money had been removed and some forty or fifty newspaper clippings the size of ordinary bills neatly folded had been inserted in place of the money. As the medium told her not to leave the house for two days she did not report the matter to the police before the next day, when she called at the Malden police station.

Mrs. Laveen went to Boston with Inspector Wolf and showed him the office where the robbery is alleged to have occurred. The office was found closed, with a sign on it, "Out of the city for a few days." The stolen money was in bills of large denominations. Mrs. Laveen told the police she had rich relatives in New York, who had her money invested, and she had sent on to them for another $1,000.

TREED BY THREE BEARS.

Fremont Bourne, of No. 140 South Main street, this city, went to the East Mountain yesterday morning to fish for trout and had whipped the brook half way up the mountain, when suddenly three big black bears broke into the clearing, says the Rutland (Vt.) correspondent of the New York World.

Bourne was unarmed. He made for a tree and climbed it. The bears followed, and, one behind the other, began to ascend.

When the foremost bear got near the limb on which Bourne had taken refuge he kept it from approaching for a time by jabbing it in the eyes with a branch he had broken from the tree. Little by little, however, the bear crept nearer and the others were just behind. Bourne moved as far out on the branch as he could, swung to the ground and dashed down the mountain. He had put 20 yards behind him before one of the bears had reached the ground. The nearest house was half a mile distant, and toward this refuge sped Bourne. The bears gained on him and when he reached the farmhouse the foremost was hardly 100 feet behind.

At the house Bourne procured a rifle and from a window killed two of the bears. The third escaped to the woods.

PROMOTIONS

Made Among Employes of the Chicago & Northwestern.

Sioux City, Iowa, June 28.—The Chicago & Northwestern Railway company has decided upon a number of important promotions and appointments which will be effective July 1.

Richard H. Aishton, general superintendent, will be assistant general manager. He will be succeeded as general superintendent by William D. Cantillon, at present assistant general superintendent. Thomas A. Lawson, superintendent of the Wisconsin division, will succeed Mr. Cantilon as assistant general superintendent.

The following other appointments will be made:

F. R. Pechin, superintendent of the Northern division, will succeed Mr. Lawson as superintendent of the Wisconsin division.

W. D. Beck, assistant superintendent of the Iowa division, will succeed Mr. Pechin as superintendent of the Northern Iowa division.

G. W. Dalley, trainmaster at Clinton, will succeed Mr. Beck as assistant superintendent of the Iowa division.

F. H. Hamil, chief despatcher of the Galena division, will succeed Mr. Dalley but with headquarters transferred to Boone.

E. M. Dennis, chief dispatcher at Boone, will succeed William Hengstler as trainmaster at Tracy, Minn.

P. G. Campbell, night chief dispatcher at Winona, will succeed Mr. Dennis at Boone.

I. O. Wilson, who comes from the Erie, will succeed Mr. Hamill at Chicago.

METEOR WAS IN FIRST.

But Cicely Claims Race on Time Allowance.

Kiel, June 8.—Emperor William's American built schooner yacht Meteor, with the emperor himself on board and steering most of the time, finished 7 minutes and 21 seconds ahead of the Cicely in the large schooner race held here yesterday in connection with the regatta. The Cicely is owned by Cecil Quentin, of England, and was designed by Fife. Under her time allowance, however, the Cicely claims the race by 1 minute and 11 seconds. The judges have reserved decision because of a protest entered by M. Guillemme, the owner of the Clara, which was also in the race, who avers that the rules required the Cicely to carry two anchors at her bows instead of one. The race will be given to the Cicely unless she is ruled out. The contest was a trial between American and English built boats.

CREWLESS SHIPS.

Dismantled Derelicts Which Have Made Many Voyages.

Derelicts have become one of the chief interests of the hydrographic office. All the ships that sail the seas are encouraged to consider themselves part of this office. Whenever they come upon any floating object large enough to be dangerous, whether ship or lumber raft, or broken spar, they note its exact whereabouts in latitude and longitude, and the first port they reach, the information, with a description of the object, is given to the American consul, who forwards it to Washington, says the Youth's Companion. In the hydrographic office at Washington is a large blackboard, on which the location of these reported objects is plotted down each day. Once a month a chart is made from the data collected on the boards, and copies of it are printed and sent to all sea captains who contribute the date to fill it. Few newspapers or magazines have such a world-wide circulation as this monthly chart. On it are not only recorded additions of derelicts, but a deal more of valuable information about currents and winds, fogs and icebergs and reports of general interest—all compiled from the information sent in from over seas.

The work of the derelict hunters does not, however, stop with merely locating them. For those that lie well outside the main lines of travel reporting is sufficient; but when a derelict is sighted in the direct lines of commerce her presence is immediately telegraphed to the secertary of the navy, who sends the nearest small war vessel after her. The cruiser goes to the nearest likely spot, cruises back and forth till the derelict is finally sighted, and then proceeds, either fastening torpedoes to her and exploding them by electricity from a safe distance, or by shooting at her, to break her into small, harmless pieces, or sink her outright. For she will burn burning is a very good way of demolishing her, and provides the necessary pillar of flame by night and of smoke by day to serve as a warning for approaching vessels until she finally sinks.

Drifting about the North Atlantic ocean, susceptible to the varying changes of waves and winds, are hundreds of common beer bottles, thrown overboard by ships of the American and Russian merchant marine services and occasionally picked up and reported to the hydrographic offices of these governments. This is in the interest of a scientific research instituted a few years ago to determine the direction taken by bodies coming under the influences of streams and currents of which little is known by the physical geographers.

The methods employed are simples, and the results obtained are expected to prove of inestimable value to commercial interests generally, whiles removing many doubtful questions arising out of the uncertain drift of derelicts which heretofore have been regarded as correct examples of the direction ships would take when abandoned to the influences of ocean currents.

Thousands of these bottles containing minute directions printed in seven different languages the annually thrown into the sea under the supervision of the American navy department, with the expectation that many will be found and rescued by passing vessels, their location noted and the fact reported at Washington. Each bottle contains a written description as to what shall be done by the skipper of the ship finding it. He is supposed to note the latitude and longitude where it was sighted, where it was thrown into the sea, and to estimate the probable distance traversed since originally thrown overboard, by which the general direction taken may be reckoned. Reports received at the navy department last year indicate that much valuable information is being derived regarding the direction of important currents and that the simple process employed is proving admirably adapted to the purposes sought.

Russia is closely co-operating with this government in carrying out the idea, and instructions are issued by the hydrographic office that any bottle picked up at sea by the skipper of some ship not of that government shall be at once reported. All American and Russian merchant and war ships are expected to note the locality of bottles they may find drifting about, and again to turn them adrift after observing the original place they were thrown into the sea indicated on the waterproof paper supplied by the two governments to ships assisting in the plan.

Recent reports present some remarkable drifts of bottles, several having gone as far as the distance across the ocean and one double that distance. They vary from only a few miles to over thirty-five a day which is almost the average of the usual derelict exposed to the wind and often borne along rapidly by the small portion o. woodwork above water serving as a catch for the breezes. One bottle has the record of 4200 miles traversed in 557 days, at the average of 7½ miles a day. This bottle was thrown overboard from the ship Comliebank, of the Spanish merchant service. Another drifted 3900 miles in 694 days, at the average of 5½ miles a day, while a third traveled 3600 miles in 478 days.

The most remarkable drift of all, however, was that of a bottle that went 70 miles tin two days, or at the rate of 35 miles a day. Another traveled 200 miles in eight days, at the rate of 25.8 miles a day, while still another 3100 miles in 151 days, ate the rate of 19 miles a day. The latter shows the quickest drift for a long distance of any bottle reported.

Long distance drifting in the Pacific is especially noticeable in the reports received here. March 24, 1897, a bottle was tossed into the sea from the ship Rockhurse, and, after drifting for 742 days, was picked up, having covered in a direct line 5100 miles, or the entire distance from San Francisco to China. Its average rate was 2.9 knots a day. Another bottle thrown into the sea from the Spanish ship Isolmont on Oct. 10, 1890, and reported June 24, 1899, traveled 7600 miles in the interval, at the rate of 7.7 knots a day. Still another thrown into the sea September, 1898, and reported fourteen months after, had sailed 5200 miles at the average of 12.3 knots a day. The number of bottles picked up and investigated increases each year.

The main features indicated in the drifts are that bottles thrown into the sea near the equatorial and trade wind region tend to the westward and usually bring up in the West Indies or on the Mexican coast, as evidenced by the numerous bottles cast adrift between Madeira and the fairway of Cape San Roque, off the east coast of Brazil. Along the American coast and north of the 40th parallel these conditions are reversed. Here the general set of the waters is to the northward and eastward, and bottles put in the sea in that region usually find their way to the north. This is unquestionably due to the influence of the gulf stream, which takes an easterly and northerly direction after spreading out in midocean. Here, too, the velocity is much less than in the equatorial regions.

Between these two main drifts, and occupying a stretch of ocean extending in latitude from 25 degrees north of 40 degrees north, and in longitudte from 30 degrees west to 60 degrees west, lies a debatable region crossed by numerous steamship and sailing routes, and within which bottles are in all probability as frequently cast adrift as in other portions of the sea. The recovery of such bottles, however, are rare, the records of the hydrographic office furnishing but six since 1888. The average velocity daily of the seventy bottles which landed on the coast of Europe was five miles. The bottles, which drifted entirely across the ocean from west to east, unite in giving an average somewhat higher than usual, the last two having traveled 11.4 miles and 9.9 respectively. For those thrown overboard in the north equatorial drift the average was 10.8 miles a day, while those traveling along the north coast of South America averaged 21 miles a day. A chart of the North Atlantic shows hundreds of bottles drifting about the ocean, which may sometime be reported by ships crossing the seas.

The influences which affect the courses of derelicts are thus explained by Benjamin Brooks:

"The waters of the whole ocean—of all the oceans for that matter—flow slowly but surely through a grand system of currents and counter-currents. The gulf stream, with its river of warm, blue water, is only part of it. The sun shines down and heats the air lying over the tropic seas; and the air, becoming thereby lighter per cubic foot, rises to a higher level. Then the cool air from the polar regions flows toward the equator to take its place. But when you stir your cup of coffee in the morning, though it all goes round together, you will notice that the little bubbles in the center, revolving in a smaller circle, do not go so fast as the bubbles near the inside of the cup. So with the spinning earth. The air that revolves with it near the poles, when brought to the greater circle of the equator, finds itself very much behind the game. The surface of the earth and the sea spins eastward much faster than it is going. The result is strong east wind. So, all around the tropic zone, where there is nothing to obstruct them, we have strong, steady, easterly winds which sailors call the 'trades.'

"Now, if we come back to our coffee cup again, and permit ourselves the indignity of blowing it to cool it, all the little bubbles and the surface liquid will be forced over to the side of the cup toward which we blow. Just so the continuous east wind in the tropics, blowing day after day, finally gets the whole surface of the sea moving before it toward the West. When this great quantity of water reaches the easternmost point of South America it splits like snow on the cowcatcher of an engine, part going south along the coast, part going north and being forced into the Gulf of Mexico. Here the waters of the Mississippi mix their fine, infinitiesimal particles of silt witn it to give it its deep blue color (for perfectly clear deep waters are black); then, pushed on by the waters behind, it flows out again up our eastern coast till it meets the westerly 'trades' of the temperate zone."

A LOVE STORY BY ANNA WEBER

(Copyright, 1902, by W. R. Hearst).

It was not her first love. She had loved before, but never in this way. She looked with a ceretain pitying scorn on the fleeting attachments of two years, a year, six months ago.

"I was very young then," she thought, looking up through the apple blossoms under which she lay.

She was 10 years old now. Ten just the day before yesterday. And the day before yesterday was the first time she had seen HER. It had cost her a great deal to go to school that day. It was her birthday and the sun shone. But she had gone. Things are very hard at times, but now how glad, how glad she was!

Now, lying under the apple blossoms she made a great resolve. "I will wash the dishes every day, every day, without being asked," she thought.

If her legs were only thin. SHE had such lovely thin legs. And blue eyes, truly blue, instead of all colors mixed up. And HER hair was long and braided and had a little point at the end instead of twisting up and crumpling up, especially in church, until you simply must take your hat off or die.

Perhaps SHE would have spoken that very morning if her hair had been different. No one understood, no one cared. She had not seen HER for two days, and just that morning she was looking in the glass to see if she had not changed at all, or grown very pale, when her mother began to twist the end of her braid around and around, and then it was all turned up again. No one understood no one in the whole world—except God. He must. How near the blue sky seemed beyond the apple blossoms.

Suddenly she saw her brother come out on the plazza, look around and then steal softly back of the house.

"He is after my things," she thought, and she sprang up and after him, but stopped in the midst of her run, hesitated, turned back, and then ran eagerly after him again.

"I will show him where I have hid the treasure, and I will let him have my bower in the tree," she thought.

She ran on, tripped and tore her dress. Her brother saw her coming and fled hot haste over the fence. Then she leaned her head against a tree, and looked down at her torn dress, and a great wave of sadness came over her.

"Mamma will scold too, I suppose. No one knows how changed I am, I am going to die pretty soon, I think."

The next day, she went early to school and laid an armful of apple blossoms on HER desk. Then she crept softly out and lingered at the school gate, watching.

But when SHE came near, walking quite slowly—not running at all, or even skipping—with her "geography" under her arm, with her truly blue eyes, with her hair which did not pimple or twist, with her thin legs, the little girl's courage failed her. She turned back and walked slowly up the school walk. Her heart beat fast as she walked into the school and hid herself behind the cloak room door and watched through the chink to see if SHE would see the apple blossoms.

The desk was covered with them, so SHE broke off several twigs, all pink and white, and taking up the others threw them out of the window.

"They were just common things. I ought to have brought lilies or roses. I mustn't be the little girl in the cloak room. She did not venture in until the others came.

Then she rushed on to her own desk from where she could see the thin legs coming down below the seat, and above, the lovely braid, all but the little point and her heart sank. She realized now how the deformed man in her street felt.

"Why does God make some people so nice and some so horrid," she thought in despair. At recess, however, she had to pass HER desk often. At last the bell struck and as she went to her seat she said to HER:

"Hello!"

"Hello!" said the other little girl.

The next day they became intimate friends. The new scholar's name was Rosalie. The little girl was not surprised. She had known from the beginning that it must be that or Violet. Her own name was only Jessie.

There was another girl of the same age whose name was Lillian. These three used to walk together arm in arm, talking very fast and quite oblivious of the existence of any other human being.

Rosalie and Lillian lived in adjacent streets, Jessie further on, so they separated one by one.

One day Jessie asked Rosalie to walk on to the next corner. Rosalie did. That could not happen often, however, for Rosalie's mother had told her to come straight back from school.

Some people were so different from other people. Rosalie was never bad, never. Lillian was lovely, too, though she sometimes did things, and some people were so bad. They did not mean to be, it just came.

She looked around with grave eyes. Near her was a half-built house with a quantity of waste wood lying around it. Suddenly Jessie sprang toward it and began to gather a big bundle, as much as she could carry. "I'll take it to the poor woman across the bridge," she thought.

There was no one in sight at the poor woman's house. Jessie laid her bundle down at the door very softly and then ran away as fast as she could, for she heard clattering on the board sidewalk, as she ran.

The days slipped past. The three girls had been intimate friends four weeks. Rosaline and Lilian studied their geography together, Jessie lived too far away. They knew each other's inmost souls, and were closely united by a common passion for the teacher. They invented a cipher, the explanation of which each kept hidden away in the most secret part of her desk. It worked beautifully, for each one was permitted to add a new sign whenever it seemed necessary. Then they would read the accumulated notes on the way from school and laugh, and it made the other girls simply wild.

They likewise gathered large thorns, and swore to prick their fingers and write all very important notes in their blood. However, an insurmountable difficulty presented itself—the pricking hurt. So a bottle of red ink was substituted.

It was in black ink, however, that a note was written by the little girl one morning. The name was signed in blood and a rose thrust through the middle of the note. It read:

"I can come and study geography this afternoon."

Rosalie read it and passed it over to Lillian when Jessie did not see it. They looked at each other a minute, without speaking, and then Rosalie wrote in answer:

"We are not going to study this afternoon."

We plan and arrange for everything and then nothing comes of it. Life is bitterly hard. Perhaps God means that we shall be very unhappy most of the time, so that we shall get to be good sooner.

But the next day Rosalia wrote a note in cypher stating that she could come over after school. That day the world shook hands with Jessie and danced with her along the way.

A week later she said again that she could come over and study geography. Lillian looked at Rosalie.

"We don't study together any more," she said to Jessie. "Did not you know that?" In fact, it was arithmetic they studied together now.

The next day Rosalie stayed after school to help the teacher. "She's always doing something lovely," thought Jessie. She looked around for Lillian but could not see her. She walked down the path very, very slowly, hoping Rosalie would catch up. Then she waited at the gate, but Rosalie did not come.

"She'll be very pale tomorrow," thought Jessie, as she at last turned away alone. The next day they all walked home together arm in arm, but the next Lillian had to stay and arrange her books. Rosalie waited for her.

"Don't you wait," she said to Jessie; "two don't need to, and I will."

The next day Rosalie forgot something and went back to look for it. The other two waited for a while at the gate, then Lillian went back to look for Rosalie. Jessie waited a little longer, then she went to look, but there was no one in the building.

After that Rosalie stayed after school every day. At first Lillian did not wait, then she did.

A sense of great unworthiness deepned each day Jessie grew, as she went down the walk alone. "SHE was so lovely I fear I forgot to be good."

It was almost more than human strength could bear to walk home alone. One day she waited behind the school until they come out together. Then she ran across the fields and came up to Rosalie alone, near her house.

"Rosalie, don't you likes me any more," cried the little girl.

"Why're you hanging on you always hanging around," said Rosalie.

The little girl turned back, sobbing as she ran: "She might have told me so before! She might have told me so before!"

Whether it was three weeks or three years that now passed is a matter of slight importance. But it was a very, very long time. Sorrow ages a person, and she was quite changed. Sometimes she forgot all when she was reading or playing ball, but later she remembered again. At night she always remembered.

One night she could not sleep. Every now and then she would get up and look out of the window to see if it was morning until at last, about 10 o'clock, she cried herself to sleep.

School was over and a very long time passed. One day Jessie was walking along the street when she heard some one running behind her. She turned and saw Rosalie. Rosalie had a bunch of flowers in her hand.

"Don't you want one?" she asked. Jessie took it and they walked side by side. After a minute Jessie turned to Rosalie.

"Can you ever forgive me?" she asked in a whisper, her lips trembling.

Rosalie was deeply moved. She threw her arms around Jessie and kissed her. "Of course I can, can't she cried.

They walked on with their arms around each other's waists. Jessie did not speak. There are no words for such things. For she knew now that they were intimate friends forever. Forever and ever. Men to labor and usefulness is often a foundation of happiness—wealth which leads to idleness is always a source of despair and misery. When we speak of the poor as God's own we do not express a sentiment of pity; but we formulate a profound, philosophical truth.

The benevolent intentions of God towards his creatures are accomplished through the activities of the poor. The history of human progress is a history of poverty laboring to improve its own conditions.

The assurance that the poor we will always have with us is then a promise that the principle of progress shall forever abide in the human race.

But while we shall have the poor always with us, poverty will not always bear the same harsh significance. The poverty of a century or even of twenty-five years ago exists no longer. The poverty of today would have been considered comfort by former generations, and what today we consider comfort fifty years from now will be considered poverty.

It will be noverty by contrast with the greater prosperity surrounding it, and those then laboring to escape from it will be working not merely for their own improvement, but for the welfare of the whole human race.

ON A WARSHIP

Jack's Life Is a Busy One Every Day.

Ta ra-ra——the last note of reveille has sounded close upon the echoing boom of the morning gun. With the stroke of two bells and the bugle call an official day has begun on the United States battle ship Wisconsin. The call of the muezzin from a Turkish mosque is not half so compelling or constant as the note of a bugle on a warship. It is the keynote of each day, and its notes are commands, says the San Francisco Call.

Just a quarter of an hour before, the quartermaster from his station on the forward bridge has sent one of the watch to call the bos'un's mate, the master at arms and the bugler. The bos'un's mate calls all hands, and Jimmylegs, the Jackies' pet name for the master-at-arms, gets around at a lively rate among the thickly swung hammocks of the berth deck to shake some tardy sleepers. On this great floating fort there are 560 men, and all sleep in hammocks save the ward room officers and the petty officers.

Ablutions followed by coffee fill in the space of a half hour until three bells, when "Turn to" piped on the whistle by the bos'un's mate puts every man Jacky on the alert. At once they are a busy lot, some of them cleaning ship, others scrubbing and washing clothes. This work is kept up until 7:20 when the bugler's call of "mess gear" rings through the ship. Mess gear means in the language of a landsman to "prepare for breakfast," which on shipboard is called for 7:30, or seven bells.

Eight bells rings out to the sound of the "Star Spangled Banner," played by the ship's band. The flag is being raised and every man on the ship faces aft and salutes, as Old Glory reaches the truck. The quarterdeck is the official hall of the ship, so to speak. All the dignitaries who visit the ship are received on the starboard side of the ship. Here is the scene of any important naval ceremony, and here the ship's band plays every morning and afternoon. There is no more inspiring music than that of a ship's band as it comes in bursts over the water on a still afternoon. The band of a steamer usually plays well, for it spends from 10 to 11:30 o'clock every morning in practice.

The quarter masters and enlisted men regard the port side of the ship as more especially their own field.

Decks, bright work and gun bright work is the next task for the men, and they are shining brass for the half hour until one bell rings again. If one on land should go by bells the four-hour system of a ship would probably mix him at first worse than it does on board, but like many other things, it is simple after one knows it. If nothing else had to be done on a warship, it is a task to keep the men-killers bright and shining, and one can always see men oiling and polishing the guns to keep them from rusting. On the Wisconsin there are forty-eight of them. After the brass work is all like mirrors, the next thing on the program is for all hands to get into uniform and clear up all decks for inspection.

At two bells the executive officer inspects the lower decks. He has one or two straight military figures in his wake, as does every officer when he moves in the navy. At this same hour the gun captain begins the inspection, training and testing of the monster guns in the turrets. They revolve by electricity, the motive power that brings up on a hoist from below right to the breech of a gun a semi-circular car of ammunition. As the turret spins at the rate of 270 degrees in thirty-six seconds, the gun captain has only to put his eye to the sight drum, which can be graduated to a distance of 13,000 yards, train the gun at the desired elevation by means of an electrical crank, press a handle near him, and in less than a breath the 14-inch wall of the turret and its surroundings are shaken it would seem almost to disintegration by the spitting belch of the monster. There are twenty-four men in the crew that handle the guns of these turrets fore and aft, and four times a week they are drilled in what they have to do in time of action. The two guns of a turret, each forty feet long, can fire six shots in a space of four minutes.

As to drills, there are different ones on a battleship for almost every day of the week. But the inspection of the magazines and explosives is a daily operation.

The magazines are inspected morning and evening, and the temperature taken from the very delicate thermometer there. A pronounced odor of ether which is one of the constituents of smokeless powder, is noticeable upon entering these magazines. Other places inspected often are the shell rooms, full of deadly projectiles. There are the 13-inch black nosed common shells, the red semi-armor piercing, a more solid shell, and the blunt-nosed armor-piercing. All these magazines can be filled with water if necessary by flood cocks connecting with the deck. There are Jackies always on duty watching the magazines, and in very hot countries as many as 100 men are ordered to this duty.

At 9:25 the bugle rolls out the first call for quarters and five minutes later quarters is sounded. This is really a muster and occurs morning and evening. Some days it holds more of a ceremonial than setting up drill; as at general quarters on Thursday, when every gun on the ship is manned and ammunition provided as if going into action.

At quarters everybody is out, and the captain and officer of the day reign supreme. The division officers report the five deck divisions into which the men are divided, the engineers and the marines, and soon the decks both fore and aft are filled by moving lines of blue and white as the Jackies go through various calisthenic evolutions.

On Fridays each division has a different drill. The marine guard is put through a physical drill, and arms and guns are inspected. These routine drills go on until 10:30, when retreat from drill is sounded. At 11 o'clock work is knocked off on deck. In these brief intervals the sailors show that they are jolly tars on shipboard as well as on shore. Little knots of them may be found everywhere, some reading, some spinning yarns, some walking briskly arm in arm through the superstructure of the fo-cas'le. Some are having a turn at the guitar or the sailor's favorite instrument, the accordion, sometimes called the "sailor's piano."

Sailors are versed in many trades, and it has been said that should a battleship be wrrecked on an uninhabited island, a small town could be completely built by the vessel's crew, as some man could be found for almost any kind of work to be performed.

A not uncommon sight on a naval vessel is bronzed and stalwart seamen using hand-power sewing machines. These men make uniforms from regulation cloth purchased from the paymaster, and make not only their own clothing, many of them. but receive orders from their shipmates. Several barbers are useful on a battleship, and they are generally kept pretty busy after the general muster. which takes place on the quarterdeck on the first Sunday of each month. Each man's name is called, he answers his rating, and, as the sailors say, "walks around a stick." If long hair is one of his visible discrepancies he is sent to the barber.

The crew of the Wisconsin have two baseball teams and have only lost one game out of twenty in a year. Their racing boat crew made the Iowa "lose her pride" about a year ago. Then was heard the Wisconsin yell:

One, two, three, who are we?
We are the boys of the new navee!
Are we in it? Yes, we are.
Wisconsin! Wisconsin! Rah! rah! rah!

In the quarters of the wardroom officers all is serene and quiet at this hour of the day. The white-gloved orderly sits on the alert before the door of the admiral's cabin. Though Rear Admiral Casey, as commander-in-chief of the Pacific squadron makes his official home on the Wisconsin, he has no direct command over this particular ship, and all orders come through Capt. George A. Reiter, in command. To an onlooker the main business of the day for the officers of a battleship when not in action is to be present and direct the many drills.

At ten minutes past noon the omnipresent bugle sounds mess gear, and below there is a great rattle of tables being let down. They are all hung by wires to keep them from swinging in a rough sea. Dinner is piped at eight bells promptly, and twenty-six messes sit down to that meal. It is hardly finished when there is a cry of "Mail, ho!" and fortunate tars are seen looking over letters and papers. "Turn to" is sounded at 1 o'clock, and Jack is busy again. Some are in the torpedo room polishing the tubes that send the torpedo at a speed of thirty knots through the water or air. Still others are painting or shelacking decks or doorways, for there is always something to be painted on a naval vessel. Men are busy making hammocks in the sailmaker's room, and clever machinists are at work in the dynamo room, the hottest spot in the ship, where the temperature often reaches 120 degrees. In the ammunition passages men are shining the brass plates which connect with the sliding doors in the engine room below, and which by manipulation can be closed to prevent possibility of the engines being flooded.

Perhaps the two most unpopular spots on a naval vessel are the sick bay or hospital, with its clean white cots, and the "brig," or prison, with its cells of heavy, painted iron, in which are men confined for various periods, on a diet of bread and water. Before the loophole of the door paces a marine, relieved every two hours by another guard. Aft at this hour the officers are donning gloves and swords, preparatory to more drills. At 1:25 the buglers sound officers' call, and at three bells the drill call goes. One day it may be fire drill with a general alarm. One bell means a fire forward; two bells that one has been discovered aft. All the hose is let out, the ports are closed and men stand by to turn on flood cocks leading to the magazines.

Sometimes this is followed by "arm and away," when the boats are equiped to send in harbor and make a land attack, under cover of shelling of a port by the ship. Arms and water breakers, provisions and boat tackle are all brought out by the sailors in double quick time. Another most realistic drill is what is known as "abandon ship." This is practiced regularly, so that in case it becomes a reality that the ship is in collision or has been rammed in action, everyone knows what to do. The boats are manned, the men respond to the captain's call of "step lively there," and everything needful is passed to the boats. The whistles sound a signal that the ship is sinking and all watertight doors are to be closed. There is a call or two from the division officers: "All ready, sir," and in a few moments more the drill is over, and the decks resound with tramping feet to the sound of the bugle calling retreat from drill. Every three months target practice goes on, when the decks are cleared as in action and great guns as well as revolvers are brought into use.

Sometimes this practice will be when the ship is under way at sea, at other times record practice takes place in the harbor. In the past year the Wisconsin has broken the record for a long cruise, having made 19,000 miles in twelve months.

After daily drills are over, the division officers and others all report to the executive officer. The officer of the deck on a battleship is also an important personage, even though a new officer relieves him every four hours. He has everything in charge, and must be notified of anything done. Happenings in his department find a place in the ship's log.

At seven bells, or 3:30 p. m., the bosun's mate pipes "sweepers," which means that everything is to be swept down fore and aft. And as the sailors say, "all the spit-kito are emptied out." Then again Jacky is at leisure for a time, and the "smoking lamp" is supposed to be lit. Boxing, bag punching, cards, are some of the amusements, and the string band which the men have among themselves may gather in the barber shop for practice. The two goats, the 'possum and a cat, which are the ship's mascots, come in for their share of attention. Perhaps there is some talk of going ashore and hitting the "dog," as whisky is known to the sailors.

THE ARENA OF SPORTS

Gossip on the West's Sweeping Victory In the American Derby.

Eastern Horses Are Handicapped Unless Trained In Chicago Six Weeks Previously—All Records of Play In National League Broken.

The sweeping victory of the West in the American derby on Saturday at Chicago has convinced many turfmen here that Eastern horses who may start in the big event in future will be handicapped unless they are stabled and trained in the Windy City at least six weeks before the race. The fact that Heno, Arsenal, Hermis and Pentecost had little time in which to become used to the track and surroundings at Washington park, to say nothing of acclimatization, is used as an excuse for the poor showing of the four colts from the East. Heno was never able to run on a heavy track, so that his defeat will be attributed chiefly to the going. According to the most enthusiastic reports the start killed the chances of both Pentecost and Arsenal, who got away so badly that they never had an opportunity to get up with the leaders.

In the case of Hermis there are conflicting reports. Some stories are to the effect that the colt broke down while other yarns say that the jockey lost a stirrup and had to pull Hermis up. All things considered, turfmen are inclined to give much credit to Heno for his game race under adverse conditions. John E. Madden declares that Pentecost could not carry so much weight as 122 pounds and that the colt was evidently not altogether recovered from the effects of the railroad ride.

Wyeth's victory in the derby is a feather in the cap of Enoch Wishard, who trained Richard Croker's horses in England last year. Wishard came to this country last winter declaring that he would never go back to England and at the same time scoring the management of the British turf in a way that could not be misunderstood. He had signed a contract to train for John A. Drake, who had had enough of English racing and who decided to go into the sport here on a large scale. It was a fitting reward, therefore, when Owner Drake and Trainer Wishard saw Wyeth win one of the most famous classics of the American turf in their interests. "Lucky" Baldwin's Cruzados did not start, but Baldwin says that he stands ready to back Cruzados against any of the 3-year-olds for $10,000 a side. There is no reason why Baldwin should not be accommodated. "Diamond Jim" Brady is part owner of Major Daingerfield, the slashing 3-year-old who has already won the $10,000 Brooklyn derby and the $20,000 Tidal stakes without the slightest exertion. To those who have watched this colt perform the idea has presented itself that Major Daingerfield has developed into a 3-year-old having no peer. Matt Allen has declared that the colt can beat any 3-year-old in training at equal weights and that he has a brilliant future. Major Daingerfield is practically sure to start in the Lawrence realization stakes on July 4 and already this rich prize has been conceded to him by the sharps, in that event he will meet probably Yankee, Goldsmith, King Hanover, Juvenalis, Masterman, Ranald, The Rival, Thomas Cat, Lieutenant Gibson and other good 3-year-olds. Major Daingerfield has shown great superiority in the mud, but Gen. F. C. McLewee and Mr. Brady both declare that he can beat them all in any kind of going.

All records of play in the National league were broken last Sunday when Chicago defeated Pittsburg 3 to 2 in nineteen innings.

Twenty-five years since a team representing Pittsburg lost such another game as that of yesterday. On July 10, 1877, the team from Auburn, N. Y., beat the old Alleghenies at Recreation Park, 3 to 2 in eighteen innings. Up until yesterday this was the record for extra innings games played by any team representing Pittsburg.

Morris A. Critchley, who pitched for Auburn tells of this game as follows:

"The Auburns and the Alleghenies were in the League Alliance, and we were on our way from Washington to Toronto, Ont. We stopped to play three games in Pittsburg just after the riots. It was on July 10 that we had our battle. I pitched for Auburn and Jimmy Galvin for the Alleghenies. It was battle to the death. Not more than 100 people saw us go. Al G. Pratt, of Pittsburg, was the umpire, and he was the only man hurt. I hit him with a pitched ball. In the eighteenth Neil Hanlon, I think, who was playing left for us, made a hit and got round just about as did Kling in that game in Chicago in the nineteenth. I felt you bet good, but I thought poor Galvin would drop dead when he saw that run come.

"What made it very tough for Pittsburg was that in the seventeenth inning we were willing to call the game a draw, but Ross McKelvey, then captain of the Pittsburg team, would not have it. We won in the next inning. I think the games in those days were harder to pitch than are the contests of today. Then it took only three balls to send a man to base. He had three strikes and a fair ball, was certainly a very tired man when that game ended.

"We had a famous team then. There was Keenan Tobin, Fred Dunlap, Say, Tim Burns, Hanlon, Thomas, Rocap and myself. For five years I pitched every game played by the Auburns and won most of them. I don't think the pitchers of today would like to do this sort of hard work. The Allegheny team in that day was good, too. It was made up of Galvin, Dolan, Hilbert, Goodwin, Chamer, Nolson, Williamson, McKelvey and a left fielder whose name I do not remember."

If champion lightweight Joe Gans and his manager, Al Herford, adhere to their statements after Gans beat Erne then Steve Crosby, the local lightweight, will be the champion's next opponent after Gans fights George McFadden. Their statements were that the new lightweight champion would fight any and every lightweight in the world who posted a forfeit, be given a chance at 135 pounds, ring side, if they so desired.

Crosby was the first of the Western fighters to seek a tilt with Gans, and also the first in America to show the color of his money. Steve has had four sessions with Gans, and showed to good advantage upon each occasion. Gans and McFadden will have it out in San Francisco before the end of the month. The champion is a top-heavy favorite, and on form looks a sure winner.

Cornell won the greatest triumph of her history in boating last Saturday. The Ithacans literally swept the Hudson, winning all three events in the big regatta, the varsity, the freshman, and the four-oared races. In each race the crews, coached by Charles Courtney, had to fight all the way from start to finish for victory.

In all one of the three races did the Ithacans dare at any time to let down on their speed. The Wisconsin boys won the second honors of the day, and to them belongs great credit for the splendid fights which they made in the varsity and freshman races, in both of which they finished strong second to the Ithacans.

In all three races Columbia finished third. In the four-oared Pennsylvania was second, but in the varsity race the Quakers finished in fourth place, and in the freshman race they were fifth. The University of Syracuse beat the Quakers out for fourth place in the freshman event, and in the varsity Syracuse fought Georgetown out in the last few lengths, beating the boys from Washington by less than a yard at the finish line.

In none of the races were the records touched, but in all three events the times were not far above the fastest that have been made on this course.

While there is not much glory to be had from winning second place in the present National league company, there is a good deal for the team that can give the Pittsburgs a hot race for the pennant, or perchance accomplish the exceedingly unlikely feat of beating the champions out. At present the Brooklynites look to be the team that will be running up to the Pirates, granting that the latter will win the pennant, and it is hard to see how with a fair break in the luck they will not win it again. The recent fine playing of the Brooklyns, however, emphasizes the fact that they would now be giving the Pittsburgs a hard tussle if they had not made such a slow start. It is even said that the Brooklyns have not given up hope of yet ousting the Pittsburgs from the lear. There is plenty of time to do it if they have it in them, but it is one of the sternest chases that ever confronted a ball team. Each team has about ninety games to play, and not only is there every reason to believe, on the actual strength of the two teams, that the Pittsburgs will stay in the lead, but that they will be able to hold a lead almost as big as they now have.

It would be a sensational performance if the Brooklyns could catch the Pittsburgs, and at the rate they have been traveling the past three weeks they could do it; but then the Pittsburgs are not at all likely to continue at the indifferent clip they have been setting lately. That's where the rub comes in. Overconfidence might cost them dear, but overconfidence is a fault which can easily be overcome in the weeks between now and the end of the season. Because to old figures shows that the Pittsburgs would have to lose about one-half of their remaining games and the Brooklyns win about two-thirds of theirs for the latter to pass the leaders. It is not at all improbable that the Brooklyns will win two-thirds of their remaining games, but it is quite improbable that the Pirates will lose half of theirs. So it is plain the Brooklyns cannot afford to meet with the reverses that the Pirates only too frequently suffer; there is in attaining a worthy object the more credit there is in achieving it, and there is credit in making a good fight.

The names of many of the trotters and pacers and their drivers which will figure conspicuously on the grand circuit the later in the year are to be noted in the summaries of races on the half-mile tracks throughout the Middle West. This is a departure from the customs of the "good old days," when trainers who had high-class material in their barns reserved it exclusively for the big events on the mile tracks. The modern trainer rightly holds that while he is sending his good horse over the small circle for short money he is simply being paid for putting a "sprung" on him that will be appreciated, and that the short money goes a long way toward paying for winter oats. But at the same time the fellow with the second rate or sucker horse which could land the prize were the grand circuiter out of the way, is not profiting a great deal, and the result sooner or later proves disastrous to the fair associations, unless they can command the entries of grand circuiters to a large extent. The sucker trainer with the sucker horse will grow wise and cease producing.

Tim Donohue, who died last week, was an erratic, though warm-hearted, pal, and some funny stories are told of his idiosyncrasies. One of these has Hot Springs for the scene of action. Both the Chicago and Minneapolis teams were training there and one night there was a fanning match in "Billy" Moran's room. Ryan, Kittredge, "Noisy Bert" Cassidy and some others were arguing.

The argument grew so noisy that the traveling man in the next room beat on the door and said:

"For heaven's sake, you fellows keep quiet. I've got to catch an early train and want some sleep."

After that the argument was less uproarious, and, an hour later, when all was subdued, Moran, an inveterate joker, said to him:

"Tim, it's an infernal same the way you treated that traveling man."

"The way I treated him?" said Donahue indignantly. "Why you fellows were making all the noise."

Of course the entire crowd supported Moran and Tim lost the argument. Finally he said:

"Well, if I didn't treat him right I'm ready to apologize," and straightway he went into the hall, beat on the traveling man's door, waked him and apologized.

It was in the smoking compartment of the sleeper on the way from Cincinnati to Chicago Wednesday night. The softvoiced little man in the natty brown suit who draws a princely salary as the representative of a paper mill had just declared that he was making a business trip to the Windy City because he wanted to see the American Derby and that he had made up his mind that $50 straight and the same to show on Belle's Commoner would be his indulgence, and the big fat man in the negligee shirt and blue trousers was saying that he was sure that his business at the home office would detain him in Chicago over Sunday and that he would certainly pick up the price of a few beefsteaks on Heno, when the wan-faced young fellow in the gray suit cleared his throat, compressed his lips, crossed his legs and said:

"I am going to see the Derby, but it will be the last horse race I'll ever see."

"Going to croak yourself?" asked the little man in the soft voice.

"Maybe he's going to Alaska or Iceland," interposed the fat man.

"No, I'm going to stay right in Chicago," replied he of the sorrowful expression, as he cleared his throat again. "You see, it's this way. I went to Chicago fourteen years ago from a good home on an Iowa farm. I wasn't more than 15, but I was ambitious. I would make a fortune. I found myself one cold morning at the end of a fortnight with no employment, a week's room rent due and only 75 cents. I must have work. I preferred mercantile employment. It was not available, but a porter's place in a saloon was opened to me, and I accepted it. I became a bartender, and spent the best portion of those fifteen years serving drinks to the wisest of gamblers in all branches of the game, from dice and cards to horses and steers. The bald-headed gray-haired old sages counsel that there was nothing to be gained in the long run of a life of hazard and speculation. I saw thousands of dollars falling in riches today and penniless the next. I had heard hundreds of them declare that the man who followed the races and bet on the horses steadily would in the end find himself a winner. I gave much study to the matter, all the while refraining from speculation of any kind and laying by a portion of my earnings each month, until the amount had grown to $1500. Two months ago a young man dropped into the saloon. He had a system he said by which the races could be profitably played.

"I listened to him, and at the end of a two weeks' test on paper it was demonstrated to me by actual figures that with my $1500 I could earn $12 per day. That looked better than $100 per month for twelve hours' work each day in a saloon. I resigned my place and came to Worth. played my system faithfully during the last two weeks of the meeting, and sure enough I averaged my $12 a day. Then I went to Lexington. A friend of mine gave me a tip. I reluctantly departed from my system and played the tip. It won, and I cleared up $60. This beats the system," said the. "I'll play tips. I lost that $400 back, and in trying to recover it I got the bank roll down to $1000. 'I'll go to Latonia,' I said; 'it's easier there.' I went to Latonia. I played the system again, but it lost. Then I went back to tips and took on hundreds of everything. I went to Lexington and one night there was a fanning match in "Billy" Moran's room. Ryan, Kittredge, "Noisy Bert" Cassidy and some others were arguing.

"My entire satisfaction that there is no system by which a game of chance can be beaten, and that the best and surest way to get money is to work for it and save it or have a rich relative die and leave it to you. I am going to Washington Park Saturday and see the Derby, but after that I am done with the game forever."

A Glorious Fourth.

On the Fourth of July every true patriot will celebrate the signing of the Declaration of Independence by the Colonists, and although the struggle which followed was both costly and disastrous, yet it resulted in their ultimate freedom from the yoke of English bondage. Another very important day in the life of any one, especially those suffering from a weak or disordered stomach, will be the one on which they decide to give up old methods of trying to obtain relief and commence the use of that famous twentieth century family medicine, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It will cure any one suffering from dyspepsia, indigestion, belching, constipation, biliousness or insomnia. Try it today and be convinced. Our Private Stamp is over the neck of the bottle.

WONDERFUL BASS POND

That Was Found By Accident — Two Hours of Joy At Angling In the Wild Woods.

The sole thing that makes Pickerel lake in Price county, Wis., a part of the Mississippi system of waters is a creek which is a ditch.

That ditch is more than a mile long. It twists and turns in corkscrew fashion between soggy banks. It is choked with weeds. A section of tree trunk as big as an ordinary dry goods box would dam it utterly. It is in places not more than six inches deep. Yet because of it Pickerel lake contains muskallonge which runs sometimes as big has forty pounds.

The ditch connects Pickerel lake with Connor lake. Connor lake, by a bigger ditch, connects with the Flambeau river. The Flambeau connects with the Chippewa and the Chippewa with the Father of Waters.

How the great fish find their way through the intricacies of the tortuous passages, how, in particular, they get from Connor lake to Pickerel lake, at what time of day or night they make these emigrations, no man can say. There are many parts of the Pickerel lake ditch in which a sizable muskallonge would show a third of his back above the water while his belly scraped the bottom.

Half way down this ditch is a sunken log, half buried in the mud of the bottom, but lying across the stream with its top side so near the surface that even lightly laden skiffs must be worked over it with toil. That log has been there for ten years and ten hundred times in each year the guides have sworn to chop it out.

Twenty minutes of work would remove it, but it is there for the reason that every guide is lazier than every other guide and no guide will do anything that is not nominated in his bond. Certainly upward bound muskallonge, fighting their way through from Connor lake, leap this log when they nose it; they could not get by any other way.

The guide who undertakes to transport his employer from Pickerel to Connor lake has his work cut out for him. Nearly all boats used on the North Woods lakes are clinker built and draw a good deal of water. In this ditch the keel is scraping bottom half of the way.

Of course, oars are not used, the guide standing in the stern with a long pole that has a wooden disk at its lower end to prevent it from entering the soft black mud and going through to China. The passenger sits on the rear thwart to throw the bow up.

When the boat hangs upon a bottom projection, as it often does, it is forced as far forward as it will go. Then the guide and the angler walk to the bow and throw the stern up. In this way passage is worked.

It takes an hour and a half of most strenuous labor. When a July sun is beating down both men get as wet as if they had splashed overboard. At one place is a horseshoe bend and after fifteen minutes of panting, pushing and profanity the boat is within easy stone's throw of a point just across the tops of the waving weeds.

The fish was big and strong, was hard hooked and, as usual, made one leap for the roots of the pads. The thumb jammed down upon the silk checked it suddenly, turned it half around from its own impetus and brought it two feet out of water.

The boat, crushing its slow way through forces from their lurking places all sorts of water forms. Muskrats scutter out of the way, turtles burrow clumsily among the roots, water beetles innumerable dart among the stalks for safety, frogs croak dismally hop, and ahead in clumsy flight rises the small blue heron, the white heron or even the teal.

The wide flat through which the ditch runs is populous with water birds nesting. It affords them ample concealment and either of the lakes is a good practice ground for the swimmers.

On this flat, with a two-pronged spear on the end of a ten-foot pole, a man may take in an hour as many bullfrogs as he will care to carry, big luscious fellows with huge thighs that propel them like bullets over weeds three feet high. The guides regard frogs as worthless, since they are too big to fish with, and they can not understand the degraded appetite which fancies them fried in cornmeal.

Pickerel lake is itself a beautiful body of water, three miles long by a mile wide, deep basomed in a setting of spruces, hemlocks and balsam pines, twenty miles from a railway and hard to reach. The lands about it are unoccupied, being the property of a railroad.

The lake is deep, the water is beautifully blue and it contains red-eyed and large-mouthed bass, as well as muskallonge and wal-eyed pike. It is called Pickerel lake presumably because there never was a pickerel in it, and never will be.

The fishing there is so good that there is no reason why anybody should wish to change, but is just as good in Connor lake, and so the intricate and laborious ditch is often tried. There is but one way to get to Pickerel lake, and it is so difficult that there is no danger that its waters will ever be fished out.

From the railway a drive of sixteen miles is made to Boyd's camp over a road that is a road only once in a while. At Boyd's stores are loaded into boats and pulled the length of Long lake, some three miles.

There a portage is made to Round lake, a mile away. Round lake is crossed and is followed by a portage to Swamp lake, a mile and a half away over a corduroy path, which is often under water and frequently knee deep in mud.

Crossing Swamp lake a last portage of a mile brings the guide and his employer to a log hut on the north shore of Pickerel. This trip means half a day of laborious travel, but the end pays for it all.

On Pickerel lake the angler is as much out of the world as if in the middle of Sahara. He and his guide will be the only human beings on the water. Perhaps a dozen small parties in a year find their way to it, but that is all.

No telegrams or newspapers can reach a man there; he is temporarily but thoroughly divorced from business cares. Deer undisturbed come down to the edges at sunset to feed upon the lilypads. Does come with their fawns and race with them a half-mile at top speed along the level shores.

The ruffed grouse drums within fifty yards of the cabin; the little red squirrel, sole representative of the family in those woods, patters on the roof; the English sparrow has not found its way to the solemn forest fastnesses, and native birds in hundreds nest undisturbed.

Flickers, vireos and warblers are in hundreds, the hermit thrush sings from the thickets and against the black green of the balsams the scarlet tanager lies like a stab of flame. From underneath the roots of an old pine near the hut a spring bubbles, clear and strong and it keeps beer at just the proper temperature.

The bass in Pickerel lake, when they have been skinned by the guide—no guide ever scales a fish—and fried in a thin pan have a flavor all their own.

In September of last year a party of three men were on Pickerel lake. They came out to civilization after awhile. They got on the train and bought newspapers. In them they saw a mention of "President Roosevelt." That was their first intimation that an executive of the country had been slain and another sworn in.

Robert Taylor, of Indianapolis, will always be glad that he tried the tortuous passage between Pickerel and Connor. He had been in the cabin with Billy Humes for guide for a week, but for some reason neither muskallonge nor bass would strike. That does not often happen, but no waters are utterly exempt from bad seasons.

He found it difficult to land enough fish for the stomachs of himself and Humes. Finally he decided to try Connor lake. Humes objeteed, knowing that there was a hard day ahead of him, but the objection after stormy debate was overruled.

They started in early morning, made the passage through by 10 o'clock, and found the fishing in Connor lake to be worse if possible than that in Pickerel. At 3 in the afternoon they started back, Taylor dirty, tired and disgusted, Humes dirty, tired, but maliciously triumphant.

When nearly half way through the ditch Taylor noticed, thirty yards to the left, an unusually high growth of water flags and wild rice. He asked what was behind it.

Humes, who did not know, said that dry land was behind it. Taylor suggested that they explore. There was more objection, more debate and another over-ruling.

They worked their way to a row of flags and pushed through it. With the last shove of the pole the boat shot out upon the still surface of a little lake of not more than an acre in extent and exactly circular.

It was clean cut and very deep, with pond lillies in yellow bloom near its edges and great hemlocks and maples shading it. Certainly no other guide had ever before reached it under protest.

"Drop the pole," said Taylor, "sit down, light your pipe and break your conversation in two while I try a cast." Humes was willing.

From the thwart by his thigh the angler selected a piece of white salt pork three inches long by half an inch wide in the middle, tapering at each end. Through the thickest part he had worked a couple of crimson threads and the thread hung upon either side like little red legs.

He cast across his body fifty feet to where a mass of pads made a green beach for the wavelets to ripple against, suffered the lure to sink a foot and reeled slowly in. Perhaps it had traveled two yards when it was struck with a rush that shouldered up the water as if a log had been dragged violently under the surface, and the fight was on.

The fish was big and strong, was hard hooked and, as usual, made one leap for the roots of the pads. The thumb jammed down upon the silk checked it suddenly, turned it half around from its own impetus and brought it two feet out of water.

It was a red-eyed bass of a good three pounds, and at the risk of tearing out the hook Taylor cast in ten feet of line, the split bamboo bending nearly double. The hook held, however, and the fish darted at the boat with a speed far greater than any thumb and fingers could reel in.

Gaining a yard it sprang straight upward and threw its weight against the line when in air. Taylor in old hand, however, and lifted his left thumb and released the reel crank as the fish leaped.

The reel spun as the bass hit the water and once more darted for the pads, to be once more checked and turned within a foot of them. Then the old trick was tried of boring toward the bottom, in order to reach it and break out the hook.

This was beaten by giving the butt hard and reeling in slowly but determinedly. Then the dashes grew shorter and less swift, then a final effort was made to get under the boat and cut the silk on the keel, or a nail, or a splinter, then the beautiful warrior came to the top, gasping feebly, and was lifted in, its sides shining with the sheen of perfect health, its red eyes still glowing with the spark of anger.

It is a matter of talk with anglers for the genuine black bass that if the fish weighed as much as a muskallonge it could not be captured with anything less lethal than an axe, and those in the lonely little lake which Taylor found went far to verify the saying. For three hours he sat there, casting the same bit of salt pork with the scarlet threads attached, and for 110 minutes of the two hours he was fighting.

The result was fifteen bass which ranged from two to four and a half pounds, and the big one fought for twelve minutes without a second of let-up. Then, as if by pre-concerted signal, they quit striking. All parts of the little lake were tried, but without further result.

During the stay at Pickerel the man from Indianapolis went back to his discovery whenever the bass in the lake proper showed any coyness and he was always rewarded. There were fish that undoubtedly went to shallow parts of the lake in spawning season and made their way back with difficulty. They thus could not be said to be totally uneducated, but they seemed to be always eager.

In fishing that small gem of the woods segregated from the larger waters and unvisited by others, Taylor felt much as if he were enjoying himself in his own private preserve and he told about it only in an incautious moment. His secrecy was valueless, however, because Humes regards the lake as his own find and takes his other patrons there as a sign of personal favor.

Life's Miseries!

Not one of life's miseries is greater than backache.

The back that's lame, or weak, or aching tells of sick kidneys—of urinary troubles—of poisons left in the blood.

Backache is simply kidneyache—the cry for help that the little filters of the blood send out when they can't do their work.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

are the sure and simple cure—take away the cause and the backache quickly disappears. There's plenty of proof of it—evidence right here in Duluth.

'Tis easily investigated.

DULUTH PROOF.

Mrs. M. McGillivray, of 1228 Superior street, says: "I was troubled with my kidneys a good deal for a year or two and had neavy, dull pains through my loins. My back tired easily especially if I reclined or sat long in one position. In the morning I felt tired and worn out. The kidney secretions were unnatural and I was troubled with persistent headaches. I was advised to try Doan's Kidney Pills, procured a box from W. A. Abbett's drug store and began to use the preparation. I received wonderful benefit from the treatment and since using Doan's Kidney Pills I have felt splendid."

Doan's Kidney Pills are for sale at all drug stores. 50 cents a box.

NOTICE OF MORTGAGE SALE.

Whereas, default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage which was duly executed and delivered by Charles J. Frederickson and Clara M. Frederickson his wife, J. F. (or John F.) Fredin and Anna Fredin, his wife, and C. W. Wilson and Augusta Wilson, his wife, mortgagors, to Frank L. Murray, mortgagee, bearing date April 15th (5th), 1894, and which was duly recorded in the register of deeds' office for St. Louis County, Minnesota, on April tenth (10th), 1894, at 1:30 o'clock p. m., in Book eighty (80) of mortgages, on page four hundred eighty-four (484); such default consisting in the non-payment of the principal sum thereby secured, with interest thereon from April 5th, 1894, and also in the non-payment of taxes upon the premises described in said mortgage for the year 1894 and subsequent years, which said mortgagors had covenanted to pay in said mortgage, but which became delinquent, and which said mortgagee was compelled to pay, and did pay, as follows: On April 28th, 1899, the sum of $21.96; on May 31st, 1899, the sum of $8.79; on May 31st 1900, the sum of $7.78, and on May 31st, 1901, the sum of $8.25; no part of which principal sum, taxes, or interest thereon has ever been paid.

And whereas, there is therefore claimed to be due, and there is actually due, at the date of this notice, upon said mortgage debt, the sum of two thousand seventy-nine and 10-100 ($2079.10) dollars, principal, taxes paid and interest.

And whereas, said mortgage contains a power of sale in due form which has become operative by reason of the defaults above mentioned; and no action or proceeding, at law or otherwise, has been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described therein, situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, described as follows, to-wit: Lot numbered forty-nine (49), in block fifty-seven (57), in Duluth Proper, Third Division, according to the recorded plat thereof; also lots numbered seven (7) and eight (8), in block six (6), in Martin's Division of Duluth, according to the recorded plat thereof, in the register of deed's office for St. Louis County, Minnesota; which premises will be sold by the sheriff of St. Louis County, Minnesota, at the front door of the court house in the city of Duluth, in said county and state, on the 11th day of June, A. D. 1902, at ten (10) o'clock a. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and said taxes and interest thereon, and seventy-five dollars attorney's fees, stipulated for in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from the day of sale as provided by law.

Dated March 20th, 1902.

FIGHT FOR AUDITOR

Now Said to Be Between Halden and Jacobson.

Twin City Support of Iverson a Boomerang.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Delegates to the Republican state convention, which opens at noon tomorrow, have been coming in ones and twos and threes for several days, but today they began to arrive in bunches, including more or less complete delegations, and most of them will be in tonight. Today everybody is busy lining up and sizing up. Tonight they will be busy getting together and deciding who is to play ball with who, and the chances are that, by tomorrow morning, the situation will be pretty well defined. It is not so clearly defined today as it might be.

The auditorship and clerkship propositions are still in the air and getting a little more complicated every minute. This morning, and since Saturday, it has been pretty well understood that the auditorship fight is between Halden and Jacobson. The vigorous and strenuous gentleman from Lac Qui Parle county has come down to the city with much more strength than he had been given credit for. Iverson's strength has not exceeded anybody's expectations, and while all three have strength, Iverson's is more scattered and less manageable, and the attempt to force him in with the aid of the Twin City delegations has proven something of a boomerang, involving both Iverson and Reese in its return shock. Jacobson must be figured with, and Halden must be figured with, and it has proven a serious thing to Dar Reese that his strength has been tampered with in the attempt to land Iverson.

The clerkship and the auditorship will be considerably intermingled. The various candidates for clerk of the supreme court are willing to make deals for votes, and it is probable that they will be accommodated. Just how the forces will line up cannot be determined before tonight, but the fact that Reese has not votes to deliver to anybody is a serious handicap to him. Even Ray Jones is not entirely on Easy street, for if the trouble gets very thick there is a chance that even the lieutenant governorship will be dragged into the melee.

The question of Cuban reciprocity is likely to be productive of a little sport tomorrow. It is a one hundred to one shot that if a resolution endorsing the president's attitude on this interesting problem is offered, the convention will carry it with a whoop. That means a slap at the insurgent congressmen of Minnesota, and therefore the shelving of any such proposition is a consummation devoutly to be wished by their friends. If it gets into the convention delegates are up against the proposition of either turning down the president—which cannot be done in this convention—or turning down the congressmen. Therefore, considerable ingenuity will be exercised to stave off discussion of Cuban reciprocity.

The name of Senator J. D. Jones of Todd county suddenly bobbed into the clerkship fight Saturday night. What it means nobody knows, though there are ingenious theories, such as it is designed to cut away from Pidgeon and help Reese. Jones was formerly clerk of the supreme court. Mr. Gish, of the Third district, has a certain amount of strength, claimed by his friends to be practically all of the district. That is probably a little exaggerated. Capt. Everett of the Second district has somewhat less strength. Mr. Pidgeon, of the Sixth district, has undoubtedly a good deal of strength, while Dar Reese has a good deal also, even if it is somewhat unmanageable and unavailable for trading purposes. These facts are the pawns in the game that is to be played during tonight, when combinations are likely to be made that will settle the situation in a large measure. E. L. Millar is going to make Odin Halden's nominating speech, and there will be brief seconding speeches from all over the state.

STILLMAN H. BINGHAM.

PRESIDENT MITCHELL, WHOSE DICTUM WILL DECIDE THE QUESTION OF A GENERAL COAL STRIKE.

While the national convention of the United Mine Workers of America at Indianapolis will not be held until July 17, it has already been practically settled that it will put unlimited power into the hands of President John Mitchell, who will then deal with the situation as he thinks best. At present it is not thought that there will be a general coal strike to include the contract states. If President Mitchell should order a strike in the noncontract states, less than 100,000 men will be added to the present number of unemployed, while if he should decide to send out also the men in the contract states the total number affected will exceed 250,000, besides those already on strike.

A FLOATING PALACE

The United States Departs From Its Jeffersonian Simplicity and Furnishes President With a Yacht Equalling That of Kings.

New York, June 30.—The yacht Mayflower, the official home of President Roosevelt, dainty and trim, lies in Brooklyn navy yard.

In her new function, after undergoing alterations that cost $50,000, she is ready for sea as one of the most luxuriously appointed vessels afloat. She was commissioned Saturday, but the date of her sailing from the navy yard has not yet been settled.

Of the new Mayflower all the officers at the navy yard are proud as they feel she will be a fitting residence for the chief executive of the nation when social or naval regulations call upon him to fly his flag afloat. In designing such a palace for use by the president, the United States departs somewhat from the old lines of Jeffersonian simplicity and takes her place with the other world powers in the matter of naval luxury. Neither the Hohenzollern nor any of the other royal yachts has state rooms and saloons more beautiful or costly than those of the president's yacht.

In the four weeks just passed the Mayflower has been refitted and refurnished completely from stem to stern. The president's quarters are situated aft, on the main deck, and include six state rooms for the exclusive use of himself, Mrs. Roosevelt and their children. The two larger official state rooms have been very lavishly furnished. Special attention has been given to the decoration of the bulkheads and the panelling, which are covered with expensive silk in many colors.

The smoking room occupies the after portion of the spar deck, and is finished in teak, with a floor of fancy woods, inlaid in mosaic and waxed.

Many cane chairs and sofas add to the comfort to be had in this room.

Behind the officers' quarters, below the main deck, is the president's dining saloon. It extends the width of the ship, and is furnished in white and gold, Louis XIV style.

Running aft is the companionway to the president's reception room. Some of the panels along this companionway are made of valenciennes lace, painted over with a silver paint to represent steel. In the reception room the white and gold effect is still carried out.

Leading down to the berth deck aft is a magnificent mahogany stairway, that gives entrance to the president's private suite. Theer are two large state rooms, four smaller ones, and two bath rooms. On the port side, just outside the president's room, is his private bath. The tub is cut from a solid block of fine marble.

Besides the arrangements made for the comfort of the president and his family in the living and sleeping apartments aboard, extensive plans were made to give him the benefit of the most improved culinary and sanitary contrivances. There is a large refrigerating plant in the forward part of the vessel, near the dining saloon. Nothing has been left undone to make the Mayflower a fit habitation for the ruler of a wealthy nation.

Before the Spanish-American war the Mayflower was the property of Mrs. Ogden Goelet. It had been built for her husband, on the Clyde, at a cost of $800,000. When Mr. Goelet died his widow at one time contemplated selling the yacht to the king of the Belgians. At the outbreak of the war the Mayflower was bought as a torpedo boat destroyer at a cost of $450,000. The vessel is 321 feet over all, 275 feet on the water line.

When Governor Allen was sent to Rico he was given the Mayflower, after seh had been outfitted at considerable expense as his official yacht. The Mayflower, which now replaces the Dolphin, is under command of Lieut. Commander Albert Gleaves.

COUNTERFEITERS' DEN FOUND

Chicago, June 30.—In a long-abandoned counterfeiters' den at Van Buren and Halstead streets $15,000 in bogus coin and currency and a complete counterfeiters' outfit, including plates for making $1000 bills, have been found in a secret vault. The discovery was made by workmen engaged in tearing out the interior of a building, and caused a sensation in the neighborhood. A detail of police was called to prevent a mob of hundreds of people from looting the chamber of its spurious wealth. According to Capt. Porter of the United States secret service, the money was cleverly coined and printed and would defy detection by most experts.

TWO KILLED BY LIGHTNING

Denver, June 30.—George Sperling, of Graham, Mo., and George Bates, of San Francisco, were instantly killed by a bolt of lightning on a ranch four miles north of Arvada. The foreman of the ranch was about to call them to dinner, when the lightning struck them. When he recovered from the shock he rushed to the two men to find them frightfully charred and dead. Both men were strangers in Colorado.

INVITATION

Extended to Miners to Return to Their Work.

Hazelton, Pa., June 30.—Copies of the following notice were distributed among the striking miners at Harwood colliery this morning:

"With a view of ending what we deem a hopeless and uncalled for strike, an opportunity of resuming work at our Harwood colliery is hereby offered to our employes. Let every inside man who wants to begin work quietly notify the general inside foreman and let every outside man notify the outside foreman. When a majority of our adult inside and outside men signify their desire to begin work this colliery will be started. Foremen will not take the names of those applying for work. (Signed.) "PARDEE & CO."

Several hundred strikers stationed along the roads leading to the Dritton colliery of Coxe Bros & Co. this morning turned back all men who reported for work with the exception of the clerks and the passenger crews of the Delaware, Susquehanna & Schuylkill railroad. The strikers and the Coxe deputies came together on the Freeland borough line. When Sheriff Jacobs arrived the men dispersed.

OLYMPIAN GAMES.

Chicago Men Go Abroad to Interest Foreigners.

New York, June 30.—Henry J. Thurber, Jr., of Chicago, president of the International Olympian Games association, is in the city on his way to Europe where he hopes to interest the representatives of leading nations in the exhibition which is to be held in Chicago in 1904, under the auspices of the organization of which he is the executive head. He is accompanied by Judge John Henry Payne, Laverne W. Noyes and Benjamin Rosenthal, members of the board of directors.

"Through the courtesy of the president and the secretary of state he have," said Mr. Thurber, "letters to the ambassadors and other diplomatic representatives of the United States abroad, which will no doubt be of assistance to us in interesting foreign governments in the military feature of the exhibition. While in Europe we shall try to see high officials of Germany, France, Great Britain, Belgium and Italy."

GERMAN-AMERICAN

Teachers Hold Thirty-Second Annual Convention.

Detroit, June 30.—The thirty-second convention of the National association of German-American teachers is now in session in Detroit. This evening at Harmonie hall, addresses of welcome will be made by Mayor Maybury, Carl E. Schmidt, Superintendent W. C. Martindale, of the Detroit public schools, and President E. H. Marschner, of the school board. It is expected that between 200 and 300 members will be in attendance and an extensive program has been prepared. The convention will last four days.

WATCHMAN KILLED

While Trying to Rescue Man From Train.

Cleveland, June 30.—The badly mangled remains of two men were found early today at the Hoyt street crossing of the Lake Shore road. Subsequently one of the bodies was identified as that of James Swafield, the watchman at the crossing. It is supposed that he attempted to rescue the other man from an approaching train which struck and killed both.

WAS LIL'S SECRETARY.

Colorado Springs, Co., June 30.—Francis M. English, killed in the Colorado Midland wreck at Cascade yesterday, was private secretary to Queen Lilluokalani, of Hawaii, and was the author of the famous proclamation to the American people issued just before she was dethroned. Mr. English was a graduate of Oxford and had practiced law both in England and in Colorado.

LOSS IS OVER A MILLION

Damage By Storm of Wind and Rain In Illinois Will Reach a Large Sum---Loss Falls Mostly on Farmers.

St. Louis, June 30.—A low estimate placed on the damage wrought within a radius of 150 miles of Alton, Ill., by the storm of wind and rain that prevailed Saturday night and Sunday, is $1,000,000. While the farmers are the heaviest losers, the railroads suffered severely. In the American bottom farming district the farmers are ruined.

Wood river, a small and usually harmless stream, overflowed its banks early Sunday morning and the farmers in the vast expanse of bottomlands were forced to get into the upper stories of their homes to save their lives. Their homes were flooded.

After spending a night full of peril they watched the daylight come in only to see that their crops had been washed away.

The Reuter Bros., extensive farmers, residing near the banks of Wood river, three miles from Alton, suffered a loss of $10,000 and when the waters subside they may learn that their loss is twice that amount. This is only one instance.

Railroad traffic through the bottomlands is completely shut off, and will not be re-established before this evening, as the washouts are such that they cannot be easily or rapidly repaired.

Among other concerns that suffered is the big plant of the Western Cartridge company at East Alton. This was flooded, and President Olin this morning, states that his loss will be no less than $5000 and may be more.

Reports received this morning fromthe Piasa creek district say that the farmers in their frenzy to get their stock to a place of safety, neglected to save any of their shocked wheat and lost all.

ANNEXATION OF CUBA

Senator Elkins Gives Many Reasons Why Island of Cuba Should Become a Part of the United States.

Washington, June 30.—In the senate today Senator Elkins spoke on his bill looking to the annexation of Cuba.

Mr. Elkins said that his resolution had been misunderstood. It had no bearing upon Cuban reciprocity and was not intended to have any. It simply voiced in concerte form his judgment that Cuba ought to be annexed to the United States and the sooner the better for both countries. The resolution did not suggest annexation of Cuba in an offensive way. It provided that the Cubans must take the initiative and only after they had asked for annexation could the United States act.

For nearly a century, he said, the annexation of Cuba to the United States had been the ambition of American statesmen. He pointed out that many distinguished and patriotic American statesmen, from Jefferson to McKinley, had favored annexation, and he thought the present was an opportune time to "carry into effect the well defined wishes of a mapority of the people of Cuba and the United States. In regard to annexation. It is in the interest of both countries. The environments of Cuba, with the trials and difficulties that beset her on the threshold of her national life, stand in the way of her being long an independent nation; while as a state in the American Union, her people would be prosperous and progressive, and enjoy the liberty and all the blessings that would flow from being part of the best, greatest and freest government in the world.

"After annexation the products of Cuba would not come into hurtful competition with those of the United States. Free trade amongest the states has never lowered the price of labor or worked injury to American interests. Wherever our flag floats the price of labor advances.

"It is claimed that annexation would destroy the promising and growing beet sugar industry of the United States. Not so, however. The price of products among the states of the Union always seems an equilibrium. With proper protection in favor of the cane sugar of Cuba, which she will enjoy as a state and the beet sugar of the United States, within fifteen years, the United States would not only produce enough sugar for its own consumption, but largely compete with other countries in the markets of the world.

"Before the war with Spain, although so successful and glorious, Cuba would now be a part of the United States.

"Even with the war, had it not been for our declaration that the war was not waged for conquest or aggrandizement, known as the Teller amendment, Cuba would today be a part of the United States, just as Porto Rico and the Philippines are. This amendment has proved both mischievous and unwise.

"When Cuba shall become a part of the American Union and the Isthmian canal shall be completed which is now assured, Porto Rico, Cuba, Hawaii and the Philippines will be the outposts of the great republic, standing guard over American interests in the track of the world's commerce, to concentration and combination. Meteors go to the sun; small nations are becoming parts of great nations, and Cuba in her present environments, situated as she is, cannot be expected to resist this tendency.

"The effect of the Platt amendments will be to help to bring about annexation. A nation cannot long remain half free and half dependent. Such a condition embarrasses healthy progress in national life, and leaves but little room for the exercises of the genius and intelligence of a people in the affairs of government especially when under restrictions as these amendments impose.

"The question of annexation forces itself to the front and will claim from now on, the attention of the people of both countries. Reciprocity with Cuba affords an adequate remedy for what threatens her interests. A 20 per cent reduction in her tarif and our will do Cuba as a people or as a government, little or no good, while it will work great harm to the interests of the United States.

"There was long discussion and fierce opposition to the annexation of Texas—much more, I think, than there will be to the annexation of Cuba—but it came at last as surely as the annexation of Cuba will come. There is not a loyal and true American to be found within the confines of the republic who would give up Texas, and within a few years after Cuba becomes a state in our Union, not an American will be found willing to part with the island.

TRAGEDY OVER TWO DOLLARS

New York, June 30.—A controversy at Hempstead, L. I., between Felice Ravo and Joseph Carris over an unpaid bill amounting to $2, has been the cause of what probably will be a double tragedy. After a preliminary quarrel, the men met in the street, Ravo with a double barrel gun in his hands and Carris with a revolver. A few moments later Carris lay dead by the roadside, with gaping wounds in his breast and left side, while Ravo was shot twice. He probably will die.

SUFFERS MUCH PAIN

Dressing of King's Wound Taxes His Fortitude.

His Progress, However Continues Favorable.

London, June 30.—The following bulletin by the king's physicians was issued from Buckingham palace at 7 p. m.:

"The king has had a fairly comfortable day and the discomfort in the wound has been less."

London, June 30., 10:20 a. m.—The bulletin of the king's condition issued at Buckingham palace at 10 o'clock this morning says:

"His majesty has slept well. The dressing of the wound gives much distress, but there is no bad symptom of any kind."

The noticeable excitement during the past week outside Buckingham palace at the hours the bulletins were posted was entirely absent this morning. The sanguine impression created by the doctors' reports Saturday and Sunday was maintained by the salient phrase in this morning's bulletin, "no bad symptom of any kind."

At noon, the following official statement was given out at the palace:

"There is no cause for alarm in the distress caused by dressing the wound. This occurs at least twice daily. The wound, which is of considerable depth, is dressed from the bottom, as it is essential that it should heal from within outwards. The dressing causes his majesty considerabue pain, which he has borne with great fortitude. In fact, his majesty's courage and patience call for the greatest admiration. The king was much benefited by the change to the couch yesterday, on which he stayed for a few hours.

"The electric fans have proved of great value in keeping down the temperature of the apartment. The queen is in constant attendance in the sick room, but the utmost quiet is enforced. The king occasionally sees his children, but the interviews are of short duration. No matters of state or business are allowed to be submitted to the king, who is also debarred from reading his correspondence. Neither Drs. Laking, Barlow nor Treves has left the palace since the operation except for an occasional hour."

This statement was issued with the view of correcting the numerous unfounded stories published with circumstantial detail regarding what is alleged to transpire in the sick room.

The cheerfulness of the public is apparently shared by the members of the royal family. The prince of Wales went out riding this morning morning, and both he and princess witnessed from the palace windows, with evident interest, a march past of the guards.

The stock exchange reopened today with a very strong tone, on the satisfactory news regarding the king's condition. Consols rose seven-sixteenths. Other departments reflected the improved feeling.

STEAMER ON THE BEACH

The Oregon Is Ashore at Dutch Harbor With Eight Feet of Water In Her Hold--- May Be Saved.

San Francisco, June 30.—A special to the Examiner from San Francisco, Wash., says: The steamer Oregon is ashore at Dutch Harbor, with eight feet of water in her hold. On the voyage north the Oregon began leaking badly before she had passed Vancouver island and it was found necessary to keep pumps going constantly to keep her afloat. She reached Nome, however, with two feet of water in her hold and her machinery very badly out of repair.

As soon as the passengers and cargo were landed, Capt. Seeley started for St. Michael, where the vessel could be safely beached and repaired. After leaving Nome, the rudder post gave out, but temporary repairs were made.

As the leak had not increased and did not appear to be dangerous, Capt. Seeley decided he could reach Seattle in safety and did not stop at St. Michael. With the pumps going continually he found it impossible to keep the water down, and as it was gaining at a dangerous rate he was compelled to put into Dutch Harbor and beach her.

The Oregon had some south bound passengers aboard, but the number is not known. It is believed she can be saved.

PEACE AT CAPE HAYTIEN

The Little Ruction Between the Followers of Rival Presidential Candidates Seems to Be Ended For the Present.

Cape Haytien, June 30.—The street fighting here yesterday between the partisans of M. Firmin, the former minister of Hayti at Paris, and Gen. Alexis Nord, the minister of war of the provisional government, both of whom are candidates for the presidency, ceased at 7 o'clock yesterday evening. Admiral Killick, who had supported M. Firmin by landing marines and firing on Gen. Nord's followers, yesterday ordered the marines to return to their ship, which they did. They were accompanied on board by the partisans of M. Firmin. The admiral, who only used his small rapid fire guns yesterday, threatened to bombard Cape Haytien in earnest. Little damage was done by the bombardment of yesterday. Mr. Firmin's residence and the houses of his relatives have been completely pillaged.

The Haytien warship Creta Pierot, on which the foreign consuls, under the protection of their respective flags and M. Firmin sought refuge yesterday, is still in the roadstead. She is seeking to obtain a supply of coal so as to enable her to go to Port au Prince. Peace seems to have been re-established here.

GAME WARDENS ARE ACTIVE

St. Paul, June 30.—A special to the Dispatch from Madison, Wis., says: Whatever the deputy game wardens may have been doing in the way of advancing the political interests of Governor La Follette, the records show that they have also been doing business with illegal hunters and fishermen. During the year ended May 31 there was collected in fines and from sales of game and fish seized a total of $6637.70. How this compares with the previous year cannot be learned, as there are no records in the office to show it. It is estimated that loss to fishermen and hunters, of apparatus confiscated, will amount to $10,000.

BODIES OF LOVERS FOUND

Madison, Wis., June 30.—The body of L. George Lohr, of Milwaukee, who was drowned with his sweetheart and classmate, Miss Ida L. Hawley, in Lake Mendota two weeks ago last Wednesday evening, was found Sunday floating near Picnic point. Lohr and Miss Hawley were members of the graduating class of the state university, and were accidentally drowned while out pleasure riding in a rowboat. The night of the tragedy Lohr gave Miss Hawley a betrothal ring, and they had planned to be married soon. Miss Hawley's body was found last Thursday.

LANGTRY'S DAUGHTER WED

London, June 30.—Ian Z. Malcolm, M.P., and formerly assistant private secretary to Lord Salisbury, was married this afternoon to Miss Jeanne Langtry, daughter of Mrs. Langtry, the actress, at St. Margaret's church, Westminster.

SESSION DRAWS TO A CLOSE

Denver, June 30.—The tenth tri-ennial convention of the National Sunday School association opened the last day of the session with an address by C. H. Daniels, of Boston, one of the secretaries of the American board of foreign missions, on the subject of promoting intelligence and the spirit of giving in missionary work. He said that the greatest gifts to the world were the givers. A paper on the question as to what extent public school methods are applicable to Sunday school teaching, prepared by Professor Martin G. Braumbaugh, of Philadelphia, was read by Rev. H. F. Schauffler, D.D., of New York, because of the temporary illness of the author.

FORTY ARE JAGGED

That Number of Prisoners Form Monday Morning Court Bunch.

Half Are Drunks and Others Mostly Thieves and Vagrants.

Lizzie Buckley and Carrie Halvorson Show Up Together.

Forty prisoners were arraigned in police court this morning, breaking all records of recent years.

Frequently more than forty arraignments will occur within one day, but this morning the cases were disposed of within forty-eight minutes.

Judge Gearhart presided at this record-breaking session. Of the forty there were twenty drunken men. Others were in for larceny in various degrees, and still others were accused of vagrancy. A majority were given sentences of ten days' each at hard labor.

The stench in the court room that arose from the prisoners that were mostly whisky and beer soaked, caused a general rush for open air as soon as the arraignments were over.

Sixteen of the forty arrests were made on Sunday. Of this sixteen, however, comparatively few were for drunkenness. Most of the Sabbath day prisoners were vagrants and petty offenders.

An overly dressed dashing brunette was among those that occupied the box of sorrows. She earned the right to be known as a "dashing brunette" by the vivacious manner in which she sprinted away from Chief Troyer when he went to arrest her.

The woman is said to be very clever at pocket picking. Her victims are always men, and for the past four weeks she has baffled the attempts of the Duluth and Superior police that have tried to locate her.

Saturday afternoon a man hurried into the police headquarters and announced that his watch had been stolen. Chief Troyer recognized the work of the mysterious feminine pickpocket. She had struck up a flirtation with the victim, got him into a room, flirted with him a little more, made an excuse to leave the room, and shortly afterward the watch was missed.

The chief and the man robbed met the pickpocket on West First street, near Lake avenue. The woman made a desperate sprint to get away, but got tangled up in the number of small dwellings along the alley and the chief caught her.

At the station the woman first claimed that she was Miss Mabel Moore. Later she confessed to Mrs. Maud Farrell, and still later pleaded guilty to Mrs. Fred Beaumont, of Sioux City. The police are not yet acquainted with the total of her operations. About the first of the current month the woman appeared on the Bowery, flirted with Fred Gould, and removed his watch from his pocket. She got away.

Over in West Superior where there is no wine room ordinance the woman had easy work in the various low resorts. She would entice a victim into a stall, and, while drinking with him, take all the money in sight.

One man lost $70 and another $18 in this way. The woman was so clever that she even dodged her own husband, who was here from Sioux City looking for her, when she met him on the street. E. J. Farrell was arrested with Mrs. Beaumont, and is supposed to be an accomplice.

The examination of Mrs. Beaumont was set for next Saturday. Farrell was released shortly after her arraignment, as it was found impossible to secure substantial evidence against him.

Capt. Resche, of the police department, discovered that his watch was missing shortly after he accompanied Mrs. Beaumont to a photograph gallery this morning to have her "mugged" for the rogues' gallery. Later, however, he discovered the watch at home. The incident caused a great deal of amusement at headquarters.

John Murphy, a hold-up artist, was among the crowd of record-breaking stint-ute breakers. Yesterday Murphy met a Scandinavian named Abraham Torkelson. The bad man sized the foreigner up for a victim and induced him to leave the Union depot and walk down along the harbor front. At Seventh avenue west he endeavored to put his hand in the trousers pocket of Torkelson and when the latter obected Murphy knocked him down and proceeded to go through him.

Special Officer Mike Ryan, of the Union Towing company, saw the hold-up and promptly took Murphy in custody.

Joseph Pavillian performed a stunt at lodging house prowling yesterday morning. That is why he will prowl about the rock piles for the next thirty days.

Pavillian entered the Columbia lodging house, on the Bowery, yesterday morning. Later he was discovered in the room of John James and Willam Gorman. Although the men had $150 in their pockets the prowler only got $5.37. It was for stealing this that he was sentenced this morning.

* * *

Hugh Ross, a driver for the Schlitz Brewing company, was arrested for stealing ten bottles of fine wine from Oscar Fiver's saloon. Ross, in going into the saloons on his route to collect empty bottles, would slip a few bottles of wine into the beer case and get away with it. His fondness for treating friends with wine led to his apprehension. The case will be heard in court on July 8.

Lizzie Buckley and Carrie Halverson, both of whom have been struggling strenuously to be arrested more times that the other, were in court together this morning. Both made extensive preparations to do their worst in the way of moisture when the judge should impose a sentence of ninety days, but when the court announced only ten days, both looked pleasantly surprised.

Out on the passage of sighs on her way back to jail Carrie Halverson became very girlish and giggled lilthesomely as she said:

"Girls, think of it. Only ten days and I had my mind made up for sixty at least. O, I wonder if the judge would let me kiss him if I'd go back!

"Ten days?" giggled Lizzie Buckley. "that's the lightest I've had in ten years. Say, I can be arrested again on July 9, can't I?"

Ole Renning and Reuer Ladden were in court for falling through a window at 27 East Superior street. The men were fighting Saturday night and the window suffered the most. Their cases were not disposed of till late in the day.

Indian School Children.

A carload of bright, clean, happy-looking Indian children came in on the Iron Range train from the Indian school on the Sucker Point reservation near Tower. Many of them were met by relatives and friends at the depot, but the majority were destined for points in Wisconsin and elsewhere, and were carefully tended by some of the school officials who came down with them for that purpose. The children were of all ages and sizes. The boys were dressed in neat uniforms and the girls wore black dresses for the most part. They will enjoy a two months' vacation before returning to the school. They chattered away like any other children,and it was noticeable that they all spoke the English language, not a word of Chippewa being heard in the crowd.

Oatka Bicycle Path.

At the council meeting this evening Alderman Neff of the Fourth ward will introduce a resolution calling on an engineer's estimate of the cost of building a bicycle path down Minnesota Point from the ship canal to Oatka beach.

Mr. Neff is finding many strong supporters of this scheme, but there are many that would like to see a sort of speedway built for fast driving and automobile work as well as bicycle exercise.

MINERS STRIKE

More Than Two Hundred Men Out at Sparta.

Sheriff Sargent May Be Asked to Protect Property.

The Strikers Demand Increase In Wages--- Are Orderly.

More than 200 miners are out on a strike at Sparta today.

Effort will be made to resume work at the Sparta and Malta mines tomorrow morning.

There are constant rumors of trouble in case this effort is made, and the sheriff's office has been called on for protection.

Under the new state law governing the sheriff's office, the hiring of deputies is prohibited except in cases of actual necessity, and Sheriff Sargent has dispatched one of his deputies to the scene of trouble to make an investigation.

Should there be occasion for interference, it is said that everything will be in readiness to send a sufficient force to Sparta to preserve order, but at a late hour this afternoon there did not appear to be any actual call for outside interference.

The striking miners are mostly Finlanders." At the Sparta mine they went out on a strike Saturday, asking for $2 a day instead of $1.75. The Malta miners followed the Sparta workers this morning, and today the mines are shut down completely.

Early this morning there was considerable excitement among the miners and citizens. A report gained wide currency that 200 Italians were on the way up from this city to take the places of the strikers.

The Finlanders organized and marched to the Duluth & Iron Range depot in a body, but not an Italian got off, nor were there any on the train to take the places of the miners.

Reports from Sparta today indicate that the strikers are orderly. Many of them have been drinking, but not to excess. In Duluth there was a report of a street fight, but this is denied at Sparta on the best authority.

Despite the quiet today all are waiting anxiously for tomorrow morning to see if the operators really do intend to start the mines. In case men are secured to take the places of the striking Finlanders there may be a little trouble, but no serious disturbance is looked for.

WALKED OUT.

Union Pacific Machinists at Omaha Leave Their Work.

Omaha, June 30.—The order authorizing a strike of all machinists on the Union Pacific system went into effect at 10 a. m. today. There were few men left to walk out in Omaha and Council Bluffs, however, the machine shops having been closed down Friday night. Nobody except the machinists knew at what hour the walk-out would occur, and railway officials were kept in suspense until work stopped. No reports from the outside had been received in Omaha up to noon, but it is understood that the order from the executive board merely authorized the strike and that a vote would be taken by the local organization beforet he walk-out occurred. In Omaha the preliminary step had been taken.

There are about 1700 men affected by the strike.

AT WEST DULUTH

The baseball game between the West Duluth Leading Stars and the Hubs was not finished yesterday. After the pitcher had twisted himself up a half dozen times and unwound, and the coachers were beginning to get hoarse, Rev. Harry W. Knowles wandered around and threw up his hands in horror. A few minutes later Mounted Policeman Woods rode down to the grounds and stopped the game, a complaint having been telephoned in to the chief of police.

WILL LOCK THE DOORS.

There is a woman living in West Duluth whose boast has always been that she was not afraid of burglars ever entering her house, and consequently she always left the doors unlocked. But it is safe to say that after a little experience she had the other night she will be more careful in the future and provide half a dozen Yale locks. She had gone to bed without locking the house, when she was awakened during the night by someone moving around and carrying a light. Thinking it was one of the family, she asked what was the matter, and upon receiving no reply, realized the true state of affairs and screamed for help at the top of her voice. But the midnight visitor rushed out of the rear door and escaped.

Two suspicious-looking characters have been seen around this part of the town recently, and the police think that one of them may have been the would-be burglar.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The Fourth of July celebration still looms up before all else, and those in charge say that the only thing they lack to make it the most successful affair of the kind ever held in West Duluth is a clear day.

George J. Mallory has gone to St. Paul, where he will attend the Republican state convention tomorrow.

The blast furnace had a force of men at work yesterday blasting. They are rushing the work as rapidly as possible, and it is thought that the furnace will be in full operation within six weeks.

Mrs. Joseph Doe left for Brainerd today, where she will visit relatives.

Misses Mable and Maude Wallace leave tomorrow for Carlton, where they will visit.

The White Star Colored club will have a picnic on July 10, leaving for Zenith park on the steamer Mary Mann.

Miss Fanny Wright, who has been employed at the West Duluth laundry as bookkeeper for the last eight years, has resigned her position and will leave for California shortly on account of her health.

The West Superior Red Men's picnic, which will take place at Zenith Park, July 27, promises to be the largest one ever held at that place.

Frank Lynch has gone to Scanlon, where he will occupy a position as telegraph operator for the Northern Pacific.

Miss Esther C. Murray, of 428 West Fifty-seventh avenue, returned Friday morning on the steamer America from Port Arthur, Isle Royale and Schroeder, Minn.

W. J. McClellan, of Brainerd, is visiting Pat Haley.

Charles Wright leaves tomorrow for the range, where he will work on a government survey.

Miss Mary Holmes has returned to her home in Riceville, Iowa, after a ten-weeks' visit with her sister, Mrs. H. R. Patterson

Miss Roseanna Viger, of Eveleth, is visiting Misses Laura and Katie Bethune, of Fifty-eighth avenue.

John D. Connor, of Barnum, was at the Phillips yesterday.

Emil Hultberg, of Rockford, Ill., is in town.

Rev. John Earl has gone to his home in Granite Falls for a short visit.

The Fairmount baseball team yesterday, defeated the Smithville team by a score of 14 to 13. It was a very close game and lots of good work was done.

Lucien Merritt has returned from Ely.

See our new goods and new prices in summer dress goods. Hendricks' Dry Goods company.

E. M. Marity, of Paoli, Ind., is in West Duluth.

Charles Lovelace is back from a week's visit in Chicago.

Miss Brophy and Mrs. Hugh Blaine have returned from St. Paul.

Miss Dormandy, of St. Paul, is visiting at J. H. Schuyler's.

E. F. Eagirerum, of Fort Wayne, Ind., is in town.

Joseph Bresor left for Osceola, Mich., for a short visit this morning.

Miss Virginia Ross and little sister, Edna, left for a visit to Ottawa, Ont., yesterday.

The steamer Mary Mann, from now till the Fourth, makes regular trips to Zenith Park. Campers or picnic parties can be accommodated at surrounding points. Fare to park, 10 cents.

Special suit sale this week in men's and boys' suits, men's furnishings, ladies', men's and children's shoes. Hendricks' Dry Goods company.

CROPS RUINED.

Storm Does Great Damage at Danville, Ill.

Danville, Ill., June 30.—A heavy rain and wind Saturday night and Sunday have ruined the oat crop and seriously damaged wheat and corn. The lowlands are several feet under water, and crops destroyed. The Vermilion river is out of its banks and higher than for thirty years. All crops on bottom lands are practically ruined, and fences, small buildings and considerable live stock have been carried away. No estimate of the amount of damage can yet be made.

PROHIBITIONISTS

Of Illinois Gather at Peoria Convention.

Peoria, Ill., June 30.—The prohibitionists are gathering today in large numbers for the annual state convention which opens here this evening. Among the leaders here are Hale Johnson, Chicago, who is chairman; Hon. H. D. Patton, of Pennsylvania; Oliver W. Stewart, chairman national committee, and John G. Woolley. The nomination of officers will not take place until Wednesday afternoon. A lively fight is predicted on the adoption of a platform.

STEAMERS ARE SAFE.

Port Townsend, Wash., June 30.—The steamer Centennial, reported this morning, bringing news of the safety of the steamers Jennie and Portland.

HIS DEBTS WORRIED HIM.

Cripple Creek, Col., June 30.—Ernest M. Gray, aged about 35 years, son of Dr. George W. Gray, a well known physician and surgeon of Washington, committed suicide by shooting himself in the breast with a revolver. Despondency because of inability to pay his debts was the cause.

Extremely Destitute.

County Superintendent of the Poor A. P. Cook had an unusual case of extreme destitution brought to his notice today. George Blackbird lives on Twentieth avenue west and Seventh street. He has a wife and seven children, whom he has hitherto provided for in reasonable comfort. Recently he had the misfortune to lose part of his right hand, and later on his wife was taken sick. He could not hire any help, so he had to leave his work to care for his sick wife and his children. It was not long before destitution stared him in the face, and finally he was compelled to apply for county relief. Superintendent Cook gave him temporary assistance, and expressed the opinion that this was a case where private as well as public charity could not be misapplied.

Blue Serge Suits

and Straw Hats.

They go together —and you'll find them here side by side.

Our young men's Serge Suits have a dash to them that your rarely find in ready-made clothes. But looks isn't all. The real test of the suit is in the wear; the wear of the fit. And a great many points must be covered in the making of a Suit of clothes, whether it's serge, cheviot or worsted, before it can fulfil the latter promise.

Perhaps the most comfortable feeling a man has when he buys of Burrows is that there is no more worrying to be done about the cloth or fit. Every expert tailor knowledge has been brought to bear upon that suit.

Men's Serge Suits $8.75 to $15.

SIDES WITH MONAGHAN.

Supervising Inspector Sloane Orders the Investiga ion.

Supervising Inspector Sloane, of Dubuque, Iowa, has sustained Inspector Monaghan in the case of H. G. Inman against a number of striking tugmen. Mr. Inman some time ago filed complaint against the striking tugmen, asking that their licenses be revoked and the case was set for hearing last Wednesday. At that time the plaintiffs asked that the case be continued until the following week as their counsel was unable to be present at that time. The defendants on the other hand wanted the trial to go on at once or be continued until navigation closed, about Dec. 1.

On the question of postponement the local inspectors disagreed. Inspector Chalk was for postponing it until December, while Inspector Monahagan wished it to come off as soon as possible. He did not think the delay asked by the plaintiffs an unreasonable one.

A statement of the way the case stood was sent to Supervising Inspector Sloane, who decided that the hearing shall take place next week.

WAS NO BRIBERY.

Washington, June 30.—The Democratic members of the special committee investigating charges of bribery, etc., in connection with the Danish West Indies purchase, have decided not to make a minority report, and the report of the committee will be unanimous that there will be no bribery. The committee will give the report out today.

TO HAVE BALL TEAM

Manager Van Praagh Decides to Put One In Field.

Has the Support of Business Men In the Move.

Do Not Want a Superior Team Covering Duluth Field.

Duluth will have a baseball team in spite of the cold water thrown on it early in the season. When the baseball season began, Duluth lovers of the national sport were jubilant over the team Manager Van Praagh was going to put into the field, but their expectations were unexpectedly knocked on the head by the action of the West End Civic Federation. They were for a time nonplused, but since then have been working quietly and steadily towards giving Duluth some good fast ball. Many of the excursionists who have visited here this summer remarked on the absence of ball here, and were much disappointed over the fact.

Now, however, Manager Van Praagh has got the support of a number of business men behind him, and announces that he will put a team in the field and se what can be done to stop it. His intention was to wait a little while longer before opening up the matter, but the announcement that Andy Porter's intention to supply both Superior and Duluth with baseball changed his decision.

"Duluth needs no help from the outside in baseball matters, and I think that if such action was taken it would seriously hurt the city's standing abroad," he says.

This announcement will be good news to the fans in Duluth, who had about given up the idea of ever seeing a baseball game again.

A PRESERVATIVE.

New Quality Discovered In Superior's Red Clay.

West Superior people claim that they have at last discovered a quality in the red clay that underlays that city that is not possessed in any other part of the country, and that is its power as a preservative. This morning Dr. Boyer, of this city, while testifying in the Mueller case as to the condition of the alleged remains of Mueller, after being buried in the red clay of the cemetery at Old Superior for a long time, told of the remarkable preservation of portions of the face and of the eyes of the decedent. The doctor stated that before he could make the examination for which he was called, he found it necessary to wash from the face and eyes a quantity of red clay mud that had formed over it. Now, West Superior people who heard the testimony, claim they have a new feature to put in the next Superior Annual as an inducement to people to go there and live —and die.

WRIGHT ARRAIGNED.

Is Charged With Stealing Money Order Blanks.

St. Paul, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edgar G. Wright, recently indicted by the federal grand jury on the charge of stealing money order blanks from the postoffice at Oxford, Wis., was arraigned before Court Commissioner Spencer today and entered a plea of not guilty. The amount of his bail was fixed at $2000, in default of which he was committed to the county ail. His trial was continued to the January term of the federal district court.

Wright was brought to St. Paul yesterday from Fargo, where he was arrested a week ago. He is looked upon as the chief instigator of the conspiracy to defraud the government, for which crime Dwight Carpenter and Grant Frazier are now serving penal sentences at Stillwater.

To Be Had Nearer Home.

Duluthians that have been traveling from 75 to 200 miles for good trout fishing might learn something to their advantage by calling on a certain prominent real estate man of this city. He went out yesterday morning, walked up the west branch of Lester river, over to the Howard mill, striking the stream above Colbyville. From there he fished down to the rustic bridge and caught forty as nice trout as ever seen in Duluth.

Not long ago a party of Duluth men went fishing over in Wisconsin. When they got home they did a little figuring and found that each trout cost them about $2.75.

MARVELLOUS PIANISTS.

Schramm Children Delight Several of the Musicians.

Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Simonds, a number of the musicians of the city gathered to hear Paloma and Karla Schramm, the young pianists, who will be heard tomorrow evening at Pilgrim Congregational church. Those who heard these remarkable children were Mrs. Emil Schmied, Mrs. Wilson G. Crosby, Ernest Lachmund, Miss Cornelie Smith and Miss Holmes and they were delighted and astounded at the marvellous talent displayed by these young artists. Mrs. Schmied submitted a theme, a little Swiss melody of her own, and Paloma improvised from it with such brilliant effect as to win Mrs. Schmied's warmest praises.

LEFT ON CALENDAR

Of Congress Will Be Several Measures of Importance.

Omnibus Statehood Bill Likely to Pass Next Session.

Dietrich's Dinner to Celebrate Passage of Immigration Bill.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Several important measures will be left on the calendar when congress adjourns. Among these are bills which will go over largely because of political reasons. Among them are the omnibus statehood bill admitting New Mexico, Arizona and Oklahoma to the Union as states; the ship subsidy bill, which has been discussed in and out of congress for several years; the immigration bill; the bill providing for the popular election of senators, and the bil changing the date of the inauguration from March 4 to some date in April. At least three of these measures will be disposed of early in the next session. An agreement for the consideration of the statehood bill was reached last week, and Senator Quay and other advocates of the statehood proposition are confident that that measure will be passed by the senate by a large majority. There was no opposition to it when the vote was taken on it in the house, and the statehood senators are inclined to the belief that when the vote is taken in the senate much of the opposition that has manifested itself in that body at this session will have passed away. Many senators on both sides of the chamber take the broad view that the statehood bill should not be considered as a partisan measure, and that if they are eligible for admission as states the territories should be admitted without regard to what will be their political affiliations in the future. Since the agreement on the bill in the senate a few days ago there is no pronounced sentiment among the Republicans against statehood, and as the Democrats are all in favor of it there seems to be some basis for the assertion of the statehood advocates that the bill will go through without serious opposition.

The ship subsidy bill was dropped after an agreement among the Republican leaders, who decided that a subsidy law enacted by this congress would not prove a very effective campaign document in the election of Republicans to the house next November. The agreement to postpone action on the subsidy proposition carried with it a tacit understanding that it was to be considered at the next session. The friends of the bill say they will pass it through the house with a large majority. No one seems to have any definite idea as to what will happen to the bill to elect senators by direct popular vote and the bill changing the date of the inauguration. Senator Hoar of Massachusetts is violently opposed to the former measure, and he led the fight against it so vigorously at this session that it was dropped. Senator Blackburn of Kentucky, who is foremost among the advocates of the popular election plan, has served notice on the senate that he will take an early opportunity at the next session to bring the bill before the senate. Mr. Blackburn professes to believe that he has behind him a majority, and he insists that the bill would have been voted upn long ago had not the dilatory tactics of the senate committee on privileges and elections withheld a report upon it. The immigration bill will also come up at the next session.

• • •

The dinner given by Senator Dietrich to celebrate the passage of the irrigation bill brought together a most congenial company of gentlemen, although theer were many widely diversified interests represented around the board. The fact that Senator Hanna was flanked on either side by Representatives Stark and Robinson, of Nebraska, was the subject of good-natured badinage after the speechmaking had begun. Neither of the gentlemen, however, seemed to care very much at the fun poked at them, and the Populist Stark and the Democrat Robinson availed themselves of the opportunity of meeting the chairman of the national Republican committee at close range. Could the followers of Stark and Robinson, of Nebraska, have seen these gentlemen hobnobbing with "The Prince of Darkness," in the person of Senator Hanna, they might have said that the Populist and Democratic parties had fallen under the blight of Hanna's presence and, as a matter of fact, the evening was notable for the absence of politics, except where, now and then, a gentleman would allude to the Philippine situation, and the guests of the senior senator from Nebraska availed themselves of the opportunity to properly celebrate the passage of so inportant a measure as the irrigation bill.

The evening was marked by a number of brilliant speeches, and Senator Dietrich showed himself in a new light by presiding over the dinner in a masterful manner, being quick at repartee and felicitous in the choice of his selections in introducing the several speakers. Senator Beveridge not only made a most brilliant speech, but told a very funny story in connection with the passage of the bill. He said that for several days previous to the passage of the measure he noticed Senator Hansbrough of North Dakota and Senator Dietrich holding continued conferences, and that the manner of the men indicated that something was about to happen. Not being particularly in their confidence, he awaited developments, and they came rather unexpectedly late one day when Senator Morgan was talking to an empty senate on the isthmian canal bill. There were but three or four senators within the sound of Mr. Morgan's voice, he having driven his Democratic colleagues into the cloak room, and the Republicans were attending to their committee work or meeting with conference committees.

Senator Dietrich, Senator Hansbrough and Senator Morgan, besides the presiding officer, Senator Frye, were all the senators in the chamber. Senator Morgan was about concluding his speech on the Nicaragua canal bill. Senator Beveridge at this time entered the chamber and looked over the deserted hall. The door of the cloak room had hardly closed upon Senator Beveridge when he saw Senator Hansbrough approach the presiding officer's desk and hold a short conversation with Senator Frye. Senator Frye nodded approvingly to whatever was said to him by Senator Hansbrough. Senator Morgan had reached the concluding sentences of his peroration when Senator Frye, the upresiding officer, asked Mr. Morgan to suspend for a moment, and he called Senator Dietrich to the chair. "I knew that something was about to happen," said Senator Beveridge, "and waited anxiously for developments." Senator Morgan concluded his speech. Senator Dietrich was in the chair, when Senator Hansbrough rose and said he desired unanimous consent to place a bill upon its passage that would excite no opposition. Senator Dietrich, in dulcet tones, said, "Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Dakota. The chair hears none. The clerk will report the bill." And the irrigation bill was reported to the senate. It was read, and before the opposition knew that the measure was up, the senator from Nebraska declared it passed, and that is how the irrigation act slipped through the senate in the face of a strong opposition. Then Senator Beveridge concluded by saying that "for ways that are dark and tricks that are vain, the senators from Nebraska and North Dakota are peculiar, the same which I rise to maintain."

WAY BEHIND

Was Emperor's Yacht at Close of Race.

Kiel, June 30.—Emperor William steered his American-built schooner yacht Meteor across the finish line at 1:50 this afternoon two hours behind the Iduna, the empress' yacht, which, in the lightest of airs between flat calms, passed from the tail to the head of the fleet. The Lasda came in second.

The sailing committee got in at 4 o'clock and its members went to their homes without announcing results.

DISPUTE OVER WATER

Leads to a Tragedy at Manroria, Ala.

Huntsville, Ala., June 30.—Johnson Boyd was instantly killed and his wife slightly wounded as the result of a dispute over the use of water from a well at Manrovia, Ala.

Robert Johnson and Fred stephens came to Huntsville and surrendered. Stephens says he killed Boyd with a gun, and Mrs. Boyd received a pistol shot in the arms at the hands of Johnson.

A DEAL IN KIDS.

Leather Factories Will Form a Big Corporation.

New York, June 30.—Plans are being considered, according to the Herald's special dispatch from Philadelphia, for a consolidation of the glazed kid leather interests, including factories in Philadelphia, Wilmington, New York and Lynn, Mass. It is said a new corporation will be organized in a few weeks, with a capital of $50,000,000. There are about fifty factories in the proposed combination, and the yearly production exceeds $35,000,000.

NOT SUBSTANTIATED.

Collector Leach at Cleveland Will Be Reappointed.

Washington, June 30.—Postmaster General Payne, Senator Hanna and Civil Commissioner Garfield had a conference with the president today regarding the political charges made by Representative Burton, of Ohio, and others, against Collector Leach, at Cleveland. The result of the conference was a conclusion that the charges against Leach and those mentioned in connection with him had not been substantiated and that the collector should be reappointed. This action may be taken today or tomorrow.

HAWK'S LOFTY HOME.

The city postoffice has a tenant who does not pay rent, but who has all the rights and privileges that come from undisputed possession, says the Washington Post. To be sure, he does not lodge there, but he takes his meals in the building and no doubt enjoys a pleasant, restful siesta afterward. Moreover there is no law to evict him.

This usurper is a large hawk, and if several persons of hitherto undisputed veracity, including one of the watchmen, are to be believed, he has some very bad habits. The watchman of the tower says that for three years this hawk has paid a visit to the large chamber in the tower above the clock. He comes every other day, but regular as he is about the day, his hours are a trifle uncertain. The watchman thinks this is due to the fact that his methods of securing his meals render extreme punctuality out of the question.

Every other day the hawk wings his way to the postoffice tower and in his talons hangs a lifeless pigeon. The big bird of prey soars around and finally alights on the stone balustrade and hops over on the dooring of the big chamber, for the tower above the clock is much larger than it looks from the ground.

The hawk usually spends two or three hours in his dining room, and goes away to return two days later. It is supposed that he gets the pigeons—for it is always a pigeon—from the cotes near one of the markets, and owners who have been missing their pets may take warning accordingly. Winter and summer, rain or shine, for the past three years, the hawk has taken his meals in the postoffice tower. The watchman has been unable to trap the vagrant, and he is not allowed to shoot him, however much he has been attempted to do so. The remains of these feasts have given the janitor no end of trouble, for the feathered visitor is by no means punctilious in table etiquette.

SILBERSTEIN & BONDY CO.

Commencing Monday, July 7, and continuing throughout the summer, our store will close each evening at 5:30, excepting Saturday.

To Friends and Patrons of the Store:

We desire to formally announce that we have already let contracts for the enlargement of our present establishment—also the improvement and beautifying of our store throughout, so as to be better able to cater to our constantly growing business.

It is not our intention to become a department store—but rather stick closely to our present policy of carrying such lines as we have always carried—improving and enlarging upon them so as to make each and every department a separate and complete store in itself.

We realize full well that present-day methods of doing things are upon a larger scale and broader principle.

That a store, to succeed nowadays, must be alert to the interests of its patrons must be progressive and enterprising—must set out to do one thing and do it right.

All of these we have tried to do in the past—and shall continue to do in the future.

We shall continue to handle only such merchandise as will insure absolute satisfaction to our customers — standing back of every article—with our guarantee as to its reliability.

The store, as ever, will be your store, for without your good will and confidence we could not hope to succeed and keep on growing.

For the past we thank you—for the future we shall try and merit your kind words and patronage—as heretofore.

Sincerely,

Silberstein & Bondy Company

IN MICHIGAN.

Sons of Herman Will Visit Hancock In August.

Hancock—The grand lodge convention of the Sons of Hermann of Michigan will be held in Hancock Aug. 4. Arrangements are now being made by the local lodge to provide entertainment for about 200 delegates. The visiting Sons or Hermann will be taken to all points of interest in the copper country with visits to the stamp mills at Lake Linden, the smelts at Dollar bay and the mines at Calumet. Several excursions will be run here Aug. 3 and all the railroads will offer reduced rates to Hancock for the meeting.

Houghton—The coroner's jury impaneled to investigate the death of Cyrille Bolwin, who was killed in a street car accident last Saturday, has returned a verdict to the effect that the collision was due to the excessive speed at which the trolley car was run. Witnesses who testified swore that the car was driven at sixteen miles and hour at the least and that the motorman did nothing to avert the collision. The street railway company it is understood is secretly trying to compromise with Bolwin's widow and with Andrew Gaffney, who also was seriously injured.

Miss Addie L. Weir, of Houghton, and Charles D. Hahl, a graduate and instructor in the Michigan School of Mines, were married Thursday at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Weir, of Sheldon street. The newly wedded pair left for the home of the groom at Lima, Ohio, and will go thence to Pittsburg, Pa., where Mr. Hohl has accepted a fine position.

Lake Linden—While playing near their homes in South Lake Linden Thursday evening Lamer Donovan and Albert Melter, 14-year-old boys, were shot by some person whose identity has not been learned. The bullet came from across a ravine 300 feet away and inflicted a deep flesh wound in Melter's right hand, glancing thence and striking Donovan in the left hip. Dr. Fischer dressed the wounds which are not serious. This is not the first case of reckless shooting that has occurred in South Lake Linden.

Menominee—It has just leaked out that Miss Rowena Harmon, of this city, daughter of M. S. Harmon, cashier of the Lumberman's National bank, was married to A. H. Taylor, professor of physics at the Michigan State Agricultural college at Lansing. Miss Harmon has been attending that institution for two years. She returned home for the summer vacation, and when it became known she had been married secretly, her friends were greatly surprised. Professor and Mrs. Taylor will spend the summer in Menominee, after which they will return to Lansing to live.

The grocery store of Pfankuch Bros. was burned Saturday morning at 3 o'clock. It was insured for $1000 and the loss is estimated at about $2000.

Iron Mountain—Micolo Pedrotti, an Italian miner, 21 years old, was buried in the Vulcan mine by a fall of ground.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sioux Falls—W. C. Gillen, the man who was supposed to have drowned himself Tuesday night, after cutting up three horses, gave himself up to the police. He had been hiding in an icehouse since the deed, and had a bad wound in his neck, just missing the jugular vein. He claims to have no remembrance of anything that has happened since Tuesday. He was covered with dried blood, and shows the effect of a long debauch. He is now in the county jail, and will be examined first for sanity, as it is generally believed he is insane.

Selby—The Republican county convention of Walworth county convened this week. The attendance indicated the total disruption of the Populistic and Democratic opposition in the county. Leading Populists and Democrats appeared and took part in the proceedings. The convention nominated for representative, H. D. de Mallgnon; treasurer, Philip Spiry; register of deeds, W. E. Hoffman; auditor, George W. Ryan; state's attorney, W. B. Burr; county judge, W. H. Burns; superintendnt of schools, John Bloebelheimer; assessor, Jacob Pleinis; sheriff, John A. Koch.

Redfield—Gorge Carmichael, a young Englishman residing at Faulkton, believes himself to be the heir of an English estate valued at half a million dollars, by the death of his guardian and uncle, Sir Charles Carmichael. The English attorneys representing the Carmichael estate have notified the young man of the death of Sir Charles, and he is now in correspondence with them to learn the exact status of the inheritance before returning to England.

Armour—The 2-year-old son of Henry Page wandered away from home to the railroad track and hid in some weeds. When the engine was about two rods away he rose up, but it was too late for the engineer to reverse the engine. The cow catcher struck the little fellow and threw him fifteen feet. One of his legs was broken and his head was bruised. This is the third accident in that immediate vicinity.

Huron—Arrangements have been made whereby William J. Bryan will be here on July 3 and will speak at the assembly grounds in the afternoon. Brigadier Gen. O. O. Howard, the hero of Gettysburg, and the last of the great generals of the Union army, will speak here on July 4. Both come under the direction of the Epworth assembly, which holds its annual session in Ashland park adjoining this city, beginning July 1 and continuing eight days.

Aberdeen—Judge McCoy has sentenced William H. Burt, of Riverside township, this county, to ten years' hard labor in the penitentiary at Sioux Falls for incest. Burt was tried and convicted of the crime early the present month, and sentence was delayed until this time in order to allow the defendant's attorneys ample time to prepare themselves for arguing a motion for a new trial. The arguments were made and the motion denied.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—A derailed freight train delayed the North Coast limited and the local passenger from St. Paul, at Muskoda, about twenty miles east of Fargo. The track was cleared up by midnight. Four cars were thrown off the track, but no one was injured.

DOINGS AT SALVADOR.

New York, June 30.—The government has granted $12,000 to the English railroad, says a Salvador City, Salvador, dispatch to the Herald. The sanitary condition of this city is excellent. All of the patients who were in the old hospital have been transferred to the new hospital, which was constructed with a modern equipment.

EFFECT OF ALCOHOL

Dr. A. F. Elmquist Discusses It at the Temperance Meeting.

The Song of Pabst and Cheer of Anheuser-Busch.

Are Quickly Carried to the Nation's New Possessions.

The third meeting in the series arranged by the Scandinavian Christian Temperance union for this year was held yesterday afternoon at Lincoln park. There was a good crowd present and a very interetsing program was given. Dr. A. F. Elmquist, pastor of Bethany Lutheran church, was the speaker of the afternoon. The program included several selections by the Orpheus Male choir, and the reading of a poem by Frank E. Londeen.

The address of Dr. Elmquist was on "The Temperance Laws of the United States." He said:

"Some years ago the first temperance education law was passed in America, through the untiring efforts of the Woman's Christian Temperance union. A temperance education map was prepared. On this map the temperance states were indicated as white and the others black. The last state to become white was Georgia, its transformation occurred in February of this year. These laws are very proper. The study of the dangerous effects of alcoholic drinks on body and soul must necessarily be a great factor in abolishing the terrible habit. The beneficent results of these laws are felt already among the American laboring men. To uphold and enforce the existing temperance laws ought to be the desire of every thinking man and woman in our country. King Alcohol's time ought soon to be over. It is easier to keep out of than get out of his grip. The saying goes that 'you run in debt, but creep out of it.' So you fall into drunkenness, and very few get up again. Educating the young in physiology and hygiene, with special reference to narcotics and stimulants, will help them from falling into an evil so overwhelmingly difficult to get out of as drunkenness. The necessity of upholding the existing temperance education laws may be seen from looking at the dangers of alcoholism.

"Alcohol is today king over the whole earth. The sun never sets over his dominions. He travels in the vanguard of civilization—by some even believed to be a bearer and promoter of the same—to newly discovered islands of the seas. He comes with the sweet message of Pabst to longing natives of Hawaii, and with the cheer of Anheuser-Busch to the depressed and water-cured' Filipinos. The established governments have their regular forts, and recruiting officers are working very hard to get young men to fill the ranks of the fallen. There are no veterans; they never live through the battle, nor do they get old.

"Alcoholism is a sure, though taken normally, slow death. Morphine and opium act quicker, but not any more sure. While these drugs are kept in the apothecary, and only administered now and then, the slower, but equally deadly poison, is to be had by every man, and at all times. Would to God that alcohol worked death and destruction three generations sooner than it does! It is horrible to behold how the human family has been saturated by this poison. Dr. Legrain, chief physician in the hospital at Villa-Evra, delivered, on Sept. 14, 1896, an address on the social effects of alcoholism with reference to moral degenration and criminals. His conclusions were in brief the following: First, the effect of alcohol in the first generation is moral degeneration and excesses; second, foolishness, weakmindedness, insanity; third, hypochondria, melancholy, murder, suicide; fourth, animalism, weak memory, barrenness in males and females, and thereby family extermination.

"Dr. Legrain has followed the fate of 215 drunkard families through four generations, and comes to the following startling statement: Forty-two became moderate drinkers, 60 per cent degenerates, morally insane, with repeated convulsions; 19 per cent housed in insane asylums. One-third of all were barren. These are hard facts to behold. Still the young men plunge headlong into the cauldron of throw themselves as willing sacrifices under the wheels of this terrible juggernaut. Where is now a pure and unpoisoned generation? Who of us can vouch for but that our ancestors in the second or third generation back were topers? How many cannot remember a drunken father come reeling home late at night? The flowery frequenters in Duluth are 99 per cent of them in the third or fourth generation of drunkards. Socrates was right when meeting a drunken boy, he said, 'You are a little worse than a duplicate of your father.' The father may be a drunkard, but the son will become a worse drunkard. Our nation is, and is being, poisoned with alcohol, and the coming generations will be a race of idiots, epileptics, insane-ones, and one-third per cent will die prematurely, and the nation's spiritual and material power vanish, and its own annihilations among the nations of the earth will be complete. Looking over a ruined nation and asking for the perpetrator of such a heinous act, the answer comes: Alcohol did it.

"What then are the effects of intoxicants on the human body? Answer: Alcohol effects for the worse every organ of the body. The brain is weakened and as a consequence thereof the nerves and muscles cannot be properly controlled. The small brain is affected and its function in controlling speech and voluntary motions is paralyzed. The medulla oblongata controls respiration, circulation, swallowing, and is the life essence of the brain. When this organ is paralyzed, as it becomes through alcoholic drinks, death ensues. 'But then,' says someone, 'brandy is good for keeping up the physical heat when so needed.' This is a mistake. It has been demonstrated that soldiers can endure the hardships of marches and camp life, in all climates, in rain and sleet, heat and cold, much better when entirely without strong drinks. For travelers in the tropics and the polar regions alcohol has been found extremely dangerous. Alcohol hinders the elimination of worn out matter in the body an-- the consequence is some acute or chronic disease.

"Dr. H. Servus, of Berlin, says that the main cause of gout is always alcohol taken in one form or another, and 92 per cent of case- of Bright's disease are caused by wines and other alcoholic drinks. For children wine is a fatal poison. The great clinic Dr. Nothnagel, of Vienna, says: 'It is a terrible sin to give children whisky, beer or wine. Up to the age of 14 years a child should never taste wine, beer, tea or coffee. All these are stimulants unnecessary and extremely dangerous for children. It is a crime to suppose that wine nourishes, and it is childish for a physician still to claim that red wine strengthens more than the white. I hope, gentlemen, that you will be done with these childish things, and I repeat: Children need not these stimulants, they are dangerous for all of them, and I pray that you in your medical practice may withhold poisonous drinks from the children; for the terrible nervousness of our age is caused by this early use of alcoholic drinks.' It would be wise for our friends the M. D.'s of Duluth to take fair warning from the famous Austrian clinic.

"Yes, people think that wine and beer are nourishing. Dr. Justus von Liebig says: 'It can be shown with mathematical correctness that flour, as much as can be held on the point of a knife, when assimilated, makes as much blood as four measures of beer, and that a person drinking a measure of beer a day gets during the year as much actual nourishment as is found in a pound of bread.' It is stated by a clinic in Berlin that in Muenchen in South Germany, the greatest beer town in the country, not one man is found whose heart is not abnormally great and who does not suffer from fatty degeneration.

The expense of alcohol is enormous. It cost Germany in '89-'90, for brandy, 683,948,400 marks; for beer, 425,747,840 marks; wine, 235,289,960 marks.

"Ninety-nine per cent of sickness could be avoided but for alcoholic effects on the first to fourth generations. In the United States alone three thousand million dollars of miserable investments could be saved and hundreds of millions dollars of annual expenses saved. Whisky makes millions poor, a few rich; it ruins many a home and fills millions of graves prematurely with ruined men, heart broken women and death-inherited children. The archenaged alcohol has stricken the inhabitants of the land and who can and who will escape."

At the close of his address Dr. Elmquist brought to his hearers' attention a family in the West End which is in a destitute condition. The father's name is Charles F. Blackberg and he lost the larger portion of his right hand while in the employ of Hubbard & Vincent in their sawmill, Feb. 21, 1902. He has a family of six children. It was announced that those who wished to contribute could leave their names and money with Alfred Thoren, at 202 Twentieth avenue west, who has the subscription list for the family. Some took advantage of the opportunity to contribute to the cause at the close of the program.

GOLFERS

Warned of Closing of Entries For Amateur Championships.

New York, June 9.—Fair warning has been given to all the golfers who contemplate competing in the amateur championships that the entries will close sharp at 6 p. m. July 8, with M. Ballou, secretary of the United States Golf association.

There will be no practice, as heretofore, of waiting a day or so for straggling letters from distant parts of the country. Within an hour or two from the time the entries close the executive committee will meet and make the official pairings, as some of the committee will leave for Chicago the following day to superintend the arrangements for the great event.

In fact the majority of the Eastern golfers will leave about July 9 or 10 in order to become perfectly familiar with the course before the start is made in the qualifying round on the morning of July 15. Amateur Champion Walter J. Travis, arden City Golf club, who feels, since his defeat by young Reinhart at the Morris county tournament, that he has been over-golfed, will rest until he goes to Chicago.

COLONIAL CONFERENCE.

Premiers Hold a Preliminary Session In London.

London, June 30.—The colonial conference opened this morning in the secretary of state's room in the colonial office. The premiers of the self-governing colonies were present and the colonial secretary, Joseph Chamberlain, presided at the sitting, which was of a purely preliminary character.

The proceedings were private. After a two hours' session the conference adjourned to July 4.

The sitting was mostly occupied with Mr. Chamberlain's statement enunciating his views on commercial and political relations and imperial defense. No definite program has yet been arranged.

MANY RETURN.

Engineers and Pumpmen Apply For Positions.

Pittston, Pa., June 30.—All the striking engineers and pumpmen in this city, about thirty-five in number, reported for duty today. The majority of them were given employment, but a number were stood aside until the imported men now at work could be provided for in other directions. The firemen refused to join the movement.

In this district there are about forty engineers and pumpers still out, but it is believed that before the end of the week, they will all be back at work.

Piles always yield to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve. Cures skin diseases, all kinds of wounds. Accept no counterfeits. Max Wirth.

ANDRADE, VICE PRESIDENT.

New York, June 30.—Congress met in special session on Thursday for the purpost of electing a vice president of the republic, says a Guayaquil, Ecuador, dispatch to the Herald by way of Panama. The majority of votes were obtained by Senor Reina Andrade, a cousin of the late President Barrios, who was assassinated in 1898.

PHILADELPHIA SAILS.

New York, June 30.—The United States cruiser Philadelphia has left here north bound, says a Panama dispatch to the Herald. Governor Salnzar and Senors Gueritttez and Allaya made a farewell call on the cruiser. The Ranger, which is in port, will take the place of the Philadelphia. The British cruiser Amphion and the French cruiser Protet are still in port

MEETING OF PREMIERS.

New York, June 30.—The first meeting of the premiers of the self-governing colonies takes place today at the colonial office, cables the London correspondent of the Tribune, under the presidency of Colonial Secretary Chamberlain.

McCLOSKEY RELEASED.

Peoria, Ill., June 30.—President Packard of the Denver team announces positively this morning that Pitcher McCloskey has been released by Little Rock and that he will now play ball with the Denver team.

RESERVOIRS ARE FILLED.

Denver, June 30.—Reports from owners of reservoirs in Northern Colorado are that Saturday's heavy rain provided enough water to fill nearly all of them and insure enough water to make the crops certain in all except a few localities. The damage from hail was comparatively light.

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for fifteen years," says W. T. Sturdevant, of Merry Oaks, N. C. "After I had tried many doctors and medicines a friend persuaded me to try Kodol. It gave immediate relief. I can eat anything I want now and my digestion is good." Max Wirth.

$14.50 Golf Capes at $4.95

We have just purchased from an overloaded manufacturer an assortment of 121 beautiful Golf Capes.

The manufacturer needed the cash more than he needed capes, so we practically dictated prices.

The capes that we will sell at $7.50 are worth from $15 to $23.00.

Those to be sold at $4.95 are worth from $7 to $14.50—mostly $10 and $12 values.

There are 45 capes at $7.50—76 capes at $4.95.

They are new styles, made from finest imported Scotch Shawls—over 100 styles—almost everything conceivable in trimmings and plaid combinations. Also plain ones—hoods or without.

No wardrobe is complete without a golf cape. You need one almost daily in this climate. No one should start on a lake trip or an outing of any kind without one. They are so handy to have to throw over the shoulders when sitting on the veranda in the cool of the evening—they can be worn anywhere.

The sale commences tomorrow morning in the Cloak Department.

ZENOTA FLOUR GUARANTEED

MEN ARE SCARCE

Building Operations Hindered By Small Number of Mechanics.

Good W[illegible] Can Get [illegible]ings

[illegible]Are Also Some[illegible]nat Difficult to Get at Times.

Building operations in and around Duluth are being seriously delayed in many instances by the difficulty in obtaining materials and men. Not only is structural iron difficult to obtain, but strange to say, in this "wooden country," building timber is very scarce at present. Nearly all the heavier timbers used in the construction of large work comes from the Pacific coast, and so tremendous has been the demand that the supply is constantly short. The white pine of this section has become too valuable to make posts, joists and beams of and, therefore, the Washington fir has now almost entirely supplanted it for such uses.

But even with plenty of timber, more than one building is held up for want of structural steel. Contractors MacLeod & Smith, who is putting three new stories on the Panton & White building, have been bothered a good deal by delay in getting steel. The new Wolvin building is also delayed somewhat from the same cause, some pieces being missing, and although work is not at a standstill, it is not progressing as fast as desired.

Contractor Lounsberry has probably had the best luck of all on his St. Louis hotel contract. When he undertook to finish the work before the end of June the wise ones wagged their heads and said he would never do it. But he did do it, and now nothing remains to be done to the new sixty-room addition but to put on the fire escape and a few finishing touches of paint. The work was carried on under the superintendence of William Brink, of St. Paul, who never let the work lag day and night, wet or dry.

The lack of competent building mechanics is severely felt. Stone masons, bricklayers and plasterers are scarce. Even common laborers are none too plenty, while a skilled carpenter is an autocrat ust at present and can afford to put on airs if he so desires, but to their credit be it said very few of them do so.

A specimen instance of the difficulty in obtaining labor has been furnished at the public library building, around around which the debris of the condemned sidewalks lay for several days, an eyesore and a nuisance, simply because men and teams could not be obtained to load and cart away the rubbish. This scarcity of labor promises to increase rather than decrease, as the season of the annual exodus to the Western harvest fields approaches.

Heiser-Barrett Wedding.

At 5 o'clock this evening at the home of the bride in Minneapolis, William Barrett, formerly of Duluth, will be united in the bonds of holy matrimony to Miss Helen M. Heiser. Mr. Barrett is well known in this city, having been circulator for the News Tribune for several years. His brother, Cushman K. Barrett, of the News Tribune business force, left last night over the Great Northern for Minneapolis to be present at the ceremony.

KEEP WATCH.

Elks' Carnival Baloons Will Be Sent Up Tonight.

Tonight several new constellations will be added to the azure blue in the vicinity of Duluth. They will make their appearance promptly at 8 o'clock, will rise gracefully from the grounds until, caught by some favoring breeze, they will be carried hither and thither and finally sink again to Mother Earth. Twenty-five of these miniature planets will be sent up by the Elks of West Superior to advertise their magnificent midsummer carnival which is scheduled for the town across the bay for the week of July 7 to 12.

Each of these balloons have attached to it a ticket which, when presented at carnival headquarters in West Superior, entitles the holder to free admission to the carnival. It also gives a chance to draw a prize of considerable value.

The Elks intend to send up, all told, 120 of these balloons, and the first ascension, which occurred in Superior Wednesday evening, was a complete success. Big crowds of interested people thronged Tower avenue as they sailed higher and higher and finally floated out of sight. It was rather unfortunate that a strong wind was blowing from the north and the majority were carried many miles.

FOR QUEEN.

Pick Your Favorite For the Superior Elks' Carnival.

Duluth is to have an opportunity to choose the queen for the Elks' Midsummer carnival, which will be held at West Superior, beginning July 7. Ballot boxes have been installed and votes will be received at the following places:

M. S. Burrows.
Boyce's drug store.
Schiller's cigar store.
Swain's cigar store.

Votes will cost 10 cents each. Any woman, young or old, married or single, residing at the head of the lakes, is eligible to enter the list. To the victorious contestant will be given a magnificent diamond ring, valued at $200. The contest has just begun, and Duluth Elks declare their intention of capturing both the honor and the prize for some fair resident of the Zenith City. The Elks, carnival management expect that the natural rivalry between the two cities will add zest to this contest and incidentally, of course, bring in a handsome revenue.

Police Stop Sunday Ball Game---Saturday's Game.

What promised to be an exceptionally fast game between the West Duluth and Hub baseball teams, was cut short yesterday by Mounted Officer Wood, acting under instructions from the chief of police, who was acting on a request made by the West End Civic Federation.

There was much disappointment when the game was interrupted, but the players acknowledged the authority of the officer and left the grounds.

The Board of Trade defeated the Business University at Oneota Park Saturday afternoon.

The University infield went to pieces and gave Stockman such miserable support that he retired in the fifth inning. Stockman did good work, striking out nine of the first fifteen men that faced him. Lowe who succeeded him twirled a steady game and was given better support.

The Board of Trade team showed remarkable improvement in this game and bids fair to exceed the expectation of the fans. McDermott pitched a fast game for eight innings, but let down a little in the ninth. Gearhart and McCarthy put up a very pretty game.

The score by innings was:

Board of Trade	3 0 4 1 0 0 1 0 0—12
University	0 0 0 2 0 0 0 0 4—6

REDUCED TO ASHES

Mortgage Representing Debt of First Methodist Church Burned.

A Time of Great Rejoicing For Pastor and People.

Addresses By Rev. J. W. Powell, Dr. Forbes and Dr. Long.

Yesterday was a gala day for the First Methodist Episcopal church, and one that will mark an era in the annals of that institution, for last night, amid the eager silence of over 1000 people, a match was applied to the mortgage on which the last cent was paid Saturday, and the last trace of the church indebtedness reduced to ashes. It was a great day for the church and a great day for the people of the church.

The services commenced at 8 o'clock last night, but the large auditorium was filled to its utmost capacity long before that time.

Several letters of congratulation were read. They were from Rev. T. H. Cleland, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. C. H. Humanson, Rev. J. M. Thoburn and Rev. C. H. Stocking, former pastors. Another former pastor, Rev. Levi Gilbert, sent a telegram of congratulation.

The first speaker was Rev. J. W. Powell, of Lester Park Methodist Episcopal church. Dr. Long introduced him, saying that the Lester Park church could almost be called a child of the First Methodist church, and Rev. Powell began by saying that as children rejoice in the prosperity of their parents and their successes, he brought his heartfelt congratulations, together with those of his congregation, to those of the mother church, who have so nobly tought during the past two and a half years to bring the outcome of this night.

"Our church at Lester Park, a child of this, has always lived under the wing of this church, but not in the shadow of it.

"All the churches of the district have felt the shadow of debt on the mother church. A handicap on the one in front means the hindrance to the work of all. The lifting of this debt places you in a position to do great work, and takes the load off your shoulders so that you may move ahead faster, giving us a chance to work in a wider field, also.

"I have often wondered what preachers would do if all the churches were out of debt; if all the missionaries had sufficient funds to carry on their work; if every guild and society had plenty of money in its treasuries; if each congregation had a church that suited it. Whenever a minister goes to a new place the first thing he does is find out how much the church owes, and if it is out of debt he proceeds to make the people think they need a new one. But this financial work is the life of the spiritual work. It lies out the souls of the congregations, and you people of Duluth have been tried, and have proven true.

"You achieve at has been nothing less than marvelous, when you think of the hard times the people had less than ten years ago, in this city, where it costs so much to live, during a time when men are putting every cent they can lay their hands on into their business—when, in the face of all this, you have accomplished such a feat. I tell you it is wonderful, and you ought to receive the congratulations of every person in the city.

"But the paying of the debt is simply the last step in the preparation for the work. Think of the great forward movement this church can make, now that you have the equipment not only of a church, the like of which is seldom seen, but of a people who will and can give, and a pastor, who is a worker, tireless in this labor of love.

"So it is with sincere joy that I add the congratulations of my church and myself to the number already received upon this auspicious occasion."

Rev. Dr. Forbes, the presiding elder of this district, was the next speaker. He said:

"I think it was in 1869, at the First Methodist church conference I ever attended in the state of Minnesota, that I heard of the First Methodist Episcopal church, of Duluth. I think it was composed of three people, the pastor, Harvey Webb, his wife and another woman.

"I am delighted that we have reached this point in the history of the church. It is a great triumph. You are a great people to have accomplished it, and you have a great leader. More men fail through laziness in the Methodist ministry than through a lack of education. Dr. Long isn't lazy, and to his leadership is this triumph largely due. The freeing of this church from debt is of great importance to Duluth, where its good influence will be felt when the city has reached the size it is destined to be. And the day will come when Duluth will be far greater than has ever been pictured in the dreams of the most sanguine. Duluth will one day be the largest city in the state, and will have an industrial and financial basis as solid as the granite upon which its buildings are founded. We are here in the geographical center of America; we are here at the head of the lakes: everything is in our favor.

"I rejoice in the prosperity of all the churches. The Methodist Episcopal church has a magnificent future. Every church in the city is following your example. Asbury is out of debt, so is Oneota, and Grace owes but $1500, and Lester Park is out of debt. This financial revival means a spiritual revival.

"It is a great thing to have a church out of debt, and a great thing to have a people who can and will pay. I don't sympathize with a man who makes sacrifices to give to the church, for he will be repaid a thousand-fold. I wish the church had cost more, then our opportunities for giving would be more. Why, the church is the cheapest thing in the world in the end. I don't wish to oppress the poor, not at all. But there are men in this country who have so much money that they can't sleep nights thinking of it, and I'd relieve them of all above the sleeping point.

"We rejoice with our 800 people and all of the other people and churches in the city rejoice with you. May the eternal fires of light, truth, honesty and the belief in God ever burn on this altar, and may you hereafter enjoy the peace and prosperity which you have so well earned.

Watson S. Moore, the treasurer of the church, was the next speaker, and was greeted with the Chautauqua salute of the waving of a thousand handkerchiefs when he was introduced by Dr. Long. He stated that at the time of the dedication of the building, in February, 1893, there was a floating indebtedness of $128,000. Since then there has been paid $23,000 in interest. The last $16,000 of the mortgage was paid in at ten minutes of twelve Saturday morning.

There have been over 700 subscriptions towards the raising of the mortgage, amounting all the way from 25 cents to $15,000, the latter amount having been given by H. M. Bradley.

Dr. Long then spoke. It was a memorable occasion for everyone who heard him. There was probably not a happier man in the city last night than the man who has worked for the lifting of the church debt as he has. He spoke briefly, thanking the various societies of the church for the assistance and aid they had given, and told of some of the work the church does. During the past year he has received 278 people into the church on probation, of whom 176 have been received into full membership on confession of faith and 127 by letter. He has received 405 people during the three years and a half he has been here, and the church membership now amounts to 868.

The lights of the church were then turned down and there in the darkness broken only by the flickering of a match, stepped out H. M. Bradley with the mortgage in his hand. In a moment it was in ashes.

After the exercises the whole building again was lighted and thrown open to the visitors that they might see what the church is.

WAS HIS DAY.

Fulton Makes High Mark In Both Gun Club Events.

Fulton was high man at the shoot of the Central Gun club yesterday.

In the shoot for the Big Duluth diamond badge, he broke 24 clay pigeons out of a possible 25. Storey and Loud tied for second place, each breaking 22.

The scores of the ten contestants were as follows:

	Shot at.	Broke	Per Cent.
Fulton	25	24	96
Storey	25	22	88
Noisy	25	22	88
Nelson	25	21	84
Jackson	25	20	80
Cap	25	20	80
Field	25	19	76
Warren	25	19	76
Berry	25	18	72
Frank	25	10	40

Shooting from the scratch in the F. D. Day trophy handicap event Fulton duplicated the trick of breaking 24 out of a possible 25 and in 50 shots for the two events he only missed twice. The scores were as follows:

	Class.	Shot at.	Broke.	Per Cent.
Fulton	25	25	24	96
Field	23	25	21	91
Jackson	25	25	22	88
Storey	25	25	22	88
Clap	25	25	21	89
Berry	25	25	20	80
Noisy	25	25	20	80
Frank	21	25	17	80
Warren	25	25	18	76
Nelson	25	25	16	64
Jim	15	25	5	33.3

AMUSEMENTS.

PLENTY OF FEMALE STARS.

In the theatrical history of this country there never was a time when there were so many female stars as at present. Every season several new ones are added to the list while the old ones continue to grow in popularity. Conspicuous among the great favorites is Kathryn Kidder who will appear in her revival of "The Country Girl" at the Lyceum theater this evening. Miss Kidder has achieved many notable successes including "Madame Sans Gene," in her career, but her impersonation of Peggy, the fun-making heroine of "The Country Girl," is said to have excelled all her other hits. She is supported by a very strong company, including three of the best known names in the theatrical profession, Norman Hackett, Robert V. Ferguson and T. O. Hamilton.

"TWO LITTLE WAIFS."

"Two Little Waifs," the latest and best of Lincoln J. Carter's attractions, will be seen for the first time in this city at the Lyceum next Thursday. Stanley and Lolita Lamb are playing the difficult parts of the "Waifs," and adding additional laurels to their already enviable reputation as juvenile artists. The company is said to be the best Mr. Carter has ever sent on the road. New and beautiful scenery, electrical effects and mechanical devices assist a story filled with comedy, sentiment, surprises and tears. Beautiful souvenirs are presented to the ladies of the audience at every performance.

SAVED FROM AN AWFUL FATE.

"Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa. "I was so low after six months of severe sickness, caused by hay fever and asthma, that few thought I could get well, but I learned the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, used it and was completely cured." For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world, and is infallible for coughs, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. A. Abbett's drug store.

IMPROVING THE TRACK.

Northern Pacific to Better Fond du Lac Road.

The Northern Pacific company has made an outlay of considerable money this spring and summer in improving the tracks of its line betwen West Duluth and Fond du Lac. By some this is taken to mean that the company is making the improvements with a view of rebuilding in the near future the old St. Paul & Duluth track along the St. Louis river beyond Fond du Lac. While the old road has been torn up, the ties and rails removed and many of the bridges have either burned or fallen down, there is still miles and miles of good roadbed and the washouts which have occurred in several places since the road was discontinued, could be easily refilled. The telegraph lines which were in use when the road was used are still up and in service.

Thanks to The Herald.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Before leaving on my vacation I wish to thank you for your courtesy to me and the church of which I have the honor to be pastor. The entire church very gratefully appreciate the descriptive and historical articles you published two and a half years ago when the debt was raised, as well as the one that appeared on Saturday last. Yours respectfully

SAMUEL P. LONG,
Pastor First Methodist Episcopal Church.
Duluth, June 30.

Fishing on St. Louis.

St. Louis river was covered with fishermen yesterday from Spirit Lake to the rapids of the St. Louis river, but the fishing is reported not nearly so good as a week ago. The catch was mostly wall-eyed pike, some pickerel and a few catfish. Fishermen up the river are looking for the sturgeon season to open before long. Some big sturgeon have been taken from the upper river.

Did Large Business.

The excursion business was very good yesterday and all the boats carried crowds. The steamer Newsboy took two large crowds to Fond du Lac, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. There was also an excursion to Fond du Lac by rail yesterday and the place was crowded with visitors.

RAPID WORK.

Workmen Move 125 Miles of Track In a Day.

Mediapolis, Iowa, June 30.—Four hundred and forty men working nine hours in a driving rain moved both rails of the Burlington & Western road on 125 miles of track today and thus broke all records in converting a narrow into a broad gauge track. The event was witnessed by thousands of Iowans, who stood at every depot holding umbrellas to protect themselves from the drenching downpour. Twenty-eight crews of sixteen men each, working an average of four miles each, accomplished the feat without the abandonment of any regular Sunday train and without any serious delay. The work involved the drawing and driving of 200,000 spikes. Each rail was moved ten and a quarter inches to a row of spikes previously driven in the ties. All save four spikes in the inside had been previously driven, all those on the outside being unstirbed, and over these the rails were lifted to their broader gauge. The work was carried on simultaneously on lines from Mediapolis to Washington and from Wenfield to Oskaloosa. Trains loaded with gangs of men left Mediapolis, Washington and Oskaloosa on the narrow gauge and dropped the gangs four miles apart. Following the narrow gauge trains specials on the new brond gauge picked up the gangs and conveyed them to the starting point. All sidings were broadened at the same time.

One of the interesting features of the work was the feeding of the men, who were provided wi... 5000 sandwiches, 500 dozen hard boiled eggs and 180 gallons of coffee. The men were all experienced trackmen of the Burlington & Western and others borrowed from the Burlington & Rock Island systems.

"Laborers" In the Civil Service.

A good many men, and women also, who are in the employ of the government are classed under the head of laborers on the civil service books, while at the same time they have been doing the work of clerks. Maclay was one of these, being classed as a common laborer while at the time he held a clerkship of some importance at the Brooklyn navy yard. These men enter the service without the formality of examination and are a source of annoyance to the commission for the reason that they fill positions that should be opened to those in the classified service. President Proctor, of the civil service commission is desirous that the president should issue an executive order which will prevent this. He wants him to establish a system of registration and examination for laborers in the executive departments, and at the same time prohibit laborers from performing clerical work. He and the other commissioners, especially Mr. Foulke, have talked with the president repeatedly about this matter, and they believe that the prospects are good for early action being taken. The announcement that such a campaign is on causes a chill to travel up and down the spines of possibly hundreds of so-called laborers who are drawing pay from the government, but who have yet to do their first stroke of manual labor. There is no way of telling how many of these "laborers" there are in the departments, but for the past few years they have been about the only class of appointments open to politicians. The departments are filled with women who are doing clerical work of a high order and who are down on the rolls as laborers. The civil service commissioners do not object to the government getting the services of a good clerk at the pay of a cheap laborer, but they are opposed to the subterfuge that is resorted to. They say that the appropriations are made for laborers and that laborers ought to get the benefit of them. It is proposed to establish a system of registration, similar to that in effect at navy yards and in the engineer department of the army. Candidates for employment will be required to register, and state their qualifications from which ratings their capacity as workmen will be established. Commissioner Proctor says that all the department chiefs are in favor of this plan, although it will rob them of their last bit of patronage. The average cabinet officer will be glad when the time comes that he can say that he is absolutely without an appointment to bestow and the order proposed would fix the matter for him.

A New Gun But Out of Date.

The big 16-inch gun which has been constructed for the government is ready, and it is seven years out of date. It will be a back number before it is ever fired, and the army officers are not enthusiastic as to the results to be accomplished by it. It has been seven years in building and since it was started many things have been made in modern armament. If it were to be built today there would be many changes in its construction which would undoubtedly add greatly to its effectiveness. However it is all ready for trial and it is not well perhaps to say much until it has been given a chance. It is now at Watervliet and the government has been notified that it can be moved at any time. Owing to the immense weight of the gun, which is over 120 tons, it is found necessary to strengthen the wharf at Sandy Hook and as soon as this is done the rifle will be shipped from Watervliet. It is estimated that it will cost something like $60,000 to ascertain just what this gun can accomplish. One hundred rounds of ammunition have been ordered and are now at Sandy Hook waiting for trial. The gun may not be fired this many times, for it is expected that all its capabilities can be determined without wasting $60,000 worth of ammunition. Another thing to be avoided is the erosion of the barrel from the constant explosion of powder, and which would necessitate a new steel lining for the bore. All the department wants to find out is the range and speed velocity of projectiles fired from the big gun, and this will be determined by the muzzle energy. Huge sand embankments, backed up with tough wood and steel supports, will serve as targets for the 2400 pound projectiles. It is expected that the gun will show a muzzle energy of about 2300 feet per second. Some shells will be fired seaward, but when these tests are made care will be taken that the full range of the weapon is not attained. It is estimated that the 16-inch gun can throw a projectile from eighteen to twenty miles, and to let fly a ton of steel that distance from Sandy Hook would involve a large element of danger. To avoid smashing something off in the distance the elevation will be such that the shot will disappear in the water at a safe spot off from the shore. The trial will take place with the gun mounted on a temporary carriage, similar to that used when the Gathmann dynamite gun was tested. Later on it is expected that a disappearing carriage will be constructed for it. The construction of such a gun as this has cost an immense amount of money and it is certainly questionable whether smaller guns would not prove much more effective and save lots of money.

PREMATURE TALK.

The discussion at the present time of the Democratic candidate for 1904 is premature and can accomplish nothing. Many things may happen within the next two years that may change conditions so greatly that those now considered in the running and discussed as available timber for the presidential nomination may not even be mentioned when the national convention meets. Consequently it is mere waste of breath to discuss the matter at this time. As the Cincinnati Enquirer says, "we may be bumping nearly every day against the next Democratic nominee for president without knowing it." The Hills and Bryans and Clevelands may not cut much of a figure in 1904.

Who dreamed early in 1896 that William J. Bryan would be the nominee of the Chicago convention? How many supposed, even when the convention met, that the young orator from Nebraska would be the choice of the party? But the convention was carried away by a single speech, and one of the greatest campaigns in the history of the country followed. It is improbable that the next Democratic convention will be swept off its feet in a similar way, and yet who can now tell what may happen in 1904? The Democracy will need a man of very great strength to make a winning fight against Roosevelt, because the present indications are that he will be the Republican nominee, and his strength can not be questioned.

Before the campaign of 1896 opened, the Democratic party was in a very bad state. Its outlook was gloomy indeed. The Cleveland administration's mistakes and the hard times that had started towards the close of the Harrison administration and continued throughout the whole of the Cleveland administration had deprived the Democratic party of almost any hope of success in 1896. It cannot be denied that the nomination of Bryan infused fresh life into the party and changed the situation wonderfully. It is absurd to say that some other man than Bryan might have been elected as the Democratic nominee in 1896. What other Democrat could have secured the solid Populist vote, then very large, and brought to his support the large numbers of Republicans who deserted their party on the silver question? Bryan received more votes in 1896 than had ever been previously polled by a presidential candidate, and probably more than any other Democrat could have secured. Four years later the conditions had changed. The silver issue was no more. It was a dead question, but the Kansas City convention blundered by forcing it into the platform. Yet, neither in 1896 nor 1900 could William McKinley have been defeated by any Democratic candidate on any platform.

At the present time the outlook for a Democratic victory in 1904 is not bright. Yet, as previously said, there may be great changes in sentiment within two years. New questions may arise that will deprive Roosevelt of the advantage that he now possesses, and some man may come to the front for the Democratic nomination who will be the equal of the Republican candidate in personal strength. But the discussion of a candidate now is useless.

A PROPHECY'S EFFECT.

"King shall Edward be, but never shall he be crowned." Thus runs an old prophecy made about the time of King Edward's birth. "The king, near the months of May or June of this year will be in serious danger of his life." This prophecy was made Jan. 26 last by Chierlo, a widely-known palmist, at his Paris home. It is claimed he predicted the death of Queen Victoria six months before it occurred.

It is said that King Edward is sufficiently superstitious to be nervous about these prophecies, and that he frequently spoke to his friends concerning the prediction that he would be king but never be crowned. There were several reports during the past few months concerning the depressing effect of the prophecy on the king's mind. May not this mental influence have had a serious effect on the physical condition of the king?

This question naturally arises, in view of the growing belief in the power of the mind over the body, and the increasing use of mental suggestion in theraputics. It is considered probable that the depressing effect upon King Edward's mind of the deep impression created by the prophecy of his death caused a corresponding depression in his physical forces, which rendered him susceptible to an attack of diesase. Such an effect of mental depression and suggestion would be within the lines of present scientific opinion and information. If the king does not recover, or if he is never crowned, the prophecy and its fulfillment will be more than interesting coincidences. They will be related in a measure as cause and effect. The prophecy was a factor in its own fulfillment. Its effect tended to bring about the conditions favorable to its fulfillment. This is probably true of all prophecies.

What is the proper course to pursue is easily answered. The prophecy of evil should be resisted by a belief in good. The evil prophecy can be nullified by casting it aside as unworthy of a serious thought.

THE COAL STRIKE.

The report that the president has directed Attorney General Knox to investigate the anthracite coal combination and report whether it is a trust, conducted in violation of the provisions of the Sherman law, is interesting. Possibly it may result in something being done to curb the power of this rapacious combine, but in view of the futile efforts to break up the beef trust, not much can be expected in that direction. It is evident that more legislation is needed in order to enable the authorities to restrict the power of these combinations, and the Republican congress has shown no disposition to provide the necessary laws. Neither has congress taken the action which most people who have studied the trust question believe would be the most effective—the repeal of the tariff duties on articles controlled by trusts.

The continuance of the coal strike is a menace to the prosperity of the country, and the coal trust is solely responsible for the strike being still in progress. The miners' union officials have offered to arbitrate the differences, but the operators have curtly declined to submit the case to arbitration.

In the recent address to the public issued by President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers, stating the miners' case, several strong points are made.

He shows that the average earnings of the miners are less than $300 a year, while the cost of the necessaries of life has greatly advanced.

He refutes the statement that the productive efficiency of the miners is less than it was before the advance of 10 per cent in their wages. On the contrary, the government reports prove the production per miner is greater than it ever was.

He points out that while the operators refused to raise the wages of the miners on the ground that it would increase the price of coal 10 per cent, and thus work a hardship on the public, the price of coal has been advanced $1 per ton, with no increase of wages. He shows that the coal companies have made enormous profits.

The best point of all, however, urged by Mr. Mitchell, is the proposition to refer all questions in dispute to arbitration. He says the miners are willing to abide by the decision of a fair board of arbitration, and if it is against them, to take up their work under the conditions prescribed by the board. The public is not able to judge the merits of the issue between the operators and miners. It cannot go into the details of the business and reach a just decision on the published statements. But arbitrators can adjust all differences upon a fair basis, and the public, whose interest is great, must conclude that the refusal of the operators to submit their case to arbitration is practically a confession of weakness. No just cause can suffer from arbitration. Why should not congress pass a compulsory arbitration law and try the effect of it on the coal strike?

The organ of the American Protective Tariff league—the American Economist—continues to be published, employing the same old arguments and illustrations, based upon the same old assumption that all prosperity and progress in the United States are due to the tariff. One of the pictures in a recent issue, designed to illustrate a great tariff truth, represents Uncle Sam on a drunk, with clothes torn, hat smashed in and a whisky bottle labeled "free trade" hanging from a pocket, in the act of smashing in the head of a prostrate but pretty and buxom dame called "American Industry." The club in Uncle Sam's hand is "reciprocity." This is presumably aimed at the late president, whose last public address counseled the use of such a club, not to destroy, but to defend American industry. The Economist bears impressive evidence to the truth that the Republican split over the tariff question is becoming of the most serious character.

The government of Nicaragua has furnished an argument against the selection of the Nicaraguan route for a canal that was never intended by that people. It is found in a postage stamp issued by the republic of Nicaragua which shows as the central figure an active volcano. One of these stamps has been sent to every member of congress, with this inscription printed under it, "An official witness of the volcanic activity on the isthmus of Nicaragua." The stamp is of the denomination of two centavos, and is printed in a beautiful shade of orange. Smoke can be plainly seen pouring from the mouth of the crater, and at the foot of the mountain on which the volcano is located is a peaceful village with a harbor filled with shipping.

The Stony Point battlefield reservation is to be formally dedicated by the American Scenic and Historic Preservation society on July 16, the anniversary of the storming of that Hudson river post in 1779, by "Mad" Anthony Wayne. The society has built a pier to accommodate the largest river steamers, and has altogether expended $3500 in making the reservation attractive and accessible. Governor Odell will declare the reservation open, and S. W. Pennypacker, of Philadelphia, will make the oration.

Secretary Hitchcock says that the irrigation law just enacted is admirably constructed with safeguards against corruption and land monopoly. Congress has done so well in this matter of irrigation that it might be expected to proceed at once to again do well by admitting Oklahoma, Arizona and New Mexico to the Union.

New York city has appropriated $325,000 for the erection of three public baths on the East Side, where they are most needed, and a wealthy lady, Mrs. A. A. Anderson, is going to build another, at a cost of $100,000. This is a good move. Public baths promote health and strong citizenship.

The spectacle of our hard rider president followed closely by the crimson and gold cavalier advertising a popular brand of cigars may not be quite so gorgeous as a coronation padare, but it is very striking, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The perplexing question with many college professors is how to secure co-education without flirtation. The solution of the problem has not yet been found.

The census bureau reports that the sum of $3,225,158 is invested in making needles and pins. And yet no one knows what becomes of the product.

If they had more baseball and golf in Central America, they might have less revolutions, but it would be a hazardous country for the umpire.

The nomination of L. A. Rosing as the Democratic candidate for governor of Minnesota is well received throughout the state.

Neither the memory of McKinley nor the appeals of President Roosevelt can move the high tariff tinkators of the senate.

Dr. Parkhurst is studying conditions in Ireland. He wants to learn all about the native land of New York's policemen.

Miss Stone's lecture tour was a flat failure, and those who contributed to the ransom fund will not get any dividend.

St. Louis has produced a hero. He plunged into the chilling waters of the Ohio and recovered his Panama hat.

It has been suggested, in view of the way the senate has treated Cuba, that the hog be substituted for the eagle.

THOUGHTS THAT TICKLE.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "Pa, what is an 'end seat hog?'"

"He's the man, my boy, who has the seat in the car that you want yourself."

Detroit Free Press: "It takes considerable revenue to buy all the ice cream my girl can eat," remarked Skidds.

"Internal revenue, I suppose?" asked Spatts.

Detroit Free Press: "See where they've formed a broomstick trust."

"What for?"

"To beat the carpet trust."

Chicago Post: "She's frightfully deformed," said the girl in blue.

"Really?" asked the girl in gray.

"Yes, she's built so that her dressmaker doesn't have to use a bit of padding to give her the fashionable shape."

Philadelphia Press: "Ol'm descinded from Brian Boru, ma'am, O'id hov ye know," declared the haughtey Mrs. Fitz Clancey.

"Is thot all, indade?" replied Mrs. Casey, the humble lady of the corner fruit stand. "Faith, Ol' a descindant of Eve, the first apple woman."

Yonkers Statesman: Bocan—What's his business?

Egbert—Why, he's a drummer for automobiles.

Bocan—Oh, they have drummers for those things, do they? Well, it's a good idea, I think it would be much safer if they had a drummer and a lifer go in front of each of the machines.

Brooklyn Life: She—Mrs. Boreton called today and I thought she would never go.

He—But you are so amiable, I suppose you never gave her the slightest hint that you wanted her to go.

She—Indeed, I did not. If I had, she'd be here now.

THE RUBBERNECKS.

Before the bulletins there stood a group
Of rubbernecks, each rubbering to see
Which baseball club was floundering in the soup,
Which basked beneath the sun of victory.
And as the figures they so closely eyed
Newcomers did from all directions pour.
And each one as he Goodyearred eager cried:
"What's the score?"

Tempting Self-Destruction.

Brooklyn Eagle: Should the Democrats carry the next house of representatives the job to prevent them from ruining the party's chances in 1904 would be undertaken by several and envied by none.

Senator Hanna's Ambition.

Boston Globe: Senator Hanna's friends say that he intends to devote his life more and more to the effort of improving the relations between capital and labor, so winning greater fame than a president can get. Noble ambition!

Why Talk of Corporations?

St. Peter Journal: The Alexandria Post-News objects to Ray Jones for lieutenant governor, on the ground that Jones is too close to the corporations. Does the P. N. pause to consider that Governor Van Sant himself has poured upon the head of the aforesaid Jones the sanctified kerosene of his approval? Now will he talk of corporations?

A Western Opinion.

Anaconda (Mont.) Standard: Speaking of harmony would make an uncommonly able leader of a mule stampede.

In Case There's a Clamor.

Chicago News: The Olney boom can now go to sleep again, merely leaving orders to be called if wanted.

An Impertinent Question.

Atlanta Constitution: If Porto Rico is getting along so happily, why should Foraker's committee feel it necessary to go down and look the island over at the government's expense?

Agreed on That.

Memphis Commercial-Appeal: There can be no doubt in the estimation of the administration that Gen. Gomez is one of the most perfect gentlemen we ever paid for.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A bird in the oven is worth a whole covey in the bush.

The more relations a man has the fewer places he has that he wants to visit.

There is something ingrowing on the brain of a man who is willing to talk at breakfast.

Some boys are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness spanked into them.

Making Marcus Sweat.

Atlanta Constitution: Senator Foraker voted for the popular election of senators. Probably he wants to give his colleague, Senator Hanna, a chance to make a run for the job.

A Talisman of Brass

By Glenn Roy McClintock.

(Copyright, 1902, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

An old log house, stuck on the slope of a West Virginia hill, and a cornfield, which looked as though it might, at any time, slip off into the valley below, was the heritage which fell to Sarah McCoy and her daughter Elizabeth upon the death of the husband and father, Henry Stonewall McCoy. Had his bequest been of a more pretentious nature Elizabeth and Jim Gardner, long since betrothed, would not, in all probability, have been sitting on the worn stoop gloomily trying to figure out a means to circumvent the difficulties that enthralled their matrimonial hopes.

The beauty of the night did not appeal to them. The sea of moonlight and the mystic shadows below them, the humble family burying ground in its depths, from which arose a shaft of spectral white marble, were all stern reality; an unproductive valley, a grave yard in which father, grandfather and great-grandfather lie buried, a bit of marble that represented the savings of years.

The notes of a whip-poor-will floating across the hills, the answering call of its mate, from the distance, bore no sentiment or romance to them. They were the discordant cries of a very ordinary bird.

"Liz?" without looking around.

"What is it, Jim?" after a pause. Another wait and then:

"When be we a goin' to get married?"—pause somewhat longer—"if we ever be?"

The long silence following is broken only by the chirping of the crickets until:

"Take this with you."

"Does seem as though me and you've been a powerful long time a gettin' married" (another pause.) "Don't it, Jim?"

"More silence.

"Liz?"

"What Jim?" Short pause, and then:

"I be goin' away." More silence.

"Where be you goin', Jim?" Presently he answered:

"To the Ohio river. I've hearn tell that folks is gettin' rich findin' oil out there."

"When d'ye 'low to go?" after an interval.

"T'morrow."

"No tellin' when you'll be back, I s'pose." declared the haughtey Mrs. Fitz Clancey.

"I 'low not." Long silence again.

"Jim?"

"What?"

"Take this with you," and she drew from the pocket of her homespun a brass button, that had graced the rebel uniform once worn by her father, and handed it to him. He took it slowly and holding it in the palm of his hand examined it curiously.

"What's it for Liz?"

"It's a tal-tallsman."

The blank look on his face showed that she had propounded a mystery that was too much for him to solve. She divined this and after a silence added:

"It means good luck." (Pause.) "I read about it in a book, once."

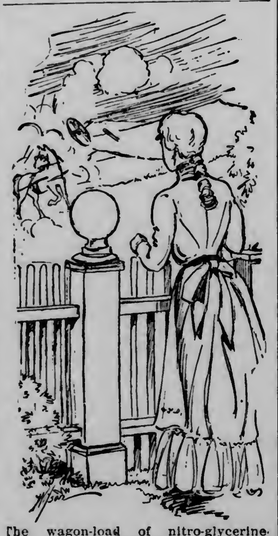
He shuffled to his feet, took a couple of steps and said:

"Good-bye."

"Good-bye."

She watched him go down the winding path, until his figure was lost in the rising fog from the valley below, then turned slowly and disappeared into the house.

In the course of three years the oil industry in West Virginia had assumed unthought-of proportions and the Standard Oil company had begun to extend its operations into the interior of the state. Farms that could have been bought before for $2 an acre were bringing thousands and were eagerly sought at those prices. The oil belt, extending southeasterly, was thought to cross the farm owned by Liz and her mother. An Eastern syndicate, having paid them a big price for an oil-lease and allowed a royalty, had erected a derrick and the clanging of the jars was now heard in the near-by corn field.



The wagon-load of nitro-glycerine had exploded.

It had never occurred to Liz that her lover would not return. She knew he would and was content to wait. When the day arrived on which the well was to be shot she was filled with an inexplicable feeling that a crisis was at hand. The "shooter" had been ordered from Wheeling and would arrive some time that afternoon. She resolved to watch for him, as her view, from the cabin, commanded the road up the valley over which he must come. Presently her vigilance was rewarded. A stout wagon, drawn by two tired horses, appeared on the road from around the base of a hill. She could see the driver urging his jaded beasts over the rough, broken road until a bend in its course, and a thicket, hid them from view.

He did not reappear and she was wondering if an accident had occurred when, from the very spot she was watching, a shaft of dirt, stones and parts of a buggy shot high into the air, followed immediately by an explosion so loud and terrific that it seemed the hills must be torn from their rock foundations. The wagon load of treacherous nitro-glycerine had exploded, an occurrence not uncommon in the oil fields.

As she sat, dazed and bewildered, watching the flying debris fall to the earth, an object dropped at her feet. She stooped and picked it up—a brass button, blackened and bent.

That evening Liz discerned a familiar figure approaching the house. She did not move from her seat on the stoop, but as it drew near, said quietly:

"Hello, Jim."

"Hello, Liz."

"When did yet get back?"

"T'day."

"Jim?"

"What?"

"Here's yer button."

"That ye." (Pause.) "'Lowed I'd lost it. Left my coat on the wagon seat while I went to water the horses. Bin in my coat pocket 'bout three years now."

A long silence.

"'Low we kin marry now, Liz."

"Low we kin." Another pause, and then:

"T'morrow, I 'low."

"All right. Good night, Liz."

"Good night, Jim."

AT THE HOTELS

A. G. Bernard was again at the Spalding last night on his way to take in the Republican convention at St. Paul. He laughingly described his reception at Cass Lake on Saturday saying that it rivalled that of Dewey in New York. "I was a hero for a moment or two," said he, "and was hauled to the hotel in a flag draped carriage to the music of three bands that were in attendance at the firemen's tournament and the cheers of the admiring crowds. The procession stretched from the depot to the hotel and was composed of about every male citizen in town. Now I suppose in a month or two I shall be impelled to do something unpopular and undoubtedly will be cast out from the exalted position that I apparently hold in the estimation of Cass Lake and be told to retire and seat myself. However, when I reflect upon Dewey, Miles and others I feel that at least I shall be in good company."

Among those at the Hotel St. Louis last evening were the delegates to the state convention from Cass and Cook county counties. Charles J. Johnson heads the Cook county crowd who are for Halden to a man, and H. F. Young, who formerly resided in Duluth and was special land office agent, as chairman of the Cass county crowd. George Lydick, of Cass Lake, is also a delegate.

Chairman Young said that although all the members of the delegation had not "hit" yet, still he considered that the united vote of Cass county would go to Halden. The Cass Lakers left for St. Paul last night under the sheltering wing of County Clerk Johnson, accompanied by W. C. Winton, Cass Lake banker, P. C. Schmidt and several other local men.

At the Spalding last night was the Beltrami county delegation to the state convention. The chairman, L. H. Bailey, of Bemidji, announced that Sam Iverson was the first choice of the delegates and Odin Halden the second. As this spread around the lobby the Halden rooters began to close in around Mr. Bailey and after being nearly talked deaf, dumb, blind and void of understanding, he showed signs of weakening, but whether his conversion was heartfelt or whether he was simply desirous of escaping the rush of "hot air" that was being poured out upon him is uncertain.

P. A. Smith, manager of the Rat Portage Lumber company, arrived from Koochiching and registered at the St. Louis. He reports that Koochiching is recovering from the late disastrous conflagration and that temporary houses have been built everywhere. Later on permanent structures will occupy the sites of these destroyed by flames.

Dr. and Mrs. Kerr and John Kerr, of Fort William, Ont., arrived on the Hercule and registered at the St. Louis.

G. H. Carsley, of St. Paul, representing Architect Cass Gilbert, is inspecting the new addition to the St. Louis today.

P. H. Nelson, of Stillwater, who manages the business of the Mississippi Logging company, is at the St. Louis today.

At the Spalding: H. D. Blackord, St. Paul; J. P. Brayton, Chicago; Joseph Caldwell, Joseph Paulson and wife, Osnabruck, N. D.; Kathryn Kidder and party, C. B. Jones and wife, Los Angeles, Cal.; Mr. and Mrs. Coon, New York city.

At the St. Louis: J. C. Campbell, Island Lake; Thomas J. Brown, Two Harbors; L. J. Perlict, Thomas Sullivan, St. Paul; Pat Sullivan, William O'Brien, Stillwater.

At the McKay: Miss Mary Whelan, Julia A. Mulrooney, Cleveland; John S. Cant, Westfield, Wis.; Colfax Grant, Minneapolis; Mrs. W. M. Ross, Bemidji; W. R. Bryan, Chicago; G. A. Sweet, Minneapolis; Fred W. Kopplin, Eau Claire; T. E. Stuart, St. Paul.

JUNE.

The gorgeous June will soon be gone,
Her perfumed moments fly;
The birdling from its nest be flown,
And roses fade and die.
Glad month we love thy birds and flowers,
We part with thee in pain,
For oh, deep sorrow may be ours
Ere thou shalt come again.

How fresh thy dews at early morn,
How sweet thy shade at noon,
Oh God, that all of life were love,
And all the year were June!
It cannot be, the wish is vain,
We'll hide the falling tear,
Till He his providence make plain
And bring fruition near.

Soft echoes love thy charmed air,
The hills have donned the green,
The cliff is mirrored in the wave,
While the city sleeps between.
The waters leap to kiss the sun,
Or surge to press the keel,
Or wedded fast to industry,
Revolve the whirring wheel.

The leaves which cling to swaying boughs
Beneath whose shade I dream,
When autumn comes will turn to brown,
And float upon the stream.
The tide will bear them far away,
As Time doth bear our years,
Yet leave a fragrance in the air,
And music in our ears.

LATEST FASHION NOTES.

For Seashore or Yachting.

All the costumes intended for seaside and yachting wear bear some distinctively nautical device, from the conventional sailor dress and reefer, with "buzzard" on sleeve and anchors on collar and shield, to the more elaborate frocks which follow the fancy tailor-made models. In the accompanying illustration is shown a very pretty type of these frocks, not too severe, nor over ornamental. The material is dark blue mohair, of a very coarse grain. The gored skirt is very close fitting from belt to knee, and from there to the edge very flaring, all seams being finished with several rows of stitching done with corticelli silk in self color. The border is of striped taffeta, china blue and white, cut on the bias, and finished with three rows of velvet ribbon, one on either edge, and one through the middle. The same trimming borders the collarless Eton, finishing the bloused front and being prolonged to form little tabs below the belt in a vest effect, and at the shoulders to give the required breadth. At either side of the trimming on the front are embroidered anchors and two groups of little stars worked with white Corticelli EE embroidery silk.

OVATION

To Democratic Candidate For Governor at Cannon Falls.

Cannon Falls, June 30.—Leonard A. Rosing, Democratic candidate for governor, was welcomed home Saturday evening with a popular demonstration of a magnitude never before attempted in Cannon Falls.

Cannon Falls and the surrounding country districts turned out en masse to welcome home its favorite citizen, who has been chosen by the Democracy of Minnesota as its leader in the coming campaign. Bands played, marching columns paraded the streets, speeches were made at the pavilion and the celebration concluded with a monster reception in which all Cannon Falls participated.

The citizens of Cannon Falls and Goodhue county irrespective of party affiliation feel they share in the honor reflected by the nomination of Mr. Rosing. That they take a genuine pride in the leader of the Democracy was amply testified by this demonstration.

The train on which Mr. Rosing arrived was met at the dept by more than half of the population of Cannon Falls. A special reception committee escorted him to a carriage in waiting, while the crowd cheered itself hoarse.

A marching organization of fully 500 men headed by a band, led the procession of carriages which was completed by a long line of conveyances of all kinds, ranging from the natty family carriage to the lumber wagon, each carrying its load of enthusiastic visitors from the country, who came to join in the general expression of good will and satisfaction over the action of the state convention.

The line of march embraced the principal streets of the town to the pavilion, where, after the informal reception, several congratulatory speeches were made by prominent citizens and feelingly responded to by Mr. Rosing. A public reception followed.

BODY OF JESSE JAMES

Dug Up and Reinterred at Kearney, Mo.

Kansas City, Mo., June 30.—Jesse James' body, which has been buried for twenty years in the door yard of the old James homestead, near Excelsior Springs, Mo., was disinterred yesterday and buried in the cemetery at Kearney, Mo., beside the body of his father and wife. Mrs. Sereida Samuels, mother of Jesse James, Frank James, his brother, and Jesse and Mary, his son and daughter, attended the ceremonies. A funeral service was held and the pall-bearers were comrades of Jesse James when all were members of Quantrell's band. When the skeleton of his father was dug up, Jesse James, Jr., picked up the skull and pointed out the hole made by the bullet from Bob Ford's pistol. Besides relatives and close friends of the James family, only a small crowd attended the exercises.

EXTENSION

Of the Congdon Canal In Washington State Proposed.

Tacoma, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—The big Congdon canal which irrigates all of the high land lying just west of North Yakima, is to be enlarged and extended four miles at a cost of $30,000. Chester A. Congdon, of Duluth, is the moving spirit in this enterprise. He is now at North Yakima. He has just paid a visit to North Yakima to look over the proposed extension and will submit the matter to the stockholders of the company at their next meeting. On approval of the plan the extension will be made this fall. The extension will add about 500 acres of choice land to that already under cultivation in the vicinity of North Yakima. Irrigated lands in the Yakima valley are selling at $500 and over.

DID NOT TAKE IT.

Duluthians Disappointed In a California Gold Property.

Tacoma, June 30.—(Special to The Herald.)—Tom Merritt and A. C. Hubbell, of Duluth, spent a couple of days in Tacoma last week en route from Californ it to Duluth. While here they were the guests of Fred Merritt, formerly of Duluth, but now in business here. Messrs. Hubbell and Merritt visited a quartz gold proposition in Shasta county, California, which they had been led to believe was a good thing. They were disappointed only in the degree of goodness of the thing. Assays that had been made on ore from the property before they left Duluth went way up in the air from $15 to $55 the ton, and it is said one particularly rosy report showed values amounting to $150 the ton. The fact that was shown by the expert they employed on the ground was about 63 cents the ton. It is needless to say they did not take the "mine."

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A brilliantly played game of lacrosse at St. Paul, Sunday, between the St. Paul Lacrosse club, and the Calumets, Chicago's star organization was won by the Minnesota players by a score of 6 to 3.

The drought was threatened to be the most severe that Colorado has known for years, has been broken by a rain as general in extent as it was copious in quantity. The storm damage in Denver and vicinity is estimated at all the way from $10,000 to $50,000. Snow fell to the depth of eight inches in Leadville.

The Wilson line steamer Hindoo, which sailed from New York for Hull Saturday, returned on fire. Capt. Clark reports that the fire was discovered in the No. 4 hold between decks at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. The steamer at this time was 110 miles east of Sandy Hook. The fire was fought by turning steam into the hold affected and was under control upon arrival in port.

Eastern Nebraska has had four days of almost continuous rainfall, flooding cornfields and delaying the harvesting of small grain. Some damage has been done to wheat in the shock.

Mercury and Potash

ONLY SERVE AS A MASK FOR CONTAGIOUS BLOOD POISON

They hide its repulsive form, and this serpent disease, stupefied by these drugs, lies dormant until the effects have worn off or treatment is discontinued, when it breaks down the mask and becomes as full of life and venom as ever. Mercury and Potash may dry up the sores and eruptions, but at the same time they drive the poison back into the blood and system, where it feeds upon the tender tissues, membranes and nerves, finally breaking out in most disgusting sores and even destroying the flesh and bones.

Mercury and Potash cannot accomplish a radical and permanent cure. They have a palliative but not curative effect upon this treacherous snake-like disease. These drugs produce mercurial Rheumatism, destroy the teeth and corrode the membranes of the stomach and bowels, causing inflammation and dyspepsia, nervousness and general derangement of the system.

S. S. S. is a Specific for Contagious Blood Poison, and the only antidote for the peculiar virus that spreads so quickly throughout the system, corrupting the blood and infecting every organ and fibre of the body.

SSS S. S. S. destroys the serpent, and eliminates every atom of poison from the blood, it makes a thorough and radical cure of the disease, and at the same time builds up the general health. S. S. S. contains no minerals of any kind, but is a purely vegetable remedy and we offer $1,000 for proof to the contrary.

Write us about your case and our physicians will cheerfully advise without charge. Our home treatment book will be sent free to all who desire it.

LUMBER MARKET

A Few Small Sales Made With Prices Firm as Ever.

Vesselmen Confident That the Rate Will Not Break.

High Offer Said to Have Been Made For Stumpage.

A few small sales are reported in the Duluth lumber market during the past week. The manufacturers say that the sales are, as a rule, quite small now, but the prices are as firm as ever and at a good figure. One sale of No. 3 boards is said to have been made on a basis of $15 per thousand.

There is no change in the milling situation. The St. Louis mill is the only one idle on the harbor front, and the others are running with two crews.

Vesselmen assert strongly that there has been no change from the $2.50 rate, nor that there is likely to be any change this season, unless it be for higher rates. The Eastern vessel brokers have placed little confidence in the report from this port that boats were offering to load from Lake Superior to Lake Erie ports for $2.25. The brokers declared that vessels could not clear expenses at that figure, and that a number of lumber carriers have been withdrawn from the trade to carry wood pulp and other freight rather than load for less than $2.50. It has been acknowledged that shippers have paid a rebate on cargoes loaded at the latter figure, but claimed that it did not amount to 25 cents off on each 1000 feet.

There is still something doing in the way of standing pine deals. As one instance of the advance in pine stumpage in this district, it is known that a leading sawmill company of this city not long ago had a bona-fide offer of $7 per 1000 for all its timber in the Duluth district, either near or remote from logging railroads or driving streams. While the timber is said to have cost its owner within 25 per cent of that figure, the offer was refused, and the timber is being made into lumber as fast as possible. Some of the loggers have claimed that both the stumpage and the cost of boards is too high, and that it will be detrimental to the interests of the district, but this is not yet apparent.

Last week the plant of the Glenmont Lumber company at Cass Lake was sold at public auction to satisfy a mortgage in favor of the Scanlon-Gipson Lumber company, of Minneapolis. The Glenmont company, through a receiver, Robert Shields, of West Superior, has begun an action against the Scanlon-Gipson company for breach of contract, alleging that the latter company has failed to carry out a sawing contract.

The lumbering operations in Minnesota are still far from being at an end is said to be evident from the activity that has been noticed recently in the sawmill construction business or the proposed plans of building. It is very probable that Bemidji will soon have a new mill. The Crookston Lumber company, which is a close ally of the Shevlin-Carpenter interests, has decided to locate a mill at some convenient point in the state, but the location has not yet been indicated. The company owns large bodies of pine timber in the vicinity of Bemidji, and will build there if the people of that place will give certain concessions relative to freedom from local taxation.

As was announced several weeks ago, W. H. Gilbert may put in a mill on Vermilion lake, in the district where he recently purchased 40,000,000 feet of pine from F. R. Webber.

The water is quite low in both the Cloquet and St. Louis rivers at the present time, but the first driving has been accomplished and the present low stage will work no hardship. The last of the drive down the St. Louis river has been boomed in the bay of the channel, about opposite the foot of Seventieth avenue west.

A number of lumbermen visited at Virginia last week and it is reported that they will build a mill there to saw timber brought in there over the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake railroad. B. F. Nelson, of the Nelson, Tenney company, of Minneapolis, was the principal member of the party. C. M. Erskine and C. I. McNair, of Cloquet, and A. C. Boaasrd, of Grand Rapids, Minn. and a lumberman from Grand Rapids, Wis., were in the party.

LAUNCH BURNED

On Lake Bemidji But Passengers Were Saved.

Bemidji, June 30.—The new gasoline launch Ranger, with fourteen passengers on board, caught fire Saturday night at 10 o'clock on Lake Bemidji and was totally destroyed. All the passengers, including women and children, jumped overboard and were saved with slight burns. The accident happened near the shore, at the north end of the lake, six miles from the village. It was caused by a leaking gasoline tank. Some one on board lit a match, and in an instant everything was enveloped in flames. After the people jumped overboard and reached shore, the Ranger drifted out in deep water and sank, and has not yet been located.

CONVICTED.

"Norm" King, Another Minneapolis Police Officer, Found Guilty.

Minneapolis, June 30.—Nathaniel W. King, one of Mayor Ames' thirty plain clothes men or detectives was Saturday evening found guilty of felony.

The trial of King, familiarly known as "Norm" King, has occupied nearly two weeks' time. The case was a sensational one, not only because the defendant was a very well-known man in the community, but from the fact that that distinguished crook and still more famous witness, "Billy" Edwards, figured as a very material witness.

The result of the trial comes as something of a surprise to those who have watched it with any special interest. There was any amount of speculation as to the probable outcome of the trial. There were comparatively few who calculated on a verdict of guilty, whatever their private judgment in the matter. The most that was expected by those who thus speculated was a disagreement.

There is another indictment against King. In the indictment upon which the trial was based, King is accused of having been accessory to a felony after the fact, in that he permitted the release of one Harry Adams from the county jail when he knew that Adams was criminally interested in the theft of a diamond stud, stolen from J. S. Happer, a real estate man, at ...e Chicago Great Western station on March 1 of last year. The contention is that King himself secured possession of the gem and appropriated it to his own use.

A little life may be sacrificed to an hour's delay. Cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea come suddenly. Only safe plan is to have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry always on hand.

BIG COTTON MILL.

Kansas City to Have Largest In World.

Kansas City, June 30.—The Star says: The largest cotton mill in the world is to be built within twenty miles of Kansasa City. Ten million dollars is to be invested, $3,100,000 of which has already been subscribed by Eastern and Western men. V. B. Smith Wahely, president of the Olympia and Granby Cotton mills, of Columbia, S. C., is to be president and general manager of the enterprise. The mill will have 500,000 spindles and 12,000 looms. It will employ 4000 operatives and have a pay roll of $2,450,000 a year. The capacity of the mills will be 170,000 bales of citton a year, with an output of 75,000,000 pounds of finished cloth. The value of the annual output will, it is estimated, amount to twelve and three-quarter million dollars. The mill be revolutionary in its construction. Electricity will be used as the motive power, and several new devices will be installed. There will be four mill buildings, covering an aggregate of 20,000 acres of ground.

CAR DERAILED.

Serious Accident on Tramway Line In Denver.

Denver, Col., June 30.—Eleven persons were injured, four of them seriously, by the wrecking of a tramway car which was returning to this city from Elitch's gardens.

The injured: Mrs. F. E. Wessell, concussion of the brain; Mrs. W. E. Rogers, head cut and shoulders bruised; Lena M. Houghton, back and shoulders badly bruised, internal injuries; Celestia Doizer, concussion of brain, severe scalp wound; Mrs. A. Perkins, August Billingham, C. Van Northwick, George Peneri, Mrs. C. E. Sauer. There were seventy-five passengers on the car which was derailed and overturned on a curve, the track being slippery from rain.

GIFT FROM POPE.

Bishop O'Gorman Will Bear One to President.

Rome, June 30.—The Rt. Rev. Thomas O'Gorman, bishop of Sioux Falls, S. D., when he returns to the United States, will be the bearer of a letter from the pope to President Roosevelt and will take with him the pontiff's magnificent gift to the American president, which consists of a view of the city of Rome from the vatican studio, done in mosaic. The idea of appointing Bishop O'Gorman apostolic delegate in the Philippines appears, for the present at least, to have been abolished, although the first suggestion of this appointment was uttered by the pope himself when he first received William H. Taft, civil governor of the Philippines.

Trenton Falls, N. Y.

For a great many years Trenton Falls has been known as a summer resort with more than usual attractions. At this point the West Canada creek, which drains a large area of the Southern Adirondacks, descends about 300 feet through a picturesque gorge, forming a series of wonderfully beautiful falls and cascades, called by the Indians Kauya-hoo-ra, "Leaping Water." For several years the surroundings have been undergoing extensive improvements; an electric plant has been installed, and the falls, gorge and woods are illuminated by night, presenting a picture of rare beauty. Trenton Falls is eighteen miles north of Utica, N. Y., and is reached via the New York Central. You may read all about it in the New York Central's "Four-Track Series" No. 6, entitled "In the Adirondack Mountains." Sent free on receipt of a 2-cent stamp by George H. Daniels, general passenger agent, Grand Central station, New York.

A BULGE IN GRAINS

Wheat, Corn and Oats All Show Remarkable Strength.

Chicago Market Leads and Has Sensational Advances.

Wet Weather In Wheat Country---Flax Quiet and Steady.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 30.—There was a lively time in the grain markets at Chicago today, and wheat, corn and oats all had sensational advances. Minneapolis and Duluth followed the advance to some extent, but came far from reaching the Chicago advance. The chief factor in the advance was the wet weather in the wheat harvesting country and the prospect of more. The extreme advance in July wheat in Chicago was 2c, while in Duluth it was 5c and in Minneapolis 1¼c. The Liverpool market was open for the first time since Wednesday, and closed unchanged to ½d higher than the close on that date.

Primary receipts of wheat were 636,000 bus, last year 858,000 bus. Shipments were 235,000 bus, last year, 1,071,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour were 482,000 bus. The visible supply of wheat decreased 1,-275,000 bus, against a decrease of 2,358,000 bus last week, and 2,170,000 bus last year. The total is now 19,020,000 bus, against 30,-793,000 bus a year ago. The world's shipments for the week, 6,159,000 bus, against 7,478,000 bus the week previous and 8,582,-000 bus last year. The amount on passage decreased 3,720,000.

July corn shorts had a hard time of it this morning in Chicago. The market had an extreme advance of 2¼c over Saturday's close and closed 2¾c. The high point touched was 72¾c, which is the high point on the option. September corn was up 1½c. There was a lively time in oats, too, the July "new" closing 1¾c up and the July regular 1¾c up. Primary receipts of corn were 320,000 bus; last year, 314,000 bus. Shipments, 322,000 bus; last year 415,000 bus. Clearances were 52,581 bus. The world's shipments were 1,486,000 bus last week, against 3,223,000 bus the week previous and 6,415,000 bus last year. The amount on passage decreased 240,000 bus. The visible supply increased 48,000 bus, against an increase of 470,000 bus the week previous, and 2,280,000 bus last year. The total is now 2,687,000 bus, against 75,-160,000 a year ago.

Receipts of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, 459 cars, and at Chicago, 29, a total of 524 cars, against 482 last week and 577 last year.

Trading on the Duluth board was fairly active and the market strong. It opened 2¢ up at 75¾c, sold at 75¾c at 9:49, fell to 75¾c at 10:05, and held steady there, finally closing at 75¾c, an advance of 7¾c. Chicago advanced 1⅝-3¾c, and Minneapolis, 3c-4c.

Wheat has been coming from the country at a much livelier rate later, and today sales to arrive aggregated about 35,-000 bus. Cash prices were July price to No. 1 northern, 1½c under for No. 2, and 3½c under for No. 3.

Flax was dull and steady, being unchanged except for a decline of ¼c in October.

Cash oats advanced 2c and September oats, 1½c. Cash and September rye advanced 1c. Cash and September rye advanced 1c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat, cash, No. 1 hard, 78¾c; No. 1 northern, 75¾@c; No. 2 northern, 74¾c; No. 3 spring, 72¾c. To arrive—No. 1 hard, 78¾c; No. 1 northern, 75¾c; July, 75¾c; September, 75¾. Manitoba, No. 1 northern, cash, 75¾c; No. 2 northern, 74¾c. Oats, cash, 36c; September, 34c. Rye, cash, 56½c; September, 54c. Flax, cash, $1.69; on track, $1.69; June, $1.60; cash, No. 1 Northwestern, $1.75; September, $1.42; October, $1.37½.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 38; last year, 71; rye, 1; flax, 7. Receipts—Wheat, 28,071 bus; flax, 4384 bus. Shipments—Wheat, 65,383 bus.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Opens Higher Under Wet Weather Influence.

Chicago, June 30.—The deluge of rain and the still clouded skies monopolized attention in the wheat pit today. Under the influence of numerous reports of flooded wheat fields, September wheat opened 2¾c to 1¾c higher at 73¼c to 73¾c and even advanced to 74c. Shorts ignored the lower Liverpool quotations and statistics generally. Around the top sufficient wheat came out to check further advance for the time being, but the tone remained uncompromisingly strong. Local receipts were 29 cars, 5 of contract grade; Minneapolis and Duluth reported 459 cars, making a total for the three points of 524 cars, against 482 last week and 577 a year ago. World's shipments were 6,159,000 bus while the quantity on passage showed a decrease of 3,720,000 bus.

Although trade knew higher, later prices held and the close was strong, September 1¾c up at 73¾c.

Corn, like wheat, was under the influence of the rains, although the manipulated condition of the July option kept the market nervous. The feature early was selling of the latter delivery by the bulls, July opened ¾c to 2¼c higher at 70¼c to 72c and reacted to 70¾c, where it steadied for a time. The corn unloaded by the clique went into strong hands for the most part. September corn opened ¼c to 1¼c over Saturday at 62c to 63c and settled close to 62¾c during an hour's active trade. Receipts were 255 cars.

The close was strong, September, 1¼c higher at 63c and July 2¾c up at 72½c.

Oats were active and strong on the weather, buying being general at the GRAIN GOSSIP.

Harris, Gates & Co.—Extract from our Anvers letter dated June 20, reads as follows: "Wheat firmer and prices tending up. Weather reports, since early last spring, altogether unsensonable, and the fine days we have had may number in all four or five. Although any damage to the crop cannot be ascertained, it is evident harvest will be backward, and that Europe, especially France, will be a steady buyer for wheat before the new crop begins moving. We can only repeat that with the low reserves and stocks we have here in Europe and the rather big discount for new crop positions that there is a certain danger, which would be disastrous for the bears if anything serious should happen to the crops still on the field on your side or in Europe."

A. H. Farnum, Chicago—All other conditions in the grain markets will be overshadowed by the weather which continues about as bad as it could be. There has been a deluge in the last forty-eight hours over practically all the corn and wheat country. Professor Cox of the weather bureau says he does not want to be sensational, but if the present weather continues much longer crops will be a failure. We don't look for any failure, but the situation is extremely serious, great damage has been done, all grains are likely to set back and are likely to be higher today. Provisions market has lagged for several days, but with light stocks, light receipts of hogs and the period of heavy consumption of product just ahead of us, we think prices will advance.

MARKET REPORT.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 307 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.

Chicago, June 30.—There was a large and active trade in wheat today and the market ruled strong on covering by shorts owing to very heavy rains throughout the winter wheat belt. There was a good deal of realizing by longs, but the tone to the market at the close was firm. English markets were generally quiet on account of favorable weather. Liverpool closed ¼d lower for the day. Continental markets were firm, especially Paris, in sympathy with our market. The weather in France is reported favorable. Cash demand was rather quiet. The advance in the market checked business. The seaboard reported very little done there for export. The heavy rains throughout the West will not only damage the grain, but also greatly delay the movement to market. Toward the end of the session the July was decidedly the strongest, and we think there is a large short interest in this option. Contract stocks are very small, only about one and three-quarters million bus, and if the weather does not improve very shortly the bears may be given a nasty squeeze. The future course in other options will be governed of course by the weather. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 10 cars.

There was a large and active trade in corn today and principal feature to the market was covering by shorts. There was also good buying of September by the prominent elvator firm who have been buying so heavily of late. There was very little doing in the July option which ranged from 70½c to 72⅝c and closed at 72½c. September ranged from 62c to 63⅝c and closed at 63c. Foreign markets were generally strong, reflecting our advance. Liverpool closed ⅞d to 1d higher for the day. Cash demand was very quiet. Weather throughout the corn belt continues unfavorable, being decidedly too cold and wet. The movement of grain in the country is very small. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 325 cars.

Oats ruled very strong all day on active covering by shorts owing to very unfavorable weather. Cash demand was good. White oats on track are bringing full prices. Country movement is very light, in fact, practically nothing. There is a large short interest in the July, which we think will be forced to cover sooner or later, and if the weather does not improve shortly the September and December will also go materially higher. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 285 cars.

Provisions opened strong on higher hogs although receipts exceeded expectations. Later ruled weak, but closed with an advance. The peculiar features of the day were weaknesses in near futures and strength in far futures, which is quite logical after all, for damage to crops the far futures had to be discounted. The at heavy discounts should be the best purchase, for next year's hogs must be fattened on this year's grain. It seems absurd to advise anyone to buy $18.50 pork when they can buy 74c grain and we think grain trade will be large and provision trade small. There is no scarcity at present of either product of hogs and July product is selling at a discount under September and every other more beyond lower than September, so that one thing September too high on everything. Estimated receipts for tomorrow, 22,000 hogs.

CONFUSED IN STOCKS

Heavy Demand Early For Illinois Central Caused Advance.

Realizing Started a Decline and Market Became Heavy.

General Drift Downward, With Slight Recovery Near Closing.

New York, June 30.—The opening stock market was quite active but the price changes were entirely irregular. There was a notable demand for Texas & Pacific and Canadian Pacific rose a large fraction. There were also declines in the Pacific group. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo lost a point and American Ice preferred nearly as much. The coalers were slightly higher. Business increased slightly but the tone became more confused. The Southwestern railroad stocks were notably firm, Missouri Pacific rising to 111 and Texas Pacific gaining a point. Western stocks sold off, led by St. Paul, and profit taking depressed Illinois Central below 150. Some of the coalers were in demand, particularly Pennsylvania, which advanced a point, but the group otherwise moved narrowly. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred recovered its loss when Canadian Pacific moved up over 2 points and Distilling preferred and Standard Rope also made good gains. Some of the coalers and Ann Arbor preferred and Des Moines & Fort Dodge preferred declined 1¼@2 points.

Near 11 o'clock there was a heavy demand for Illinois Central, which advanced it almost a point over Saturday's close and the general market showed some improvement.

Prices generally rose above Saturday's close. Southern Railway common was bought in large blocks and Louisville & Nashville touched 138. Colorado Fuel made an upward spurt of 2½ points and Delaware & Hudson and Consolidated Gas rose over a point. A loss of 1¼ in Amalgamated started realizing in the railroad list and Illinois Central, St. Paul, Missouri Pacific and Canadian Pacific lost large fractions.

The market was heavy, the activity of the money market being a depressing influence. St. Paul lost 1¼ and the reaction reached about a point or more in Canadian Pacific, the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville and United States Steel preferred.

A few of the active stocks made slight recoveries, but the general drift was downward on small offerings until Colorado Fuel spirted to 5 points over Saturday and Sugar 1½. Wisconsin Central preferred advanced 1 to 1½ and Bicycle preferred 1½.

Sugar touched 128 and Paper preferred rose 1¾, against which Fuel and Steel, Louisville & Nashville 2, with a rally of 1½. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo lost 1½ and the preferred 3. The market generally was dull and sluggish. Chicago & Eastern Illinois sold 1½ over Saturday. The close was inanimate and steady.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Ridgley to W. H. Laidley & Co.: It is incredible how many people went long Colorado Fuel at 40 and around par. Surely no one could have supposed it was worth the price and the public evidently bought simply in the blind faith that the Gates clique would manipulate prices higher. Colorado Fuel & Iron is earning about as much and is worth about as much as Tennessee Coal & Iron. I still think Missouri Pacific and St. Paul are going much higher on this movement. The principal short interest is in these stocks. There are also quite a few shorts in Atchison. The pool seems to be checking every advance of Union Pacific. Indications point to a big bull campaign this summer and a decline in the autumn on the Democratic victory next November. Buy Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Atchisons, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio. I am a big bull on the whole railroad list, but have no opinion to give on the industrials.

Wuldorf to Edwards, Wood & Co.: The week on the stock exchange, with speculative opinion favoring a reaction in the market, but with little evidence that a setback is impending. This disappointment is an element which embraces some of the most conservative houses in the street and which has been preaching bearish doctrines for the past few days, taking for its text high prices, uncertainty as to crops, the labor disturbances and some apprehension as to the technical conditions, have made bearing the market hard work, the most potent of these being the absolute unwillingness of holders to sell stocks. It is pointed out that no better illustration of this determined stand of holders could be had than is furnished by the fact that in the face of strikes and their threatened extension prices are almost uniformly higher than they were a month ago and by the rather unusual spectacle furnished by Colorado Fuel & Iron of an industrial stock passing its dividend, yet being still maintained not far from the 90 mark. Still, despite the paucity of offerings and strong confidence of holders, leading houses, while admitting the probability of further improvement in prices, are not enthusiastic over the immediate market. They aver there is too much manipulation and too little general interest and they feel that it be well to take advantage of hard spots to realize.

* * *

Dow-Jones to W. H. Laidley & Co.: Officials of Burlington road say: "Current business and the outlook for several months for the heaviest traffic the road has ever had, could not be more encouraging, but unless more farm laborers are to be found at once, it may tell on business, temporarily at least."

* * *

Dick to B. E. Baker: Have just been talking to a man who is very close to the management of Colorado Fuel & Iron. He tells me that it is strong, because there is a contest for control. The Gates crowd are buying it to get the management in their hands.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to W. H. Laidley & Co.—Speculative interest in coppers still continues to be very light, but taking into consideration the absence of market leaders from the market and the limited amount of orders from outsiders, the copper market as a whole remains remarkably firm and upon any improved demand for securities we look to see higher prices throughout the general list.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 30.—The cotton market opened barely steady with near months 3 to 4 points higher and distant positions unchanged to 5 points lower. The summer months were relatively firm on demand from shorts who feared possible manipulation, while the new crop operations were depressed by further rain news from the crop country and disappointment in late cables from Liverpool. The early English market reports were tolerably good, noting a decline of 1 to 2 points only in spite of the expected drop of 5½ to 6½ points, due on the action of our market since Liverpool closed on last Wednesday.

There was additional decline of 2 points in Liverpool at about the time of the opening here. The weather chart noted scattered showers in the belt with warm temperatures and the forecast pointed to clearing conditions where most needed. Port receipts were rather larger than expected but did not figure as much of a factor. Not long after the opening the scare of July shorts developed into a serious scramble and not until that option had recovered 884 were the needs of the bears in any measure appeased. Then came a reaction of 9 points to 875, under profit taking by local holders. The South said new crop options here sentiment as a whole was bearish on the fine crop and weather conditions South.

Cotton spot closed steady, middling uplands, 9¼c; middling gulf, 9¼c; sales, 4071 bales. Cotton futures closed firm, distant steady. June, nominal, July, 8.80; August, 8.33; September, 7.84; October, 7.79; November, 7.70; December, 7.71; January, 7.70; February, 7.70; March, 7.71.

HALDEN IS STRONG

George R. Laybourn Says His Forces Are Looming Up Well.

Combinations Will All Be Effected By This Evening.

Large Crowd of Rooters and Delegates Go Down.

George R. Laybourn returned this morning from St. Paul, where he had been to size up the state fight and labor in the interest of Odin Halden for the nomination for state auditor. Mr. Laybourn said this morning that as far as he could see Mr. Halden has an excellent chance of winning out. The others are thoroughly alive to the fact that he is a very strong candidate. Jacobson is developing considerable strength in quarters where it was not supposed that he would be strong, but Mr. Halden is doing that same thing, showing much strength in Southern parts of the state. Hennepin and Ramsey counties seem to be confused and they do not seem to know themselves where they will land.

"The Duluth men are doing great work," said Mr. Laybourn. "I do not think Mr. Halden could have picked a better chairman for his delegation than Senator Hawkins. I must admit that I have been surprised at the remarkable adroit and successful manner in which he is taking charge of the delegation. L. M. Willcuts, E. H. Windom, Dr. Eklund and others are all laboring with might and main. Representative Pugh is there and is a wickle in himself. He was always the best buttonholer in our legislative delegation and he is using that faculty to its fullest extent now."

Mr. Laybourn says that tonight will see all the combinations made and the fight practically settled. The contest over clerk of the supreme court is almost as interesting as that over auditor and there are five candidates in the field.

Mr. Laybourn returned to St. Paul again this afternoon.

TO THE CONVENTION.

Rooters and Delegates Leave For St. Paul.

A big bunch of Halden rooters, accompanied by the Third Regiment band, left last night for St. Paul on the Great Northern passenger and a number of others took the Northern Pacific short line. This morning a large delegation including Judge Edson and his campaign manager, C. B. Miller, Capt. Stevens, John Meining, N. F. Hugo, Ole Stenson, County Superintendent Park and others —about fourteen in all took the Northern Pacific morning passenger for St. Paul. They all wore Halden badges and were full of confidence and enthusiasm.

Capt. John Pengilly headed the Tower and Ely delegations today. With him were Capt. Andrew Larson, of Soudan; Nick Cowling, of Ely; Charles Trezona, of Ely; R. R. Trezona, of Eveleth, and M. E. Gleason, of Ely. The two Capts. Trezona were accompanied by their wives.

From Eveleth came Neil McInnes, P. E. Dowling, Matt Prettner and Fred Rossum and M. S. Hawkins came down from Mountain Iron.

The afternoon N. P. passenger carried another contingent of Halden's supporters, including the range delegates. Among the local men were F. W. Hugo, E. L. Miller, Victor Dash, H. C. Dash, Robert Patterson, William Butchart, E. M. Pugh, J. T. Pugh, County Treasurer Whipple, Former Alderman Jefferson, Jerome E. Cooley and President of the Board of Public Works Wilson, who came on the platform after the train had started, but by a strenuous sprint succeeded in catching on to the rear end of the observation car and was hauled aboard over the railing by two men, assisted by three ladies, amid the plaudits of the spectators.

AGREED.

Conferees Patch Up Philippine Bill Without Money Standard.

Washington, June 30.—The conferees of the two houses of congress on the Philippine civil government bill have practically reached an agreement. They probably will present their report to the senate during the afternoon. The understanding provides for the elimination of the coinage question from the bill, thus postponing the question to another session for independent action. The senate conferees held out for their silver standard provision, and the house men were just as firm in their contention for a gold standard. The house provision for a territorial legislature is retained in modified form. The Democratic members of the conference were not present at the forenoon session, but it is not believed that they will make an effort to change the agreement.

Many of the provisions of the two bills concerning currency, however, are retained, including the senate regulation for subsidiary coinage. There is, however, no effort in the present agreement to fix the money standard. That is left for the future. The house provision for a legislative assembly is amended so as to require that its establishment shall be preceded by a census. Two years after this census the president is authorized to direct, through the Philippine commission, the election of a legislature, if, in his opinion, the conditions justify such a course.

The house provision for the sale of the Philippine lands was accepted, but the 2500 acres is the largest area to be disposed of to any one person or combination.

TECUMSEH

Wins First Race of the Little Skimming Dishes.

Black Rock, Conn., June 30.—Eight tiny yachts are in rendezvous here preparing to compete during the next four days of this week in trial races for the honor of representing the United States races for the Seawanhaka international cup for small yachts, to be held in Lake St. Louis, near Montreal, in August. Last year the Bridgeport Yacht club challenged for this cup, and under the auspices of the club, general interest was aroused, nine entries, representing various yacht clubs, being made for the trial race. Eight of the boats appeared today for the opening race, the ninth, the Wampnissie representing the Shinnecock Yacht club, having been withdrawn because it had been beaten by the Frontenac, another of the boats entered.

The Bridgeport Yacht club enters the Mazzassoit and Tecumseh, both owned by Bridegport syndicates, and the Nutmeg, owned by C. Barnum Seely, of Bridgeport. From Massachusetts are the Fillbuster, flying the flag of the Eastern Yacht club, and the Monsoon, of the Manchester club. The Crusader, flying the burgee of the White Bear Lake Yacht club, of St. Paul, Minn.; the Seeress, representing the Manhasset Yacht club, of Long Island, and the Frontenac, flying the flag of the Pen-ataquit-Corinthian Yacht club, of Bay Shore, L. I., are the other entries.

The little boats are freaks in construction. They measure twenty-five feet on the water line, with an over-all length of from thirty-eight to forty-three feet. The beam varies from six to eight feet.

For the trial races the courses are twelve miles in length, with a time limit of three and a half hours. Each race will be sailed in three parts, the boats, after finishing four miles, being started again for another four-mile contest. The trials are held with all the careful details of arrangement customary with the races of larger boats, and a United States revenue cutter, the Dallas, will keep the course clear. There was a wind from the southeast at 11 o'clock blowing about four miles an hour.

After a conference the officials decided to send the yachts three times over a four-mile triangular course, the first leg being a beat to windward, and the other two legs broad reaches. Five minutes after this announcement was made a gun was fired and the little skimming dishes left for the starting line, about three miles down the sound south of Black Rock.

The judges for the trials are Louis V. Clark, of the Yacht Racing association of Massachusetts; Charles E. Tower, of the Yacht Racing association of Long Island sound, and Frank B. Jones, of the Indian Head Yacht club.

There was a good deal of delay in preparing for the start, and it was not until a few minutes before noon, the appointed hour for beginning the race, that the official boat left to set buoys for the course.

The preparatory gun was fired at 1:24. When the starting gun was fired at 1:29, half of the yachts crossed the line in the following order:

Nutmeg, Crusader, Seeress, Monsoon, Frontenac, Massassoit, Fillbuster, Tecumseh. The wind was blowing about three miles an hour as they began the beat to windward.

After crossing the line the Nutmeg and the Crusader kept well together in the lead. The four following boats were bunched and the last two were well behind.

After ten minutes' sailing the Crusader snatched the lead from the Nutmeg.

The Nutmeg turned the first mark, leading the Crusader by three-quarters of a minute. Nutmeg's time was 21 minutes, as taken from the shore. The other racers were well astern when the two leaders rounded.

After turning the first mark, the Tecumseh, which was the last boat to cross the line at the start, went out in search of a breeze. She got it ahead of the others, and on the final reach to the second mark ran away and rounded the second mark ahead of all others. Nutmeg second, about six minutes behind. The first race was finished at 2:41. Crusader was third, Massassoit fourth, Frontenac fifth.

DEATH LIST.

Jeffersonville, Ind., June 30.—Magistrate John Hause, who for many years was one of the most unique characters in Southern Indiana is dead. He was 65 years old and during the ten years in which he held the office of magistrate in Jeffersonville he is said to have married 600 couples, the majority of whom were elopers.

St. Paul, June 30.—A special to the Dispatch from New Richmond, Wis., says: Telegrams received here yesterday announced the death of Andrew J. Rullen at Joliet, Ill., on Saturday. He was a prominent business man, being a member of the firm of Rullen Bros. & McNaulty. He was also a prominent Woodman.

Baltimore, June 30.—William S. Young, for many years a leading grain merchant in Baltimore, died today from paralysis.

VESSEL REPORTED LOST.

Ashtabula, Ohio, June 30.—An unknown vessel is reported to have foundered off this port during the fierce storm of Sunday night. So far as can be learned, no wreckage has come ashore.

TREATY RATIFIED.

Washington, June 30.—In executive session today the senate ratified the treaty with Great Britain, permitting the government of Zanzibar to collect a duty of 10 per cent ad valorem on articles imported to the country. The consent of the United States to this arrangement was necessary.

EXPERT CURTIS

Takes the Stand Again In the Celebrated Mueller Case.

Gives More Testimony Questioning Genuineness of Deed.

Dr. Boyer Tells the Condition of Disinterred Remains.

More expert testimony was taken in the Mueller case in district court today. Professor Curtis, who was called by the defendant Kathrina Mueller, to give expert opinion on the alleged signature of Johann Mueller to the Schweitzer deed, was the first witness. He was asked to compare the signatures of Johann Mueller on two options with the signature on the Schweitzer deed. He held that the signatures on the options differed from that on the Schweitzer deed, and went into a technical explanation as to his reasons.

Attorney Knowles, for some of the heirs, moved that all the testimony of Professor Curtis be stricken out, on the ground that the witness had not qualified himself to be competent to give expert testimony, but the motion was denied.

Dr. Boyer, who had charge of the disinterment of the alleged remains of Johann Mueller at the Old Superior cemetery in December, 1900, for the widow, and who made an examination of the remains, was on the stand the greater part of the morning.

According to the doctor's testimony, the examination was a very grewsome affair, but was witnessed by Mrs. Mueller as well as a number of other persons. In the main, Dr. Boyer's testimony was favorable to the defense in that his descriptions tallied quite closely with the appearance of Johann Mueller as shown in the admitted photograph.

The counsel for the plaintiff and for the heirs asked that the doctor's testimony be disqualified on the ground that it was not proved that the remains were those of Mueller, that Undertaker A. P. LeSage, of West Superior, in his deposition, said that he was not positive that Mueller's grave was opened, but this was denied.

A striking feature of Dr. Boyer's testimony was that relating to the remarkable preservation of the portions of the face and of the eyes of the remains. Dr. Boyer said that his first examination of the eyes showed that they still retained their color which was a light blue. He said that this was something very unusual, that the color goes out of the eyes after death, in a few days. Other parts of the body were badly decomposed. Witness said the mustache on the remains was distinctly of a dark color.

Counsel for the defense attempted to have Dr. Bower draw comparisons or note resemblances between the head of the remains, as he found it, and the head of Rudolph Mueller, one of the sons, but on motion of the plaintiff and of the counsel for the heirs, this was denied. Attorney Knowles thought the counsel for the plaintiff had no right to draw any comparisons unless the skull of the alleged Johann Mueller was produced in court, it being in the possession of the defense.

Run Over By Runaway.

Dr. F. N. Phelan's horse became frightened when standing on Fourth street near Seventh avenue west today, tore the bridle off and ran east between Second and Third avenue west he struck Helen Grisell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Grisell, of 225 Mesaba avenue, and about 15 years ago. She was knocked down and the buggy ran over her hip and knee. She was badly bruised and cut and was removed to her home in the ambulance. The horse stripped himself of buggy and harness and ran to the barn.

RELIC OF HUDSON.

A Message Sent Out In a Bottle Found.

Alpena, Mich., June 30.—Tom Garrity, keeper of the Presque Isle lighthouse, picked up a sealed bottle Saturday, containing a note as follows:

"Steamer Hudson, off Keeweenaw Point rolling like a ball and all hands ready to give up the ghost. AN OILER."

The paper had turned yellow and the writing is in pencil. The Hudson was lost last fall in Lake Superior, with all hands. The note in the bottle is regarded as genuine.

ASPHALT TROUBLES.

Washington, June 30.—Acting Secretary of State Hill was in consultation with the president for some time today regarding the rival asphalt claims in Venezuela. As a result it may be stated that the president had decided to protect the present occupants of the asphalt property, the National Asphalt company, from dispossession until the decision of the supreme court of Venezuela has been rendered and reviewed by the United States.

RAIN AT CLEVELAND.

Cleveland, June 30.—Since Saturday morning 2.48 inches of rain have fallen in thi scity. All rainfall records for the month of June in this city have been broken, the total precipitation thus far having been 9.66 inches. The damage wrought by the present storm has been heavy. Reports indicate that the continued wet weather is resulting disastrously to corn and potatoes. Wheat, it is said, has not been materially affected.

CONGRESS MAY CLOSE

Its Present Session On Tuesday Afternoon, July First.

Resolutions To That Effect All Ready To Present.

House Accepts Senate Amendment on Buffalo Exposition.

Washington, June 30.—It is understood that the resolution for the adjournment of congress has been drawn in authoritative quarters and fixed at 2 p. m. tomorrow, July 1, as the hour for final adjournment. It has not been introduced, but is held for prompt introduction if the present indications of dispatching work are realized, the navy appropriation and Philippine bills being the doubtful quantities.

IN THE HOUSE.

Washington, June 30.—The house met at 11 o'clock today. Mr. Payne, the majority leader, asked unanimous consent that the Hepburn rule requiring the printing of conference reports in the Record before consideration should be suspended for the remainder of the session. To this Mr. Richardson, minority leader, objected.

Mr. Cannon (Ill.), chairman of the appropriations committee, called up the conference report on the general deficiency appropriation bill. The report left in dispute items aggregating 1,965,000 including the appropriations for the Buffalo and Charleston expositions and $1,000,000 for settlement of Hawaiian claims. The report was adopted.

Mr. Cannon moved that the house ask for a further conference.

Mr. Alexander (N. Y.) asked for a separate vote on the appropriation for $500,000 for the Buffalo exposition, Mr. Finley (S. C.) for one on the appropriation of $100,000 for the Charleston exposition; Mr. Burton (O.) upon the appropriation of $25,000 for the improvement of the Ohio river from Cairo to Mound City, and Mr. Cannon himself upon the appropriation of $1,000,000 for the payment of Hawaiian claims.

Mr. Alexander's motion to concur in the Buffalo exposition amendment was carried, 118 to 101.

By 71 to 118 the house refused to concur in the senate appropriation for the Charleston exposition.

A motion to concur in the senate appropriation of $1,000,000 added to the deficiency bill for payment for property destroyed in Hawaii on account of bubonic plague was lost, 22 to 168.

IN THE SENATE.

Washington, June 30.—When the senate convened today Mr. Gallinger (N. H.), chairman of the committee on pensions, made a brief statement of the work done by the pensions committee during the present session. It showed that the bills relating to pensions introduced in the house aggregated 7518; while the number introduced in the senate was 2552. The total number passed by both the house and senate was 1151.

A resolution offered by Mr. Morgan calling on the secretary of state for a statement of the expenditures of the isthmian canal commission was adopted. The senate insisted on its amendments to the naval appropriation bill and the following conferees were named: Mesars. Hale, Perkins and Tillman.

The following bills were passed: To prohibit the killing or taking of seals, porpoises, whales or marine animals or fish of any kind in the waters of the United States by means of explosive materials; to extend the time for the construction of a bridge across the Corpus Christi channel, Texas, by the Arkansas Harbor Terminal Railway company; to establish regulations in the District of Columbia during the national encampment of the G. A. R. in October, 1902; to authorize the director of the census to compile statistics relating to irrigation; relating to the transportation of dutiable merchandise at sub ports of Tacoma and Seattle, Washington.

The Elkins' Cuban resolution was referred to the committee on Cuban affairs. A bill was passed to give Rear Admiral Schley the pay of a rear admiral on the active list instead of a retired rear admiral's pay.

HIS TROUBLE WAS MONEY

"My brother and I were buying cattle in the Judith basin about thirteen years ago," said Jack Harris, of Fort Benton, recently, to the Anaconda Standard, "and as the farmers of that section were partly Missourians and had to be 'showed' and partly because they had been victimized so often they refused to take checks. As a result we had to carry our money in ten and twenty-dollar bills. We started out with $15,000 in cash in a sadle bag hung over the horn of my brother's saddle. Nothing ever worried my brother, but I was a nervous fellow, and felt that all I had in the world was in that saddle bag, and I ought to lie awake nights to watch it.

"I remember one night we camped in a deserted cabin in the mountains, and my brother hung the bag up on a big wooden peg over the fireplace.

"The next morning the horses had broken picket and were gone. I told my brother to watch the money and I would go out and trail down the horses. Well, I walked over one hill and then another and another, and after several hours I saw them away over on a distant prairie. It was afternoon when I overtook them and started back with them. Five or six miles from camp I met my brother, who had started out to find me. I thought of the money the first thing, and asked him what he did with it, before he left. 'Oh, nothing,' he replied. 'I left it on the peg.' Now, remember that there are all kinds of men in the cattle business. It seemed like a thousand miles back to the cabin, and when I reached there I was almost afraid to go in for fear of not finding the bags. But sure enough there they were, and all of my worry was for nothing.

"But this was only the beginning of my troubles. My brother and I divided and I took about $10,000 with me. The first day after I left my brother out on the prairie I saw a runaway horse attached to a light buggy. A man in the buggy was so frightened that he lost his nerve and jumped. His head struck a rock and he was unconscious when I found him. I was trying to bring him back to life when I noticed two other men coming back with the buggy. One of these happened to be the constable, and he was exceedingly officious. He asked me a great many questions, and I saw that they suspected that I was guilty of foul play in some way or other. The victim of the runaway was a stranger to them, and they thought I had robbed him. As bad luck would have it they asked me what I had in my possession to establish my identity and also asked me what I had in my saddle bags. When I showed them the money, then that did settle it. They knew that I had robbed him. The constable put hand out toward the bag to take the money, and I took him by the collar and told him that if he wanted to live a few more minutes he must keep his hands off from me and my property. I agreed to go to the next town and wait developments, but I wouldn't stand any monkey work. We were all ready to start when the man came to, and explained himself. We all went to town together, and while there I met a man that I knew in Benton, and then we all shook hands and they advised me not to carry so much money, and saw me off.

"But that is not all by any means. On the way back we had a big herd of cattle to cross at the ford of the Missouri, where Great Falls now stands. That was the best ford for hundreds of miles, and the only one that was passable at that time of the year. My brother had all that was left of the money, about a thousand dollars in ten-dollar bills, in the saddle pockets, and when about half way across his horse stepped on a slippery rock and down they both went under the water. The saddle bag slipped off and went whirling merrily down the stream. My brother freed himself from the horse and started after the bags. I rode along on the banks, expecting to see my brother drown or give up the chase, but he stayed with it, and in less than a quarter of a mile he swam ashore with it in his teeth.

"Of course, the hundred bills were soaked with the water and when we took them out they looked like a chunk of green pulp. It was a bright, warm day in July, and not a breath of air was stirring. We camped for noon on the bottom there where Great Falls is now, and my brother took the bills and spread them along on the grass in the sun to dry. We had picked up two cowboys with the cattle. Well, you might not believe it, but a thousand dollars in ten-dollar bills make quite a showing when they are spread out on the prairie. They soon dried in the sun, and we expected to gather them up as soon as we finished dinner. While we were eating what did a whirlwind do—they are as common in Montana at that time of the year—but sweep along and pick up every bill in the lot up and whirl them sky high in all directions. We joined hands and walked four abreast along the bottom for several hours, and found all but four or five bills, but it was enough for me, and I didn't breath quite easy until we had put what money we had left in the bank. It may be that some one at Great Falls will find one of these old bills some day. However, I suppose by this time the rains and suns of fifteen years or more have left nothing much but a piece of moldy pulp."

Amendment of Articles of Association

—OF—

OLEAN LAND COMPANY.

It is hereby certified that at the regular annual meeting of the stockholders of the Olean Land Company held at the office of said company in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the second day of June, A. D. 1902, at which were present in person or represented by duly executed proxies, the holders of more than two-thirds of the capital stock of said company, it was duly and unanimously

Resolved as follows: "That article third and article seventh of the articles of incorporation of the Olean Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00), of which amount one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) having been heretofore paid in, the remainder thereof, to-wit: Fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) shall be paid in at not less than par and at such time or times and in such manner as the Board of Directors may require.

Seventh—The number and amount of shares in the capital stock of said corporation shall be two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each."

It is further certified, that at a regular meeting of the directors of said corporation, held at the office of said company in the City of Duluth, in the State of Minnesota on the second day of June, 1902, subsequent to the aforesaid action of the stockholders of said corporation, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, viz:

"That article third and article seventh of the articles of incorporation of the Olean Land Company be amended so as to read as follows respectively:

Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00) of which amount one hundred and fifty thousand dollars ($150,000.00) having been heretofore paid in, the remainder thereof, to-wit: fifty thousand dollars ($50,000.00) shall be paid in at not less than par and at such time or times and in such manner as the board of directors may require.

Seventh—The number and amount of shares in the capital stock of said corporation shall be two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars ($100.00) each.

In witness whereof said Olean Land Company has caused these presents to be subscribed by its president and its secretary and has caused its corporate seal to be hereby affixed this second day of June, A. D. 1902.

Amendment of Articles of Incorporation

—OF—

The Guarantee Land Co.

It is hereby certified, That at the regular meeting of the stockholders of the Guarantee Land Company, held at the office of said company in the city of Duluth, in the State of Minnesota, on the 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902, at which were present in person, or represented by duly executed proxy, the holders of more than two-thirds of the capital stock of said company, it was duly and unanimously resolved as follows:

"That the capital stock of this company be reduced from two hundred thousand dollars, being two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, to forty thousand dollars, consisting of four hundred (400) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and that Article III and Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of the Guarantee Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

"Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be forty thousand dollars instead of two hundred thousand dollars, to which amount the capital stock is hereby reduced, the whole amount thereof having been heretofore paid in.

"Seventh—That the number and amount of shares of the capital stock of said corporation shall be 400 shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each."

It is further certified, That at a regular meeting of the directors of said corporation, held at the office of said company, in the city of Duluth, in the state of Minnesota, on the 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902, and subsequent to the aforesaid action of the stockholders of said corporation, the following resolution was unanimously adopted, viz:

"That the capital stock of this company be reduced from two hundred thousand dollars, being two thousand (2000) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, to forty thousand dollars, consisting of four hundred (400) shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each, and that Article III and Article VII of the Articles of Incorporation of the Guarantee Land Company be amended so as to read as follows, respectively:

"Third—The amount of the capital stock of said corporation shall be forty thousand dollars instead of two hundred thousand dollars, to which amount the capital stock is hereby reduced, the whole amount thereof having been heretofore paid in.

"Seventh—That the number and amount of shares of the capital stock of said corporation shall be 400 shares of the par value of one hundred dollars each."

In witness whereof, the Guarantee Land Company has caused these presents to be subscribed and sworn to by its president, and its secretary, and has caused its corporate seal to be hereto affixed this 2nd day of June, A. D. 1902.

FREE HOMES

Is not what I advertise, but I have been authorized by an outside banking company, who owns about twenty-five buildings on Duluth Heights, to sell a limited number, at such prices and terms as will be within the reach of any one wanting to secure a comfortable home.

To save space, as an example, I will give the price and terms of one house, as follows:

A five-room cottage, excellently laid out, well built, lot on improved street and all improvements paid for, will go at this sale for $450—$50 cash, balance $10 per month at 6 per cent interest. A further reduction of 5 to 10 per cent will be allowed to those who can pay cash. Look up this property and you will be convinced. A more excellent opportunity to obtain a good home cheap or invest money for speculation cannot be had in Duluth.
